THE FORUM

Editor, Plainfield Daily Press.

It looks to me as a misfortune to Plainfield when I read in your editorial of today that you are in favor of increasing facilities for the sale of intoxicating drinks in this city, even though it be "another wholesale license," which you say "cannot do any great harm in this city."

I have long looked upon The Daily Press of Plainfield as a leader in the moral elevation of our people, and for that reason I all the more regret to find you, this time, on the wrong side of the question under consideration, because many people will take it for granted that your statement that another saloon, wholesale, "cannot do any great harm in this city," is true, or you would not have said so. I will not prolong this letter further than to ask you if in your experience you have found a saloon, wholesale, or retail, to be a blessing to either city, or people, who support such places.

J. W. HARRISON.

January 13, 1915.

Editor, Plainfield Daily Press.

I was surprised to see in your editorial columns on January 11, an exceedingly inaccurate statement as to the conditions under which women voted in New Jersey from 1776 to 1807, and the way in which they were disfranchised in 1807. Gordon's History is considered entirely unreliable by everyone familiar with the early history of our State, and is never quoted as an authority by people who have made a study of that history. You uote it as saying that in an election of 1807, "by a construction given to the State constitution, women were suffered to vote, and they seem to have been so delighted with this privilege of exercising their wills that they were unwilling to circumscribe it within the legal limit, many ladies voting, we are told, seven or eight times under various disguises."

The facts as shown by the Legislative records at Trenton and various original documents in the possession of the N. J. Historical Society, all of which can be seen by anyone interested in the matter, are as follows:

The first constitution of New Jersey made no distinction as to sex when stating the qualifications for voting. It conferred the franchise upon "All inhabitants of this Colony of full age, who are worth fifty pounds and have resided in the county in which they claim a vote for 12 months immediately preceding the election." As the laws of that day were founded on the English common law, under which a married woman could not hold property (anything of which she was possessed at the time she married, or which was subsequently left to her, automatically becoming the property of her husband, and a wife was as much her husband's chattel as his horse or cow) only single women or widows who owned two hundred and fifty dollars' worth of property could vote, and the number of these was not large. In 1790 the Legislature was asked to construe the election law and the matter was referred to a special committee, of which Joseph Cooper, of Camden, was a member. He was a prominent Friend who had rendered many services to the State, and was a strong believer in equal political rights for men and women, and perhaps it was through his influence that the committee reported in favor of construing the constitution of 1776 to mean that women had the right to vote. In 1792, however, the constitution was revised and the franchise was limited to "all free inhabitants of the State," and says that no one shall vote except in the township or precinct in which he or she actually resides."

The records of the Historical Society state that a number of women voted in Elizabeth in 1797, but that many people thought it a discreditable thing for them to do (naturally enough when woman suffrage was really the untried experiment which the antis would have us think it today, when over four million women in twelve States can vote for President, and some of them have been voting for periods ranging from 22 to 45 years). However, the record continues, "In the Presidential election of 1800 (Jefferson and Adams) females voted very generally throughout the State, and such continued to be the practice until the passage of the law excluding them from the polls. At first the law was construed to mean only single females, but gradually the construction was made broader and was made to include females eighteen years old, married or single, and even women of color. At a contested election in Hunterdon county in 1802 the votes of two or three colored women actually elected a member of the Legislature."

You will notice that for a number of years women "voted quite generally," and there is no instance on record of their having cheated in any way.

I know an old Quaker lady in Perth Amboy who says her great-aunt went to the polls as religiously as she went to Meeting for a number of years, and considered one act almost as important as the other.

In 1806 a new court house and jail were to be erected in Essex county and a special election was authorized by the Legislature in an act approved November 5, 1806, to decide whether these buildings should be located in Newark or Elizabeth. The election was held in February, 1807, and resulted in Newark's losing the court house. The Newark papers of that day declared that frauds were practiced in the election, claiming that many women voted more than once and also that many men, after having voted once, donned their wives' clothing and repeated the act. The next Legislature set aside the election on these grounds, repealed the act under which it had been held and thus left the court house and jail to be erected in Newark,—in other words, when Newark found she could not get the buildings through the votes of the people, she used her influence at Trenton (which then, as now, was considerable) to have the election set aside. To justify its action, the Legislature made scapegoats of the women and the negro men, disfranchising both by an enactment approved November 16, 1807, which limited the vote to "Free White males worth fifty pounds proclamation money, clear estate." One authority states that this was really done because the women voted always for the conservative party and were afraid of the influence which certain French atheistic writers were supposed to have upon Thomas Jefferson and the leaders of his party.

In 1844 a new constitution was adopted which allowed all white men to vote and removed the property qualification.

The action of the Legislature in disfranchising women was as illegal as an enactment by the present Legislature giving them the vote would be considered. I am sure you will be willing to admit also that "repeating" has not become a lost art in New Jersey since 1807.

PURCHASE LAND AT A SHERIFF'S SALE FOR $1,000

Elizabeth, Jan. 14.—Hugh H. Kendal and Wilbur H. Maltby, as complainants, were the purchasers yesterday at a sheriff's sale of a plot of land in Kensington avenue, Plainfield, in which Jeanette and George Wiegand were defendants. The price was $1,000.

Howard W. Washburn purchased for $20,000 the plant and fixtures of the Strang Gas and Electric Car Company at Garwood, he being complainant.

OUSTED CONSTABLES GIVEN HEARING BY COMMISSIONERS

Elizabeth, Jan. 14.—Edward H. Sherwood and John C. Blore, constables ousted by Sheriff George C. Otto shortly before the Civil Service rules became operative in Union county, were given a hearing yesterday afternoon, at the courthouse by Civil Service Commissioners Fordyce and Wright on their appeals to be reinstated. Both testified that they were well physically, able to perform their duties, and that it was not true they were too old, as the Sheriff charged. Politics was responsible for their dismissal, they said.

County Clerk James C. Calvert, Sheriff Otto and Judge James C. Connolly testified that they were no longer able to perform their duties properly. Blore said he would invoke the aid of Veterans' Act. Decision was reserved.

HEAVY VOTE AT ASBURY PARK, HETRICK SECURES MAJORITY

Asbury Park, Jan. 14.—Former Sheriff Clarence E. F. Hetrick, William C. Burroughs, formerly for many years city clerk; Comptroller Martin L. Bamman, Howard D. Leroy, a former county commissioner, and George W. Pittenger, a member of the Board of Education, were elected Asbury Park's first commissioners from a field of fifty-seven candidates. Mr. Hetrick was the only candidate to receive a majority. His first, second and third choice votes totaled 1,060; 2,007 of the 2,087 ballots cast were valid. Mr. Hetrick's total vote was 1,091. Mr. Pittenger, with 833 votes, the low man, won over Dr. Thomas H. Pratt, his nearest competitor, by eighteen votes.

The vote was the most remarkable in the history of the city. With a northeaster raging continuing without letup from dawn on through Tuesday night, politicians predicted that not more than 1,500 votes would be cast.

As it was, more than 100 men in the Third district of the First ward arrived seconds too late to be admitted to the polling place.

The commissioners will take office next Tuesday, and it is expected that Mr. Hetrick will be made Mayor. Mr. Burroughs is slated as the director of revenue and finance.

A New Talking Machine The Perfect Phonograph

The Aeolian Company Now Manufacturing a Wonderful Instrument Called the VOCALIAN.

Any instrument introduced by the Aeolian Company, let alone manufactured by it, would be well launched on the road to success, for this company holds a very prominent place in the music world. An exhaustive study of the manufacture of phonographs, taking into consideration the development of every instrument on the market, has resultd in the VOCALIAN.

A great musician said the other day upon hearing a record on this wonderful machine, "It is such a phonograph as one would expect the Aeolian Company to produce." Having heard several musical friends praise it generously, I was curious to judge for myself so that I might describe it in my own way to my suburban readers, for many of them are doubtless contemplating such a luxury, and perhaps it would be well to have the newest and something different from that owned by one's nighbors.

In the first place the VOCALIAN is finished in the richest way possible. In every instance is the case an improvement on those at present on the market. It was designed for new phonographic results, and it gives them. The tone is remarkably perfect in timbre and volume, the human voice is reproduced in all its depth and beauty, while violin and cello music has the rich wood quality which is the soul of these instruments. Fundamental tones of orchestras or band seem to be perfectly balanced so that the general effect registers on the ear perfectly, just as if one were at a band concert. All this, I am told, is due to the perfected sound-box and the Symphonetic Horn. The latter is composed of wood sounding-boards under tension, on the theory of a piano's sounding-board; these rest on a metal composition horn of entirely original design, thus tones of varying timbre are amplified with striking uniformity.

One is surprised at the lack of scratching or nasal tones which are usually associated with the ordinary phonographs. But the newest feature, quite revolutionary, is the wonderful device called the GRADUOLA, the operating end of which is attached to a long cord which pulls out of the instrument so that one may control the volume while sitting among one's guests. The GRADUOLA enables the operator to experience the sensation of actually leading an orchestra or band, or singing with or conducting great artists.

It is an interesting story how this important device happened to come into the hands of the Aeolian Company. In the latter part of 1912 Mr. F. J. Empson, of Sidney, Australia, appeared in London with an invention for controlling phonographic tones. He was greatly disappointed because the English manufacturers did not clamor to buy his patent, and being a very uncommercial man, he did not care to urge them, but bought a return ticket and made preparations to sail for home. Before leaving, he called to say good-bye to an old friend of his who was chairman of the famous old English firm of piano manufacturers, Broadwood & Sons. This gentleman advised him to show his model to the Aeolian Company's London manager, assuring him that it would have the most courteous consideration if nothing else. The result was that the London chief of the Aeolian Company made a deal securing the option on the patents and sent Mr. Empson to the home office in New York, where the obvious value of the invention caused the Aeolian Company to secure exclusive rights for the entire world, while Mr. Empson returned to Australia a wealthy man.

I would advise my friends when in New York to make a point of nearing this very wonderful instrument in any one of the beautiful rooms at Aeolian Hall on 42nd Street where it will doubtless be explained intelligently and courteously. I have mentioned, of course, only the most prominent and obvious features of the Aeolian VOCALIAN, but there are many interesting and important discoveries which have made it the marvel that it is.

This new instrument is to be built in great quantities, and will be marketed through the Aeolian organizations in every town in America, and also abroad. Prices range from $60 to $350.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD COUPLE OBSERVE 50TH ANNIVERSARY

A number of relatives and friends were entertained at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Harris, of South Plainfield, Tuesday evening in honor of the golden wedding anniversary of the hosts. Mr. and Mrs. Harris were the recipients of a number of gifts, including several gold coins. The parlor and dining room were tastefully decorated for the occasion, the color scheme being yellow and white. Mr. J. J. Allen, pastor of the South Plainfield Baptist church, made a few remarks appropriate to the occasion. A collation was served during the evening.

Mrs. Harris was Miss Lidiann Giles before her marriage, being the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nelson M. Giles, of Bound Brook, of which place she was a native. Mr. Harris who has been a farmer all his life, was a native of Mt. Bethel, and is a Civil War veteran.

ANTIS EXPECTED DEFEAT OF SUFFRAGE AMENDMENT

An encouraging and entnusiastic meeting of the Plainfield Branch of the Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage was held in the lecture room of the Plainfield Public Library yesterday, with the president, Mrs. Sherman B. Joost, in the chair. Mrs. Constable Moore gave an interesting report of the meeting of the State board at Trenton on Monday.

There was a lively discussion of ways and means and some important measures were decided upon. The defeat of the National Suffrage amendment was referred to, but as that result was considered a foregone conclusion by the members, the discussion of it did not occupy much time.

Many requests were received for informing literature on the suffrage question. It was announced that such literature could be obtained from Miss Osgood, 17 Myrtle avenue, North Plainfield.

G. A. R. AND WOMEN'S RELIEF CORPS INSTALLS

PLAINFIELDER TO VISIT WAR ZONE

Reginald Rowland Starts Saturday on an Interesting Trip Abroad.

Reginald Rowland, the youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. David H. Rowland, of West Seventh street, will sail at noon Saturday on the Holland-American Line steamer Rotterdam on an eight weeks' trip abroad, which will take him to Coutres, which is near Ypres, where the Germans and Allies are just now struggling for supremacy. Mr. Rowland is to make the trip as a companion to a New York business man whose mission abroad is to see if he cannot resume operations in his factory at Coutres, which was shut down because of the war.

He did not care to go alone and extended an invitation to Mr. Rowland to accompany him. The unusual opportunity was gladly accepted and while abroad the two Americans may have a chance to see some of the fighting between the two big European forces. Naturally the trip will be attended by some danger, but neither Mr. Rowland nor his friend have any doubts but that they will be able to complete their journey.

The first stop will be made in Rotterdam. They will then go to Berlin and thence to Coutres. After completing the mission there the Americans will visit Paris and London before returning home. It is expected that the entire trip will take about eight weeks.

CO. K TAKES PART IN EXCITING WAR GAME

Several of the officers of Company K, with Captain Charles A. Peterson, took part in a war game with the members of Company F, at the Elizabeth Armory, last night. The engagement was preceded by a supper. Captain Peterson was at the head of the Blue army and had as his assistants Lieutenants Arthur Phillips and James B. Conkling, of the local company, and Lieutenants Robbins and Shaw, of Company F.

The Red side was in charge of Captain Harry Warren, of Elizabeth, and his side was detailed to defend a city, while Captain Peterson's men were to play the defensive. After much manoeuvring the Blues captured the city and were considered winners. The judges of the game were two army officers, one of whom was Colonel Styler. The affair was in charge of Major W. B. Martin.

WILL GIVE ILLUSTRATED LECTURE ON MORMONISM

At a meeting of the Y. M. H. A., last night, final arrangements were made for a lecture which will be given under the auspices of that organization at the Lyric Theatre next Sunday night at 8 o'clock. Rabbi Charles J. Freund, of Harrisburg, Pa., will be the speaker and his subject will be "Mormonism from a Jewish Standpoint." His talk will be illustrated with pictures. He will show some interior views of the Mormon church at Salt Lake City, the home of the Mormons. He has secured these plates through the courtesy of the president of the Mormon church.

Rabbi Freund has made a special study of Mormonism and will tell of his travels through Utah, the land of the Mormons. He will also speak on the work of the Jewish farm colony at Clarion, Utah, which was fostered by authority of the National Farm School. His talk includes the subject of irrigation and he shows interesting pictures of modern cities of the West.

The lecture following this will be held February 10, by Henry Hurwitz, chancellor of the Intercollegiate Menorah Association, and his subject will be "Jewish Ideals." All are invited.

EMPLOYED BOYS' CLASS MET FOR ORGANIZATION

The employed boys' class of the Y. M. C. A., met last night in the boys' rooms for supper and had their first opportunity of meeting Mr. Ghaemtzer, the new boys' secretary. The class was formed into two teams, Pittsburgh and St. Louis, Walter Debele being elected captain of the last named while Mat Coon will lead the Pirates. This class is planning to meet every Wednesday night for a social time, which will be in charge of some member of the boy's work committee. The teams were chosen as follows:

St. Louis	Pittsburgh
Debele, Capt.	Coon, Capt.
Dawe	Day
Marsh	C. Velard
Larison	Bohl
Seidel	Braco
Adams	Force
Smith	Walters
VanWinkle	Hafner
M. Velard	Singer
W. Smith	Martial
O'Connor	Rutledge
Ross	Coffey, Gerhold

WILL INSTALL OFFICERS.

Old Glory Council, No. 62, D. of L., will meet Saturday evening at 7:30 o'clock, to install the recently-elected officers, the ritualistic work to be conducted by District Deputy Mrs. Frazee, of Westfield. The nineteenth anniversary of the institution of the lodge will be observed following the formal gathering, when a turkey supper will be served by the good and welfare committee, of which Mrs. Theodore VanPelt is chairman.

BOROUGH BOWLING.

The Winters-Hansen team, of the borough bowling tourney, will play two matches tonight, one with the Menzenbach-McGonagal combination and one with Thorne and Clemons as their opponents.

PLAINFIELD AND NORTH PLAINFIELD GIRLS IN LEAGUE CONTEST IN P. H. S. GYMNASIUM

Interscholastic basketball hostilities, the first of the present season between the Plainfield and North Plainfield High Schools, will be ushered in tomorrow afternoon on the Plainfield High School court when the feminine forces of the two institutions meet. Miss Lillian Spencer, manager of the borough sextet, and Miss Sadie Rothberg, manager of the local team, have completed the necessary detail work for the meeting and all is in readiness for the curtain raiser.

Tomorrow afternoon's fracas will be the initial meeting of Plainfield and North Plainfield athletic forces on the new P. H. S. gymnasium and a record crowd from the respective institutions is expected. The spacious seating capacity of the new court affords the spectators ample opportunity to witness the contest.

All of the regular players who have represented the city and borough schools in previous battles on various courts this year, are available for the initial league match and several extra practices have been indulged in during the week.

A comparison of the two teams records indicates that the locals have a slight edge on their "Canadian" rivals, but the North Plainfield delegation has been known to spring the inevitable with even a big margin of popular favoritism and it would not be a great surprise to all concerned to see them give the red and blue girls a rub.

The two forces will lineup as follows:

Plainfield H. S.	N. Plainfield H. S.
Miss Crane	Miss Burtis (capt.)
forward
Miss Morris	Miss Spence
forward
Miss Rothberg	Miss Douglas center
Miss Palmer	Miss McCulough side center
Miss Good (capt.)	Miss Debel guard
Miss Eaton	Miss Kelle
guard

Referee, McNamee (Plainfield) umpire, Starry (Roselle).

N. P. H. S. TAKES ON NEW RIVAL TOMORROW NIGHT

The North Plainfield High School basketball team will meet the West Orange School aggregation at West Orange, tomorrow night. This is the first time that there has ever been any athletic connections between these two institutions and this game may lead to yearly negotiations between them.

The trip will probably be taken by automobile, the team leaving shortly after the close of the P. H. S.-N. P. H. S. girls' game, which is played in the afternoon. A large number of rooters will accompany the players.

SECOND MATCH OF SERIES AT PARK CLUB TOMORROW

The Elk and Park Club bowling teams will meet for the second time this season on the Park Club alleys, tomorrow night, in the home and home series. The Watchung avenue club will be represented by the Senior team composed of Captain Nash, Campbell, Kiely, Blatz and Vail.

In the first match play between these two clubs, the Elks took the odd roll, while going back to last year the Park Club pinners won the series in two straight matches.

ELKS' HOUSE GAMES.

The second night's play of the week in the Elks' House tourney will be held tomorrow night, when the teams headed by John H. Cose, L. M. Van Buren and Marcus Hoyt meet. All of these teams have lost a pair of games and are without any per cent., so at least two will enter the average list after tomorrow's fray.

PARK CLUB BOWLING.

The weekly competition of the handicap five back tournament at the Park Club will be held tonight.

N. P. H. S. RAN AWAY FROM MORRISTOWN

Soundly Walloped Team That Will Oppose Leal Five Saturday.

In an interesting but unexciting game featured by clean playing, the North Plainfield High School basketball team succeeded in downing the Morristown "Prep" quintet, at that place yesterday afternoon, by the score of 40 to 18. The borough basketeers did some fine shooting and had the game cinched from the start, as they played rings around their opponents, getting a good lead in the opening part of the contest and increasing it as the game went on.

The borough five also exhibited some fine playing in the passing department and had no trouble in keeping the ball in their territory the majority of the time.

Townley was the main scorer for North Plainfield, registering nine goals and six fouls, or a total of 24 points. Conroy was the next high scorer with two field goals in each half. W. Devitalis and Captain Clement played the best games for the losers, Clement doing some fine work at guard and Devitalis scoring six out of the eight points made in the half which he played.

PERSONAL ANIMOSITY CAUSED ADAMS' CHARGES

That their was an ulterior motive for bringing charges of professionalism against Platt Adams, of the New York A. C., the all-around athlete, was brought out in a hearing before the registration committee, at the St. Bartholomew clubhouse last night. After three hours of questioning by the attorneys of both sides, nothing, according to the testimony given, proved definitely that the rings or medals that Adams sold were prizes that he won. But it was clearly pointed out that those making the charges did so because of personal animosity.

On account of the clubhouse having to be closed at 11 o'clock the hearing was adjourned until next Saturday afternoon, the place to be set this afternoon by Jake Stumpf.

"MET" TITLE FOR RAMME.

Finishing with a strong spurt Walter Ramme, of the New York Athletic Club, succeeded in defeating three other clubmates in the 100-yard Metropolitan championship swim in the New York A. C. tank, last night. The event was the third fastest ever swum in the tank, the former German champion crossing the line in 58 3-5 seconds, which was only two seconds behind the record held by Charles M. Daniels.

TIGERS BEAT CLOUMBIA.

BASKETBALL RESULTS AMONG SCHOOLBOYS

Some Dope Upset by Verdicts Handed Down in Mid-week Contests.

SCHOOLBOY BASKETBALL RESULTS YESTERDAY.

North Plainfield H. S., 40; Morristown School, 18 (at Morristown).

Roselle H. S., 29; Newark Normal, 20.

Glen Ridge H. S., 49, Woodbridge H. S., 18.

East Orange H. S., 32; Orange H. S., 28.

St. Benedict "Prep," 44; South Orange H. S., 22.

Kingsley School, 37; Stevens Freshmen, 12.

Mid-week basketball results among the schoolboys created several surprises, a couple of the leading lights of the season being pushed under cover by the so-called minor contenders. North Plainfield sprang the inevitable in putting to rout the speedy Morristown school quintet, an aggregation that has played as a unit for several seasons and has proven a falling stone for the local Leal School five on several occasions. Leals will meet Morristown, Saturday afternoon, at that place.

Roselle picked a soft mark in the Normalites and got a decision. South Orange High School, a team that lost to Leals, took a trimming at the hands of the St. Benedict "Prep" five, of Newark, although "Tom" Fitzsimmons; the star captain of the defeated aggregation, tallied sixteen points from the foul line. Kingsley School, of Essex Fells, played its opening game and returned a victory at the expense of the Stevens' first year athletes.

Warren Townley's point-getting at Morristown stands out as the most brilliant piece of individual play for the week. He tallied more than half of his team's total.

New Brunswick Elks, who are pressing the Paterson bowlers hard for first place in the Elks' League, just failed last night to overtake the leaders. They captured two games out of three at New Brunswick from the Newark champions, but they needed three victories to pass the Silk City pin-knights. There was some good bowling last night. The Newarks, with 942, won the first game by fifty pins. The New Brunswicks came back with 968, showing the way by seventy-nine pins, and a score of 932 gave them the final and deciding game by forty-six pins. Dick Erler and Alec Hinton each tallied 201 for the Newarks. Coyne tallied 216 and 205 for the home team, Harkins was there for 214 and Burton rolled 212.

In a Junior Elks' League bowling match on their own alleys last night, the Elizabeth pin-knights were able to capture two games out of three from the Newark quintet. The Elizabeths are holding first place with a four-game advantage over the Patersons, who are in second place. The Newarks started last night's match in good style with 940, and won by seventy-five pins. They dropped to 845 in the second encounter, however, and were beaten by seventy-six pins. In the final and deciding contest the Elizabeths were there for 906 and showed the way by nineteen pins. Keppler rolled 226 for Newark, and Haggerty was there for 211. Elizabeth bowlers, on their own alleys, captured two games out of three last night, in an Eagles' League match with the Somerville pin-knights. The visitors, with 888, put up a pretty good argument in the first game, losing by eighteen pins, and, when they came back with 919, they showed the way by ninety-one pins. In the final and deciding contest the Elizabeths were there for 880 and this was sufficient to win by thirty-seven pins. Bock did good work for the Elizabeths with tallies of 204 and 203. Rabid fight fans numbering up in the thousands, last night, filled New York's historic sport garden to the rafters and saw Joe Shugrue, of Jersey City, battle through ten hard, gruelling rounds to a popular decision over Leach Cross, the New York dentist. The bout was one of the finest exhibitions of the pugilistic art delivered in the metropolis in many a moon and it teemed with action, sledge-hammer polthogues and scientific jabbing. Shugrue had the better of the milling in seven out of the ten rounds and his advantage of youth and speed had the better of Cross' knowledge of the ring game.

Two knock-downs were scored. In the second Leach sent the Jersey Skeeter to the mat with a vicious right hand cross that took his opponent completely by surprise. Shugrue rose slowly to his feet and during ther emainder of the round battled away in a groggy fashion. In the seventh the New Jersey boxer retaliated with a terrific left hook that lifted his adversary completely off the mat and sent him to the boards with a thud.

Both battlers had their heavy artillery in working order. Their punches had no hobbles or checks and both fighters had the happy faculty of being able to land their blows. Cross essayed to do all the hard leading and Shugrue, by virtue of his finely executed footwork kept his Gotham opponent worried during the entire ten rounds.

JERUSALEM PINNERS AGAIN THE VICTIMS

Orient Five Annexed Three Games on Local Alleys Last Night.

Plainfield bowlers, representatives of the Jerusalem Lodge in the Masonic Bowling League, dropped three games again last night, to the Orient five, of Elizabeth. The match was played on the Second street alleys, and even with the advantage of their home drives, the locals could not keep place with their opponents. These three defeats, with a previous nineteen, and but two games won, gives the Jerusalem team an average of .083.

The Elizabethans won the initial roll by 98 pins, the scores being 797 to 699. Honeyman led off for the locals and made high score for his team, getting a 155, while the visitors made marks of 165, 175 and 174. Both teams fell off slightly in the second roll, Pascoe's 99 pulling the Orient's total down.

The last game was the best rolled of the match, the scores being 869 to 773. Kaimer chalked up a 190 for the visitors, while Honeyman pulled through with 165. Heald, the last man to bowl for Elizabeth, made high score in the last game, getting a 195.

PRINCETON'S HEAD WOULD OUST COACH

In Message Today to Trustees President Hibben Scores Professionalism.

Princeton, Jan. 14—That college athletics be placed on a strictly amateur basis by the elimination of the paid coach was advocated today by President John Grier Hibben in his annual report before the Princeton University board of trustees.

"I hope the time may soon come," said Dr. Hibben, "when the paid coach will disappear. Our athletics, not only in Princeton, but throughout the country are suffering from an over-organized system of coaching. The coach and his ever-increasing number of assistants tend to keep up the gate receipts of intercollegiate contests at an abnormal figure, rendering intercollegate sport an unduly expensive affair."

Dr. Hibben recommends that particularly in football the captain should be the sole responsible person so that "in the critical situations he and his team will rise to the occasion and win or lose with honor." Says President Hiben, "It is quite absurd, when one comes to think of it, that the control of the team in all preliminary games should be in the hands of a body of men who are relegated to the side lines when the play is on. After all it is an undergraduate affair and the game should be planned and played by undergraduates."

Princeton's president concludes "If we can release our undergraduates from the unnatural domination of their sports by graduate coaches and from the confusion of many minds and many voices in the direction of their activities we will simplify the whole athletic situation and liberate intercollegiate sport."

In his statement on the finances of the university, President Hibben announced that the deficit of $34,896 was considerably smaller than in previous years. Last year the deficit was $73,818.

SHOTS AND MISSES

Plainfield High School's upset of the Woodbridge talent appears to have been a veritable earthquake in the Middlesex camp. Right on top of the drubbing administered by the locals comes the sting of defeat dealt out by the Glen Ridge boys.

From all accounts we have been led to believe that the Woodbridge athletes are hard to please. They put up a kick on account of their own coach's refereeing in the N. P. H. S. contest at Saengerbund and notified him that he was not wanted to officiate in the P. H. S. tilt last Tuesday. Coach Neff, however, exhibited some good sportsmanship by acompanying the team to Plainfield as a rooter and had the pleasure (for it certainly must have been pleasure) of seeing the prodigals soundly spanked. Since Neff was relegated to the sidelines the team has been on the "Fritz" and it is not unlikely that they will come around to him to resume control within the next few days.

Don't miss the opportunity to witness a feminine Interscholastic League match on tap for tomorrow. Incidentally the new P. H. S. gym will be introduced to the interscholastic following.

Columbus Club basketeers are shaking kinks out of rusty limbs in preparation for a belated campaign on the basketball floor. A number of challenges have been received by the management and it is not unlikely that the aggregation will get into the scrimmage within a week or two.

Several Plainfield fight "bugs" were in evidence at the Shugrue-Cross go at Madison Square Garden, last night. Those who attended got their money's worth of real battling.

The Elks' representatives are due to spill the maples on the Park Club drives tomorrow night. Let's hope the boroughites even up the series so that we'll get some of the rubber stuff as a finale.

Coach Jack Fritts' proteges at P. H. S. are now in mid-winter form and several good meets are pending. The leading lights of the field and track sports at the Ninth street institution are primed to take anything that comes their way.

"Jess Willard will never be a champion of big men because he is too big himself," says Joe Choynski, prominent pug of other days who now lives in Pittsburg. He says there never was a cham as big as Willard.

LOCAL RUNNER HAS AUTO TO SET PACE

Plainfield Will Have Delegate in Big Eastern Road Classic.

Plainfield will have a representative in the Evening Mail's annual modified marathon race to be held in the early part of May, according to information handed out by the wiseacres of Melvin's Hot-Stove League. "Clem" Bechtel, erstwhile gridiron warrior in Holy Cross regalia, is the Queen City entry, and the dopesters claim he is due to "bring home the bacon" in the big classic. If training, with all the accessories of an Olympic champion, count for anything, "Clem" ought to be in at the finish.

Rumor of the localite's designs on the laural winning had reached our ears and last night we took a special trip to Melvin's appetite satisfying domicile, where "Becky" has established his training quarters, to lamp the protege with our own little bulbs. Promptly at 11:45 "Clem" blew into the rendezvous clad in a negligee shirt and only the essential body coverings to make him immune from prosecution in the eyes of the law.

"Clem's" advent, accompanied by a blast of January wind, sent a shiver up and down the spines of the Hot-Stove Leaguers, and they all crept closer to the cinders to hear the coming "champ's" version of his own condition. Once inside the training quarters, Bechtel undertook to shed more of his drapery and just as the indoor sportsmen, who were bundled in overcoats and sweaters, had about decided that Bechtel's mid-summer tactics had reached the zenith of their endurance, in walked Joe Parsons and fifteen minutes later Mike Higgins appeared on the scene.

It appears that Parsons, who is Bechtel's trainer, and Higgins started out in automobiles to set pace for the marathoner. After an hour of running Bechtel decided that he would try a little pace setting and swept to the front. The result was that he arrived at the clocking station a quart of an hour ahead of Parsons and a half hour ahead of Higgins. How far he traveled or what delayed Higgins and Parsons is a matter of speculation. At any rate, Tom Muir clocked Bechtel in a time that would make Kolehmainen look sick.

In view of the fact that Muir's word generally goes unquestioned, the Hot-Stove exponents are today collecting all of their loose simoleans to wager on the Plainfield boy's chances of copping the silver mug in the big event. Parsons, the trainer, has been endeavoring to find out how many dollars it takes to make a million and if he is successful by the time the event comes off he will spill the whole pile to the first bookie.

HOCKEY GAME PROBABLE.

Providing that the present weather conditions remain until Saturday afternoon, the Queen City hockey team will meet Marsh' All-Stars on Debele's pond.

The Telephone Girl.

Under the title "An Appreciation From A Great Daily Newspaper," The New York Telephone Review reprints an editorial from the New York Times of December 2, calling attention to the courage displayed by telephone operators in every time of crisis or emergency.

"Disasters by flood, by earthquake, by fire, by war, convulsions of nature and ferocities of man, overturn suddenly the accustomed order, and each individual acts according to what is in him. It is hard to keep your head about you when the foundations are uprooted. * * * But whenever such a disaster is recorded in the newspapers there is always one figure that remains fixed; the same story is always told about one of the characters in it, and it is always a story of coolness in the midst of frenzy, devotion to duty when duties are forgotten with everything else, invariable courage where the courage of other human beings varies very much. A humble figure, not incited by high pecuniary reward or the hope of fame; the figure of the telephone girl."

After describing the heroism of telephone operators in sticking to their posts during the flood at the breaking of the Austin dam, and the 1913 floods in Ohio, the article continues:

"With this long record back of her there is nothing surprising in the story * * * of the telephone girl at Dahlen, or the Russian girl at Novorossysk. The Belgian girl observed the battle going on around her, undisturbed by the danger she was in, and telephoned the officers at the forts 'that they were not properly placing their shells.' Guided by the instructions over the telephone, they changed the direction of the fire and 'regulated it effectively.' She continued to direct the Belgian fire until a German shell destroyed the office in which she was and killed her.

"The Russian girl whose story was published the other day stayed at her post when everybody else had fled and did her work with shells falling all around her. The decoration 'for valor under fire,' which Gen. Babitsch intends to get for her, was never more worthily granted to any soldier. The telephone girl at Novorossysk and the telephone girl at Dahlen kept the traditions established at many a fire and flood. How shall we account for this record without an exception? There is nothing in the telephone girl's training to explain the way in which, at every time of peril, this cool, dauntless little figure appears on the scene, solid as a rock in the midst of chaos."

In the same issue of The Telephone Review, an article describing the resourcefulness and coolness of American operators in emergency brings out the point that helping subscribers in times of crisis is considered a part of the everyday business of the operator. As an example, the case is cited of an Elmira, N. Y., operator who at 3 A. M. received from a rural line the call: "Our house is on fire. Call everybody on the line." The operator rang up all within helping distance, sending them to assist the family in distress. Thus the house was saved, but the operator whose prompt action was the means of saving it regarded the service simply as part of the day's work. She made out the usual traffic memorandum, reporting the call, and when the time came, went home. The incident was closed. She had simply done her duty. Her ticket showed the time she received the call, the telephone number given, the woman's message, the operator's position at the switchboard and her initials. That was the entire report. * * *

No wonder, then, that when the great emergencies come the operators stand firm.

The Human Side of the Telephone.

Among the hills of northern Connecticut, in an old colonial house, once the home of Israel Putnam of Revolutionary fame, occurred a touching little drama in which the telephone is one of the chief actors. The story is told in The New York Telephone Review for December. It is not merely an appealing incident in which a Christmas greeting is conveyed by telephone. It is the true story of a real Christmas blessing which lasted not for the day only, but for all time.

This historic house is now the home of an old lady, her son and daughter. The mother has been an invalid for years and consequently has been unable to see her brother, always particularly dear to her, because the brother, living but forty miles away, is crippled and unable to go about at all.

Thinking aloud, as is the wont of those who must live much in the past, the mother said, one day, to her daughter, Abigail: "I am very much afraid that Brother John and I will never meet again in this world. It makes me very sad, especially around these Christmas times, when I remember the jolly holiday gatherings we used to have and that now we can only write each other. Oh, if I could only hear Brother John's voice again."

Unconscious as the remark had been, it immediately brought to the daughter some realization of what a telephone would mean to her mother. Plans were soon made to instal telephones at both homes so that the brother and sister could talk with each other in spite of their enforced and permanent separation.

The mother was much interested to know a telephone was to be installed and thought it would save her son many trips to town in selling his produce, but had no idea that she would ever use it.

On Christmas morning Abigail said, "Mother, we will move your chair over here near the telephone and see if you can hear anyone talking."

"Oh dear no, child, I never talked into one in my life and I am sure I couldn't," said her mother.

But in a moment a toll line had been connected and "Merry Christmas" came over the wire to the trembling little old lady, in the voice she had so long wanted to hear.

Much is heard of the business advantages of the telephone, but it is to the latent novelist in each of us that the romance of it must appeal—that many dull corners of the earth brightened, the aggregate of the world's happiness appreciably increased.

DAVID S. CARR, OLDEST ODD FELLOW, IS DEAD

David Smith Carr, the oldest living Odd Fellow in this State and a former resident of Newark and of Hackettstown, died yesterday at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Emma Campbell, in Eagle Rock avenue, Roseland. Death was due to a complication of ailments incident to advanced age.

Mr. Carr, who was born June 27, 1819, in Newark, had been in good health until a year ago, when it began to fail. He had lived practically all his life in Newark, moving about twelve years ago to Hackettstown, where he resided until four months ago when he went to live with his daughter in Roseland.

Early in life he learned the trade of a saddler and harness-maker and followed that business until he retired at the age of eigaty. While in Newark he was a member of the North Baptist church and was a charter member of Protection Lodge, I. O. O. F. A few years ago the State organization gave him a medal, because of his length of service in the organization in New Jersey.

Big Athletic Carnival at Madison Sq. Garden To-night

The athletic eyes of the whole country will be focused to-night on Madison Square Garden, when one of the greatest athletic carnivals in the annals of indoor sports will be staged by the Millrose Athletic Association. Champion athletes and prominent A. A. U. officials from all parts of the United States will be on hand. Alfred J. Lill, Jr., president of the A. A. U. is coming down from Boston. The Hub will also be represented by all the star athletes of the Boston A. A. Coach Brown has entered "Tom" Halpin, Dave Caldwell, Fred. Burns, James Power, J. A. High and S. D. Rose.

Philadelphia will be represented officially by Dr. Orton, coach of the University of Pennsylvania, and Peter Carney, the handicapper of the Middle-Atlantic District. Philadelphia is not to be outdone by Boston in the quality of its entries. The great "Ted" Meredith, Olympic record holder for 880 meters and the half-mile, heads its list of stars. Others who will make the trip with him are such prominent fliers as Lippincott, Lockwood, Kaufman, J. J. Gallagher and six others.

Chicago comes in for the greatest amount of interest from local followers of the sport because of the first appearance in the East of J. G. Loomis, of the Chicago A. A., whose wonderful performances at the National championships at Baltimore in capturing three titles were acknowledged as the cleverest athletic feat of 1914. Loomis arrived in New York Monday and immediately got to work in a local armory, putting on the finishing touches of a long period of special training for the four events in which he is entered in the Millrose A. A. games. Loomis says that he is in the best of condition and on his arrival appeared to be little concerned when informed of the great aggregation of stars who will oppose him. He will measure strides in the sprints and hurdles with such men as Alvah Meyer, the indoor record holder for sixty yards; Lippincott and Lockwood, J. J. Eller, who boasts that Loomis will have to make a new record to beat him; J. A. High and Fred Burns, of the Boston A. A.; W. Bursch, of the New York A. C.; Frank Stephenson, C. B. Clark, A. Jones, and a score of others.

In the high jump Loomis will also be opposed by champions—Gene Jennings, the present senior National indoor title holder, and Rodriguez, the junior champion, together with Goegring, of the Mohawk A. C., Davy, of Princeton University, and Al. Crane, of Philadelphia, the Western Conference champion. Six of the men entered in this event are credited with having done over six feet.

In the Millrose 600-invitation, six of the world's fastest middle-distance men will start from scratch. The invited field will be made up of Tom Halpin, "Ted" Meredith, Homer Baker, Dave Caldwell, Win Gough and Hugh Hirschon. This gives all the largest clubs in the East at least one representative in the first attempt to get a leg on the valuable E. H. Posep trophy, which was brought over recently from London, specially for the Millrose games. Everyone of the men entered in this event has some old score to even up and experts look for the greatest "60" that has ever been run in the Garden, with the probability of a new world's record.

The two-mile run for the Rodman Wanamaker trophy, on which both the Long Island A. C. and the Irish-American A. C. have two legs, furnishes the "distance" feature of the all-star program. The recent lightning performances of Mike Devaney have given Hannes Kolehmainen some cause for serious thought about his chances of bringing home the valuable bronze "for keeps" in the Irish-American A. C.'s trophy cabinet. The Long Island A. C. will again be represented by Louis Scott and "Sid" Leslie, last year's winner. Other stars who will have to be reckoned with are Willie Kyronen, the senior and junior five-mile champion; Horton of the New York A. C., the junior two-mile champion, and Lemberg, of the Trinity Club.

The all-star program is headed by the Millrose road race, which starts and ends on the Garden track, the course taking the runners around Central Park. More than 200 harriers will face the starter and receive handicaps from the sturdy Greek, Giankopulos, of the Millrose A. A. Then there is the "thousand" yard run with Abel Kiviat, of the Irish-American A. C., a world's champion, on scratch, and Rose and Power, of the Boston A. A., on the back marks. The great program will be filled in with a shot-put, a one-mile walk, a one-mile club relay and a 2,400-yard relay, in everyone of which National champions are entered.

AN OLD RECIPE TO DARKEN HAIR

Sage Tea and Sulphur Turns Gray, Faded Hair Dark and Glossy.

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray; also ends dandruff, itching scalp and stops falling hair. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome.

Nowadays we simply ask at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy." You will get a large bottle for about 50 cents. Everybody uses this old, famous recipe, because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears and after another application or two your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy and you look years younger.—Adv.

MANY CASES OF RHEUMATISM NOW

Says We Must Keep Feet Dry, Avoid Exposure, and Eat Less Meat.

Stay off the damp ground, avoid exposure, keep feet dry, eat less meat, drink lots of water, and above all take a spoonful of salts to keep down uric acid.

Rheumatism is caused by poisonous toxin, called uric acid, which is generated in the bowels and absorbed into the blood. It is the function of the kidneys to filter this acid from the blood and cast it out in the urine. The pores of the skin are also a means of freeing the blood of this impurity. In damp and chilly, cold weather the skin pores are closed, thus forcing the kidneys to do double work, they become weak and sluggish and fail to eliminate this uric acid which keeps accumulating and circulating through the system, eventually settling in the joints and muscles causing stiffness, soreness and pain called rheumatism.

At the first twinge of rheumatism get from any pharmacy about four ounces of Jad Salts; put a tablespoonful in a glass of water and drink before breakfast each morning for a week. This is said to eliminate uric acid by stimulating the kidneys to normal action, thus ridding the blood of these impurities.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and is used with excellent results by thousand of folks who are subject to rheumatism. Here you have a pleasant, effervescent lithia-water drink which overcomes uric acid and is beneficial to your kidneys as well.

"That's why I like them," Smoke answered. "A system is statistical. When you get the right system you can't lose, and that's the difference between it and a hunch. You never know when the right hunch is going wrong."

"But I know a lot of systems that went wrong, an' I never seen a system win." Shorty paused and sighed. "Look here, Smoke, if you're gettin' cracked on systems this ain't no place for you, an' it's about time we hit the trail again."

At last, after long hours and days spent at watching the table, the night came when Smoke proclaimed that he was ready, and Shorty, glum and pessimistic, accompanied his partner to the Elkhorn. Smoke bought a stack of chips and stationed himself at the gamekeeper's end of the table. Again and again the ball was whirled and the other players won or lost, but Smoke did not venture a chip. Shorty waxed impatient.

"Buck in, buck in!" he urged. "Let's get this funeral over! Got cold feet?"

Smoke shook his head and waited. A dozen plays went by, and then suddenly he placed ten one-dollar chips on "26." The number won, and the keeper paid Smoke $350. A dozen plays went by, twenty plays and thirty, when Smoke placed $10 on "32." Again he received $350.

"It's a hunch," Shorty whispered vociferously in his ear. "Ride it; ride it!"

Half an hour went by, during which Smoke was inactive; then he placed $10 on "34" and won.

"A hunch!" Shorty whispered.

"Nothing of the sort," Smoke whispered back. "It's the system. Isn't she a dandy?"

Smoke now altered his play. He bet more frequently, with single chips scattered here and there, and he lost more often than he won.

"Quit it," Shorty advised. "Cash in. You've rung the bullseye three times, an' you're ahead a thousand. You can't keep it up."

At this moment the ball started whirling, and Smoke dropped ten chips on "26." The ball fell into the slot of "26," and the keeper again paid him $350.

"If you're plumb crazy an' got the immortal cinch bet 'em the limit," Shorty said. "Put down twenty-five next time."

A quarter of an hour passed, during which Smoke won and lost on small scattering bets. Then, with the abruptness that characterized his big betting, he placed $25 on "00," and the keeper paid him $875.

"Wake me up, Smoke; I'm dreamin'," Shorty moaned.

Smoke smiled, consulted his notebook and became absorbed in calculation. He continually drew the notebook from his pocket and from time to time jotted down figures.

A crowd had packed densely around the table, while the players themselves were attempting to cover the same numbers he covered. It was then that a change came over his play. Ten times in succession he placed $10 on "18" and lost. At this stage he was deserted by the hardiest. He changed his number and won another $350. Immediately the players were back with him, deserting again after a series of losing bets.

"Quit it, Smoke; quit it!" Shorty advised. "The longest string of hunches is only so long, an' your string's finished. No more bullseyes for you."

"I'm going to ring her once again before I cash in," Smoke answered.

For a few minutes, with varying luck, he played scattering chips over the table and then dropped $25 on "00."

"I'll take my slip now," he said to the dealer as he won.

"Oh, you don't need to show it to me," Shorty said as they walked to the weigher. "I been keepin' track. You're somethin' like thirty-six hundred to the good. How near am I?"

"Thirty-six sixty," Smoke replied.

"Don't crowd your luck," Shorty pleaded with Smoke the next night in the cabin as he evidenced preparations to return to the Elkhorn. "You played a mighty long string of hunches, but you played it out. If you go back you'll sure drop all your winnin's."

"But I tell you it isn't hunches, Shorty. It's statistics. It's a system. It can't lose."

"System the devil. They ain't no such a thing as system. You got to show me."

"I did show you. Come on with me now, and I'll show you again."

When they entered the Elkhorn all eyes centered on Smoke, and those about the table made way for him as he took up his old place at the keeper's end. His play was quite unlike that of the previous night. In the course of an hour and a half he made only four bets, but each bet was for $25, and each bet won. He cashed in $3,500, and Shorty carried the dust home to the cabin.

"Now's the time to jump the game," Shorty advised as he sat on the edge of his bunk and took off his moccasins. "You're seven thousan' ahead. A man's a fool that'd crowd his luck harder."

"Shorty, a man would be a blithering lunatic if he didn't keep on backing a winning system like mine."

"Smoke, you're a sure bright boy. You know more'n a minute than I could know in forty thousan' years. But I've been around some an' seen a few, an' I tell you straight an' confidential an' all assurin' a system to beat a bankin' game ain't possible."

"But I'm showing you this one. It's a pipe."

"No, you're not, Smoke. It's a pipe dream. I'm asleep. Bimeby I'll wake up an' build the fire an' start breakfast."

The third night of play as Smoke laid his first bet the gamekeeper shoved $15 back to him.

"Ten's all you can play," he said. "The limit's come down."

"Gettin' picayune," Shorty sneered.

"No one has to play at this table that don't want to," the keeper retorted. "And I'm willing to say straight out in meeting that we'd sooner your pardner didn't play at our table."

"Scared of his system, eh?" Shorty challenged as the keeper paid over $350.

Night by night Smoke continued to win. His method of play varied. Expert after expert in the jam about the table scribbled down his bets and numbers in vain attempts to work out his system. They complained of their inability to get a clew to start with and swore that it was pure luck, though the most colossal streak of it they had ever seen.

It was Smoke's varied play that obfuscated them. Sometimes, consulting his notebook or engaging in long calculations, an hour elapsed without his staking a chip. At other times he would win three limit bets and clean up a thousand dollars and odd in five or ten minutes.

At still other times his tactics would be to scatter single chips prodigally and amazingly over the table. This would continue for from ten to thirty minutes of play, when abruptly, as the ball whirled through the last few of its circles, he would play the limit on column, color and number and win all three. Once, to complete confusion in the minds of those that strove to divine his secret, he lost forty straight bets, each at the limit. But each night, play no matter how diversely, Shorty carried home $3,500 for him.

Smoke Became Absorbed In Calculation

"It ain't no system," Shorty expounded at one of their bed going discussions. "I follow you an' follow you, but they ain't no figgerin' it out. You never play twice the same. All you do is pick winners when you want to, an' when you don't want to you just on purpose don't."

"Maybe you're nearer right than you think, Shorty. I've just got to pick losers sometimes. It's part of the system."

"System the devil! I've talked with every gambler in town, an' the last one is agreed they ain't no such thing as system."

"Yet I'm showing them one all the time."

"Buy a paper, mister," he urged.

Daddy's Bedtime Story—The Little Boy and the Coal Baron.

"EVERY one is very much interested in helping to relieve the distress of the poor Belgians," said daddy as the children snuggled down beside him for the evening story.

"When I was in New York on business a few weeks ago I was walking up Fifth avenue just at the twilight hour with a man who had been called a 'coal baron' for years.

"We were admiring the avenue. One of the most beautiful city sights in the world was spreading out before us like a glittering serpent.

"Suddenly a voice shrilled at my elbow: 'Poiper! Buy a poiper, mister! All about the war!' And, turning, I saw a tiny fellow with a pile of papers under his arm looking up expectantly into my face. In another instant I noticed that he was a cripple. He had what is called a 'peg leg' strapped to one side.

"His thin face was weather beaten and lined almost like an old man's, and his poor fingers, poking through his wornout woolen gloves, were red and swollen with the cold. But he had the brightest, bravest, cheeriest eyes I've ever seen. Perhaps it was his beautiful soul shining out through them, because inside, I'm sure, he was not crippled at all.

"'Buy a poiper, mister,' he urged, and Mr. Coal Baron and I each bought one and then passed on into a newly opened shop the purpose of which is to sell donated articles and to add the proceeds to the Belgian relief fund. The coal baron's wife was very much interested in it, and so was the coal baron.

"There were heaps of things for sale. That is where I bought your Christmas toys and mother's embroidered linen tablecloth and napkins. Things were selling like hot cakes for fabulous sums. You see it was just before Christmas, and the rich people were filled with a charitable spirit.

"After awhile we passed out of the warm shop into the brilliant but bleak street. A cold wind was blowing from the sea and came up through the great canyon of the side street like a howling spirit.

"Standing just outside the door stood the crippled newsie, his nose flattened against the window pane. He was tapping his one good foot upon the sidewalk to keep it warm. Beside him stood another newsie.

"'Gee,' said the lame little newsie, 'I wisht my mom wuz a Belgun! We ain't got a spect of coal in the house, and peoples are so busy buyin' things in that store that they fergit to buy my poipers. Poipers, poipers! Wuxtry!'"

"Oh, daddy, what did the coal baron do?" asked Jack and Evelyn.

"What do you suppose?" asked daddy, with a smile.

The Wife's Money

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

"Gertrude, I really am surprised at you," said Mrs. Farley, looking at her daughter over her spectacles.

"Now, mother, listen to the voice of wisdom," said a bright-eyed, wholesome-looking girl, leaning forward in her chair and raising an argumentative finger. "Society may as well wake up to the cold fact that the average man cannot earn enough to support a family, with the present high cost of living, until he is—well, not exactly middle-aged, but approaching that point. This means that young people who love each other must either wait to be married, for weary years, until all the bloom and romance of youth is gone, or else marry and have the wedding bells, succeeded by the howl of the wolf at the door, and in poverty endure the discomforts that take away all happiness. Why not have the girl who is earning her living keep her job and instead of choosing betwen two good things, have both?"

"A woman can't keep a home and work besides. It's impossible," interupted the mother, tossing her head, "and a married woman's place is in her home."

"You said 'keep a home.' If you had said 'keep a house,' I would agree with you. They must dispense with the housekeeping, of course, in most cases, but home-keeping is another matter. If I waited until Giles earns enough to support a family in comfort, unaided, we probably could not be married for seven or eight years. Few men earn a sufficient salary for that before they are thirty nowadays. If I keep my job and we live simply, over half of my earnings can be saved, and in five years or even less we can build up a reserve for emergency, and so three years sooner than by your plan we could begin housekeeping and have our little family. In the meantime we can have five happy years together."

"I still think a man should not marry until he can support a wife," persisted the mother, with a rebellious look in her eye.

"The dearest wish of every woman's heart is to help the man she loves," continued the daughter, with unruffled tone, "and if she can do it better by working outside the home, why in the name of reason should she not do it? Even you make no claim that housework is easier than office work; the wife in an office is just a capable little partner, putting in her part of the money into the domestic firm instead of doing the housework."

"If there is no housekeeping to be done, how do you propose to manage?" asked the mother skeptically.

"We will furnish a cozy apartment and get our breakfasts there. Both of us have lunch downtown now; sometimes we have it together. We could always meet and lunch together if we were married, and at night we could go to dinner somewhere before going home for the evening. Giles pays one-third as much now for a room as an apartment would cost unfurnished."

"Will you get your furniture on the instalment plan?" asked the mother, a touch of scorn in her voice.

"Never! We have enough saved to get the necessaries, and we will add furniture a piece at a time, selecting it carefully so that everything will harmonize, and so string the pleasure out," replied the daughter, appointed in your new-fangled housekeeper brightly.

"Well, it sounds very well as a theory. I hope you will not be disappointed."

AERO DINNER TONIGHT.

New York, Jan. 14—Medals and trophies will be awarded tonight to birdmen of America, by the Aero Club of America, which holds its annual meeting and dinner at the St. Regis. Among the invited guests are Orville Wright, Aleander Graham Bell, Rear Admiral Robert E. Peary, Major General Leonard Wood, the aero-nautical heads of the army and navy, and many sportsmen. The aviators who flew over Vera Cruz during the occupation by American troops will get medals, and the Collier Trophy for the greatest achievement of the past year in American aviation will be awarded by vote. It is expected that the aero men will discuss the proposal that the United States government purchase the Wright patents and encourage the building of airships as an industry and as a defense move.

SELL CLAFLIN ASSETS TODAY.

New York, Jan. 14—By decree of Judge Hand in the United States District Court, the assets of the defunct H. B. Claflin Company are being sold today. The sale is set for noon in the Federal courthouse. The assets include all property, right and interest held by John Claflin in the insolvent company. The Claflin crash created a sensation in the business world last June. The company was the largest merchandising house in America, with 44 millions in assets and 34 millions liabilities. The Claflin concern owned and controlled stores in Brooklyn, New York, Buffalo, Newark, Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Cleveland and other cities. It was said this morning that the chain of stores will remain intact under a new corporation, which will bid heavily today.

PHILA. URGES RAPID TRANSIT.

Philadelphia, Pa., Jan. 14—At a mass meeting to be held in the Academy of Music, tonight, leaders in business, in the professions and in the labor world, will demand that the city government provide a fund of $46,000,000 for rapid transit. The building of subways and elevated lines, with terminals and transfer accommodations, is the plan urged by the business organizations of the city. It is the belief of civic leaders that the time has come when the city must make the improvement and force the transit lines to use up-to-date facilities for transporting the public.

NORTHWEST EDITORS MEET.

Seattle, Wash., Jan. 14—Prominent editors and educators are among the speakers at the third annual Washington Newspaper Institute, which opened today at the State University. Professors who are teaching journalism in various colleges joined with the editors in discussion of the practical workings of journalism. Sessions will be held tomorrow and Saturday.

—The Daily Press can be purchased each night at Mallinson's drug store, East Second street.

DAMES AND DAUGHTERS.

Chicago's municipal market is managed by Miss Kathryn V. Kelley, who has the title of marketmaster.

Miss Catherine Dolan has been sworn in as a member of the bar in Massachusetts, being the fourth in her family to become a lawyer.

Mrs. Katherine Nichols of Cincinnati has invented and patented a telephone device consisting of a double receiving tube which compels the user to speak directly into the transmitter.

Mrs. Fischer, widow of Professor Fischer, has the honor of being the only woman art director of a museum in the world, having succeeded her husband as director of the East Asiatic Art in Cologne, Germany.

Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt befriended a Senegalese infantryman in the course of her Red Cross work in Paris, and when the soldier was leaving the hospital he invited Mrs. Vanderbilt to return with him to Senegal, where she would be made a chieftainess of an African tribe.

The Royal Box.

Princess Margaret, cousin of King Christian of Denmark, has entered the University of Copenhagen.

Dowager Queen Alexandra of England has been compelled to pawn her gold and silver dishes so as to raise money to meet her obligations.

King Ferdinand of Roumania, succeeding the late King Charles, was in 1889 declared prince of Roumania and heir apparent to the throne. Physically he has never been very robust, and the threat of tuberculosis has hung over him for years. He is said to have little taste for soldiering, his mind leaning rather toward science and his education has been along this line. He is described as shy, reserved and unbending.

TO SETTLE SHORTAGE.

Somerville, Jan. 14—An agreement to settle with the bondsmen of former District Court Clerk John D. Quick for $600, has been entered into by the Board of Freeholders of Somerset county. Quick disappeared three months ago and an apparent shortage of $1,300 was found in his accounts, according to the report of District Court Clerk Adams, of Plainfield. About a month ago Quick returned and offered to help straighten things out. A collection of $450 and bills of more than $200 due reduced the deficit to $600, which is to be paid by the bondsmen, James C. Wyckoff, Abram Amerman and George A. Dilts.

MASONS LAY CRONERSTONE.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Jan. 14—One of the most important events in the history of Masonry in Michigan was the laying of the cornerstone of the new Masonic Temple here today, which brought together a notable gathering of high Masons. Thousands of little trowels were sold to raise money to build the new Temple.

HANGING IN GEORGIA.

Pelham, Ga., Jan. 14—Flem Jackson, the negro who shot and killed Deputy Sheriff Will Griner, in November, will be hanged at the county jail here tomorrow. It took a jury 9 minutes to convict him, and the hangman says he will try to beat this low record tomorrow morning.

Household Hints

THINGS WORTH KNOWING

Machine Pincushion—Ribbon about eight inches long, four wide; cut strip of canton flannel very little smaller, fold flannel inside, stitch edges together, or bind with baby ribbon; sew three ties of baby ribbon on each end. Tie around arm of machine to put pins and needles on while using same at machine. "Every Woman, Everywhere," knows how many times she has to pick up pincushion or tray, with scattered pins, while working at a machine.

Use raw turnip for "greasing" pancake griddle. Cut vegetable in two, rub griddle with the raw surface, then bake cakes in usual way. The cakes are beautifully browned and there is no greasy smell or smoke in the house. It also cuts high cost of living.

Never put any kind of linen through the wringer when washing, and see how much easier and nicer it irons.

THE TABLE

Savory Potatoes—Peel and slice sufficient potatoes to make a pint; place in buttered baking dish; pour over them one egg beaten in one-half cup milk, sprinkle with pepper and a little salt, cover and bake 20 minutes; uncover and let brown.

Orange Shortcake—Peel two large oranges, chop fine (remove seeds); add half a peeled lemon and one cup sugar. Spread between layers of shortcake while it is hot. To make shortcake: Sift one quart flour, rub into it three tablespoons of butter, one teaspoon salt, tablespoon of white sugar. Add beaten egg to cup of sour cream, turn into other ingredients. Dissolve teaspoonful of soda in a spoonful water. Mix all together, handling as little as possible. Roll lightly into two round sheets, place on pie tins and bake from 20 to 25 minutes in a quick oven. This crust is delicious for fruit shortcake.

Dutch Apple Cake—Two cups flour, three teaspoons baking powder, one-half teaspoon salt, one-fourth cup sugar, two tablespoons shortening, three-fourths to one cup milk, one egg. Slice apples. Mix and sift dry ingredients. Cut in the shortening. Beat egg well, add the liquid and add to first mixture. Put dough in greased tin, arrange apples on top, pour over sugar and cinnamon mixed together. Bake 30 to 40 minutes in warm oven.

Grape Pie—Line pie pan with good crust, add one cup sugar, four rounding tablespoon flour; mix together, then fill tin with grapes. When about half baked, add one-half cup of sour cream; let bake till it cooks through.

Uncle Sam's Ice Cream—Take one quart milk, one quart cream, two cups sugar and a tiny bit of salt; flavor with vanilla. Freeze it and serve in sherbet glasses topped with nut meats and ornamented with candied cherries cut in bits to form letters "U. S."

Baked Spareribs—Take two spareribs of equal size. Use one small loaf stale white bread, cut off top, crumble up inside and moisten with water; add one pound unstuffed pork sausage, mix well and season with salt and pepper, plenty of thyme, sage or other seasoning. Put the mixture between top and bottom crusts, then put all between the two spareribs and sew with darning needle and twine all around, taking big stitches. Mix equal parts of flour, salt and pepper, sprinkle on both sides of ribs, put a little water in pan and bake a golden brown.

Pork Chops—Put some meat gravy or butter in frying pan, put over fire until very hot, put in chops, cover very tight, let fry until quite brown. Turn fire low, add a little boiling water—just enough to keep from burning—and cover tight again. As Fruit Custard—Children will like this: Make an ordinary cup custard, pour some in molds, then drop in some canned peaches, and more custard and set away to cool; serve with evaporated milk (one part water). Simply fine! Can use cherries, strawberries, etc.; all are nice.

SCOOP, THE CUB REPORTER — PRETTY SOFT—SCOOP'S JOB AS "GENRUL" — BY "HOP"

Warrenville.

The Springdale Ladies' Aid held a donation at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. Howard Toms, last night. About $20 was realized. People were present from Plainfield, Mt. Horeb, Mt. Bethel; Springdale and Warrenville. There were several solos and duets by Mrs. Philip Mundy, Rev. George Bowers, the Misses Anna Conlan, Viola Hauser, Minnie Steffens and Helen Conlan.

The recent rain storm did much damage in this vicinity, blowing the slate roof off the house of Peter Thorp, of Hill Top Farm; blowing the chimney off of Rev. George Bowers' house, on Mountain Boulevard, and several outbuildings, and made several gullies near the new bridges recently built.

A. Becker and Walter Schiven, of Plainfield, visited friends here yesterday.

Peter Thorp has returned to his home at Hill Top Farm after spending several days with friends in Califon.

The Misses Addie and Jennie Anderson, of Bound Brook, have been visiting Miss Gussie Meyer, of Springdale.

Herbert Ortman, of Meyersville, visited friends and relatives here Sunday.

Owen Thorp is entertaining friends from Califin.

George Jennings, of the "Cedars," who has been ill at his home for the past month, is slowly recovering.

On account of the wind storm yesterday the Warren township school wagon that transports the children to High School was unable to make its daily trip. Several of the children drove down and reached school in time for the second period. This is the first time the wagon has not made its regular trip since George Bowers has been driving it.

Miss Myrtle Cooper, of Hill Side Farm, who has been confined to her home by a serious illness, is able to be out again.

Herman Meyers, of Springdale, has been visiting friends at Plainfield.

Arthur Williams, of New York, will spend Sunday with friends here.

Augustus Kirch will spend the week-end with his parents at Plainfield.

TAPS FROM THE GAVEL.

Jerusalem Chapter, No. 24, R. A. M., will install the recently elected officers of the lodge at its meeting tonight.

Grand Master Workman E. E. Bird will pay a fraternal visit to Central Lodge, No 48, A. O. U. W., tonight, when the officers of the lodge will be installed.

The finals in a quoit tournament will be played off tonight, after the session of the Trafalgar Lodge, No. 506, Order Sons of St. George.

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

The second episode in the "Exploits of Elaine" will be shown at Proctor's Theatre, tomorrow afternoon and evening. The first installment of this most fascinating story was shown last Friday and made a big impression upon large audiences. Miss Pearl White, the heroine in "The Perils of Pauline" and Arnold Daley are starring.

The ability of Miss White as a movie actress is well known and she is most charming in her roll of "Elaine."

The story of the "Exploits of Elaine" is being printed in Hearst publications throughout the country and local people may follow the pictures in reading the New York Journal.

If you are a moving picture devotee don't fail to see the initial episodes of this great serial film, as it will be the talk of the town.

REGIMENTAL REVIEW.

Company K will go to Trenton tonight to take part in the regimental review. The boys will assemble at the local armory at 6:46 o'clock. All of the companies of the Second Regiment will take part in the review and the local organization expects to receive the Dungan trophy which is given for figure of merit work.

WEATHER NOTES THIS DATE.

Highest temperature, 46, in 1894; lowest temperature, 10 below zero in 1912; lowest last year 4 below zero; heavy snow, amount 12.6 inches in 1910; days with rain on this date, 9; highest yesterday, 50; lowest this morning, 27.

RESOLUTIONS.

The Board of Managers of the Plainfield Savings Bank, of Plainfield, N. J., have learned with sincere sorrow, of the sudden death of Mr. George F. White, one of their most respected associates, and desire to place upon record their high appreciation of his worth as a man and associate manager.

At a meeting of the Board of Managers of the Plainfield Savings Bank, of Plainfield, held Jan. 13, 1915, the following preamble and resolutions were unanimously adopted:

Whereas, it has pleased our Heavenly Father in all His wise providence, to remove from our number our co-manager and friend, George F. White.

RESOLVED: That while bowing submissively to the wise dispensation of Providence in taking our co-manager and friend away from his family, ourselves, and his many other friends and associates, we desire to express our deep sorrow, that one so highly esteemed should be so suddenly taken from us.

RESOLVED: That we hereby extend to his family our sincerest sympathy for the sorrow they have been called upon to bear in the loss of their loved one.

RESOLVED: That a copy of these resolutions be recorded in full on the minutes, and a copy thereof, attested by the officers, be engrossed and transmitted to his family.

RUSSIAN PEOPLE LIKE PROHIBITION

Miss Janet Richards Says That Stopping Sale of Vodka Pleases Nation.

URGES PEACE MOVE

Lecturer Asks Plainfield Women to Form Branch of Recently Organized National Body, of Which She is One of the Officers.

That the unrestricted sale of liquor is primarily responsible for much of the poverty, child slavery, divorce, crime, insanity and disease in this country, was declared by Miss Janet Richards in her first current history talk of the new year, given yesterday afternoon in the Hartridge Auditorium. The subject was prompted by the prohibition measure which has been so prominent before the House of Representatives at Washington during the last few days. To illustrate the fact that the prevention of the sale of liquor betters a nation, Miss Richards told of the experience of Russia. In 1903 the people of that country had become so depraved as a result of drinking, that the government restricted its sale, and for many years vodka was manufactured and sold by the government. This lasted until the declaration of war in August last, when a decree was issued, prohibiting the sale entirely until October first. The time was then extended, and the authorities have since then received so many urgent requests that the sale of vodka be stopped, that the order has been made permanent.

In Miss Richards' opinion, the war has solidified the Russian people, and increased their love and respect for the Czar, so much so in fact that now he can go about among them practically unguarded, while prior to the declaration of war he was constantly surrounded by a mass of troops.

The proposed prohibition amendment to the Constitution of the United States, which was introduced by Congressman Richmond Pearson Hobson, would be the nineteenth, and under it the sale of liquor would be forbidden, but not the manufacture. Miss Richards gave a list of the fourteen prohibition States in this country, and described how much better are those where it has been enforced for some years, than is the case in license States.

A brief description was given of the passport frauds which have recently been brought to light, and the trouble with England, which called forth the President's note of protest, was then taken up. She said that the question as to what constitutes contraband of war is complicated, but she was hopeful that everything will turn out all right in the end, although the matter was more serious than that of the passports.

President Wilson's speech at Indianapolis was declared to be a "line up" for 1916. This was one of the topics briefly taken up in the last few minutes of Miss Richards' talk. The others were the suffrage debate and the formation of a women's peace organization. The suffrage debate, in her opinion, was one to disgust, and most undignified. Only a few of the Senators made dignified speeches, and most of them took refuge in the argument in favor of State's rights.

Miss Richards was most enthusiastic about the world peace movement for women which was launched at a meeting of over seven hundred women at Washington. Jane Addams was selected as president of the organization, and she urged her hearers to organize a Plainfield branch of the movement. Miss Richards is chairman of the finance committee of the organization. She said that they did not expect to do anything in this war, but hoped to prevent any more great wars. In conclusion she read two poems by William Watson, the English poet, and William J. Lampton, the American humorist, the latter being a reply to the Watson poem

MISSIONARY CONFERENCE.

The New Jersey A. M. E. Women's Home and Foreign Missionary Society held an all-day session at the Mt. Olive Baptist church, yesterday. Mrs. William Henderson, the president, directed the program, which was largely routine and consisted of conference and prayer. Rev. Mr. Williams, of Bloomfield, preached the sermon last night.

BIBLE CLASS FOR WOMEN.

A Bible class for women is to be organized at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church in connection with the Sunday-school, at 12 o'clock Sunday noon. The members of the new organization will meet in the body of the church, and will be conducted by Miss Caroline Palmer, of the Bible Teachers' Training School, of New York city.

COL. HARDY WILL CASE IS SETTLED

Attorney for the Contesting Parties Said to Have Reached An Agreement.

FURTHER HEARINGS OFF

The Suit Involved the Disposition of $350,000 Worth of Securities and Bonds Which Hardy Sought to Control.

Newark, Jan. 15.—The suit of A. V. Parsell against Colonel John H. Hardy, of Plainfield, in which the latter has been trying to recover $350,000 worth of securities which he claimed were the property of his mother, the late wife of Col. Hardy, has been brought to a sudden termination, according to a well authenticated report. The fact that the case had been or was about to be settled was learned today, when it became known that the hearing set down for January 18-19 before Vice Chancellor Howell was off the calendar.

Inquiry among the counsel engaged in the case brought forth the information that the matter was in process of settlement although it was found impossible to learn the terms. The case has been in the courts a long time and there has been a brilliant array of counsel on both sides. Just what led to the settlement is not known, but it is understood that the attorneys got together and finally agreed to satisfactory terms.

Col. Hardy and his wife resided in and near this city, where they were well-known. Mrs. Hardy was many years older than her husband. According to testimony brought out in previous hearings of the matter in dispute there were $350,000 worth of securities owned jointly by the colonel and his wife. These are in the custody of The Plainfield Trust Company.

Mr. Parsell has been trying to get possession of the securities, which during the life-time of Col. Hardy and his wife were said to have been held jointly by them. Pending the settlement of the suit, The Plainfield Trust Company was appointed custodian of the securities. Previous hearings brought out the fact that the Colonel and his wife divided the income, although for a time they were living apart.

The securities consisted of stocks in the Home Insurance Company, Pullman Company and Adams Express Company and various bonds. Mr. Parsell claimed these securities on the ground that they were left to him by his mother, but Col. Hardy has been contesting the right of the former to them.

COURT RECESS DECLARED OWING TO "DEPRESSION"

Petit jurors in the Union county court were treated to a surprise, yesterday morning, when Judge Speer excused the first panel from further service and adjourned the court until January 25. As the Grand Jury has not yet presented any indictments for this term and no cases have been set down for trial in the criminal court for next week, it is likely that the second panel of jurors, summoned for duty next Monday, will be advised that they need not report until further notice.

Several untried indictments were carried over into the present term from the October session, but it is presumed that these will not be moved for trial within the next week, so that no business is pending before the criminal court of the county for immediate trial. The adjournment of the civil court is due to the fact that Judge Speer must sit in Hudson county next week.

ATTENDING CONFERENCE.

Mayor Leighton Calkins went to Newark today, to attend a conference of Mayors of New Jersey cities to discuss the question of the 90 cent gas rate decision and to consider probable action. While Plainfield is not directly concerned in the present case which is now before the courts, it would be if the ultimate decision is in favor of the Public Service Corporation.

ANNOUNCE ENGAGEMENT.

Friends in this city have received word of the engagement of Miss Nell S. Merrill, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank M. Merrill, of Syracuse, N. Y., to Jack A. Palmer, of Albany, N. Y. Miss Merrill taught mathematics in the North Plainfield High School last year.

TEMPERATURE REPORT.

The temperature report from The State Trust Company today is as follows: 9 a. m., 40 degrees; 11 a. m., 47 degrees; 1 p. m., 48 degrees.

EXPERT'S VIEWS ON FIRE WHISTLE

C. W. Spicer Proffers Plan for Reinstallment at Headquarters.

PROBABLE COST $750

This Sum Would Include Expense of Removal and Installation of Compressed Air Device—Agitation is Rife on This Topic.

Agitation for the reinstallment of the fire whistle that has done service in Plainfield for a quarter of a century and which was discontinued January 1, at the termination of the contract the city had entered into with the Spicer Manufacturing Company, is rife, and the solution of the problem appears to be forthcoming in the immediate future. Many influential citizens have interested themselves in the movement to again put the disgarded gong into service and it is not unlikely that the Common Council will take some definite action at its next meeting. While the whistle was being used local residents never had occasion to speculate on the inconvenience that would be caused by its removal, but now that it has been out of commission for several weeks the real value of the device is being realized.

Clarence W. Spicer, of the Spicer Manufacturing Company, in a communication to the Plainfield Daily Press, which is published below, outlines what is probably the most feasible solution to the problem and one which the Common Council will no doubt consider. Mr. Spicer advances the opinion that the whistle could be taken down from its present location, removed and set up in the rear of fire headquarters, and operated by compressed air for time signals, school

CO. K IS AWARDED HONORS AT REVIEW

Win Trophy for Highest Figure of Merit in Rifle Practice.

Company K, of this city, took part in the annual review of the Second Regiment, N. G. N. J., which was held in the Second Regiment Armory at Trenton, last night. Companies C, I and F, of Elizabeth; Company M, of Somerville, and Company K, of this city, were present and were reviewed by General Mather. The companies left on a special train and were accompanied by a number of friends.

General Mather conducted a thorough inspection of the various companies and also made presentations of trophies won during the past year. Company K won a trophy for the highest figure of merit in rifle practice in the regiment and should also have been awarded the Dungan trophy, but that presentation was not made. The trophy is given for the greatest improvement shown during the year. The local company made an increase of 9.5 per cent. over last year, but as they already have one honor there was a discussion as to whether to award it or not. This trophy was won two years ago by Company K. There is a medal that accompanies it. Private N. H. Hort, of Westfield, a member of the Plainfield company, was awarded the Mack medal for the highest scores made on long distance ranges, from 800 to 1,000 yards.

Lieutenant Arthur R. Phillips received two medals for team shooting and also receive a medal for long distance expert, as did Captain Charles A. Peterson, of the local company. As Company K advanced to receive the trophies they presented such a fine appearance that General Mather openly commented on this. Dancing was enjoyed in the armory after the review.

UNITY LODGE INSTALLS.

Unity Lodge, No. 102, Knights of Pythias, last evening held its installation exercises, introducing the new officers to the offices. District Deputy Bellis and staff, of Somerville, were in charge of the ritualistic work. A social time folowed the formal meeting.

TO DESCRIBE STEEL PLANT.

Clarence W. Spicer will speak at the Men's Club, of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, Sunday night, on his trip through the plant of the Pennsylvania Steel Company, showing some fine lantern slides. Women who are interested are cordially invited.

COUNTY TAX BOARDS MAY BE ABOLISHED

Senatorial Committee Considing Ways and Means to Bring Change About.

When the present session of the New Jersey Legislature disposes of the first rush of measures, most of them the result of platform pledges, one of the first matters to be given serious consideration is a proposition to abolish the County Boards for the Equalization of Taxes. These organizations have not been as successful as their sponsors would have the people believe and the growing dissatisfaction has reached the stage where something must be done to stem adverse public opinion.

In the preliminary conferences held, the leaders of both parties were agreed that the Tax Boards were an expensive branch of State mechanism, but as no one could suggest a suitable remedy, action was deferred. The matter was eventually placed in the hands of the Senatorial taxation committee, of which Carlton B. Pierce is chairman. This committee is now wrestling with the problem and when it hits upon a substitute agreeable to both parties, a bill will be introduced.

Since their introduction eight years ago, the Tax Boards have cost the State a little short of $100,000 a year. In addition, the respective counties have had to pay the salary of the clerk and incidental expenses. The salaries of the Tax Board members range from $1,000 to $3,500 a year, according to the population of the county, and there are twenty-one of the organizations. In most counties, the working days required to hear appeals is less than thirty.

The cost is not the only argument however, against the present method Complaints have been pouring in from all parts of the State regarding arbitrary decisions and more or less indifference on the part of the members when attempts were made by property-owners to show where local assessors had erred in passing judgment on values. One instance of this kind came from Plainfield.

What the substitution might be, once the committee decides to abolish the Boards, is only conjective at this time. The feeling prevails that the old plan of local commissioners might be reverted to, but no legislator has said so openly.

CHANCE FOR LOCAL CANINES TO SHINE

Plainfield Kennel Club to Hold Event Exclusively to City Entries.

Tentative plans for a match show, the first of its kind ever held in this section, were discussed at the meeting of the Plainfield Kennel Club held in the Queen City Hotel, last night, it being decided to make the event an extensive one for local canine fanciers. The probable date is Saturday, January 30, and it will be held in the Lufburrow building, on West Front street, opposite Grove street.

This event wil serve as a "feeler" to determine the possible entries for the open-air show to be held early in the spring and the annual indoor show of the kennel club. It is the opinion of the members of the club that interest in dogs of the highest calibre is at a high pitch in Plainfield and the borough at the present time and a record list is expected at the novel event proposed.

Routine matters pertinent to the holding of the outdoor and bench shows of the local organization were discussed during the meeting and it is likely that another session of the members will be held in the near future.

JUDGE CONNOLLY RENEWS HERMAN FROWERY'S LICENSE

Elizabeth, Jan. 15—Judge Connolly, sitting in the Court of Common Pleas, this morning, granted a bottling license to Herman J. Frowery of Scotch Plains, who has kept an inn and tavern at that place for a number of years. A petition containing 100 names endorsing the granting of the license was received by Judge Connolly, while no objections were filed.

Mr. Frowery has conducted the old historic inn at Scotch Plains at the corner of Park avenue and Front street for a number of years, buying out William Deegan, the one time deaf mute baseball pitcher.

QUAKE VICTIMS ARE INCREASING

Late Reports Indicate That From 20,000 to 75,000 Are Lost.

SHOCK FELT IN ALPS

Many Avalanches Caused—Snow and Ice Retard Rescue Work in Some Sections—Say 4,000 Are Alive in Ruins of Avezzano.

Rome, Jan. 15.—As more news reaches this city from the earthquake stricken sections of Italy, it becomes evident that the disaster may reach the enormous proportions of the Messina disaster six years ago, when nearly 100,000 lost their lives. Various estimates, ranging from 25,000 to 75,000, are made today of the loss of life, but it will be days before the approximate number is known. One news agency puts the principal losses at the following figures: Avezzano, 10,000; Sora, 4,000, and elsewhere, 6,000, but it is feared that this will be tens of thousands too low. Thousands were buried alive, and one estimate has it that 4,000 are still living under the ruins in Avezzano. Attempts are being made by all of the inhabitants who were not imprisoned in the stricken territory, to rescue those who are living but cannot escape.

Reports today from the north say the shock was felt as far as the Swiss frontier, and that in the Alps there were numerous avalanches.

This would make it appear that the earthquake extended throughout the entire length of Italy, except the extreme southern end.

Avezzano, the chief sufferer, presents a scene of wreck and desolation. Practically every building in the town is in ruins and nearly all

MARTINE REFUSES TO BE CALLED OFF

Party Leaders Fail to Persuade Him to Withdraw Opposition.

Washnigton, Jan. 15—Senator James E Martine said he has been subjected to strong influence to desist in his contest against the nomination of George E. Hampton as collector at Camden. Governor Fielder, among others, had written to him in the interest of Mr. Hampton. The Governor's letter is understood to have come a few days ago, after it had been reported that National Committeeman Hudspeth had informed him that his course was injurious to the Democratic organization in South Jersey.

The Senator said Mr. Fielder wrote that Hampton was a good Democrat and that it might be just as well to accept him under the existing circumstances.

Mr. Martine has received letters from some postmasters in behalf of Hampton. He would not say who they were, but he takes it all to show there is an organized effort under way in the State to call him off.

"But I'll not be called off," said the Senator. "I told Hudspeth and I'll tell them all that no man ever knew Jim Martine to recede from any position when he knew he was right

"I know," said Mr. Martine, "that they are trying to put the skids under me, but they can't do it. They've got to come out and fight me."

FOURTH ENTERTAINMENT IN ELKS' CLUB SERIES

An evening's program of mirth and music was enjoyed last night, by the large number of members and friends of the local Elks' Club who attended the fourth of a series of winter social events planned by the organization for the Watchung avenue clubhouse. The handsome home of the antlered fraternity was transformed into a scene of gayety early in the evening and the merry-making continued until the wee small hours of the morning.

A busy committee had arranged for an excellent program of entertainment and the affair last night was a replica of the foregoing three, all of which were largely attended and thoroughly enjoyed. Terpsichorean music, furnished by the well known Van Epps' orchestra, was a feature of the evening, dancing being the chief source of entertainment for all present.

Throughout the evening refreshments were served under the supervision of the entertainment committee.

PLANS CAMPAIGN FOR 'HOME RULE'

Mayor Leighton Calkins Hopes to Secure Co-operation of New Jersey Cities.

SEEKS LEGISLATURE AID

Plainfield's Executive Believes That A City Should Have the Right to Determine the Kind of Government Desired.

Following up the suggestion made in his annual message advocating more "home rule" for cities of Plainfield's class, Mayor Leighton Calkins is already planning to take steps toward inaugurating a State campaign along that line. He realizes that his plan is possible only through legislative action and to get that there must be a campaign which will impresss the members of the Legislature that the cities of the State desire wider latitude in regard to home government.

Mayor Calkins is thoroughly convinced that in a great many respects cities should have the right to adopt their own charter and have more say than they do at the present time as to what they want and do not want to do. Mr. Calkins is today attending a conference of New Jersey Mayors at Newark, where the 90-cent gas rate decision is being discussed and it is likely that he may have the opoprunity to take up his "home rule" suggestion with some of the city executives.

In discussing the matter, Mr. Calkins said that he believed that a city should have the right to say what kind of a government it wants without legislative interference in that respect. If it wants a commission form of government or manager government or prefers to operate under any other plan it should be allowed to do so and it is with this idea that Mr. Calkins prosese to see if he cannot secure the passage of a measure that will give cities what he belives they are entitled to. At the same time Mr. Calkins does not want to prevent the State from exercising its just rights.

There are many things that come up from time to time that a city would like to do, but the State laws will not permit and for that reason a city is oftentimes hindered from adopting measures that would be of distinct benefit to it. It is just such things that Mr. Calkins hopes to correct. He believes that he will have no trouble in securing the hearty co-operation of a majority of other cities in the State in his plan, although it is possible that some of the first-class cities may not be as anxious as others of a smaller class to join in the movement.

GERMANS WILL MEET TO COMPLETE ORGANIZATION

A meeting of the local branch of the Vaterlandshilfe, the new German society, will be held this evening in the basement of the German Reformed church, Craig place and Duer street, the borough. It is expected that the organization of the society will be completed at this meeting, as well as the consideration of a number of other important matters.

While the committee has endeavored to reach as many of the local German families as possible, those who have not received personal invitations will be welcomed should they desire to attend this meeting.

RECORD FIRE DRILL IN PLAINFIELD HIGH SCHOOL

Over 1,100 school children were out of the High School in two minutes after the fire signal sounded last week to test the working of the school fire drill.

Those on the east side of the building took only one minute and forty seconds to leave, but the total time was longer for all the pupils on both sides of the building.

After leaving the building the children were recalled and all were back within four minutes after the first alarm had sounded. Five minutes from the time the drill began the school had emptied and filled and work was again under way.

THEODORE CHRISTENSEN.

Theodore Christensen, the ten-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. George Christensen, of Oak Tree, died this morning, after a short illness. The funeral services will be held at the home of the parents Sunday afternoon at 2:30. The burial is to be made at Hillside cemetery, this city.

OVERCOME ENEMY WITH BAYONETS

French Zouaves Capture German Positions on Road From Arras to Lille.

MANY ARTILLERY DUELS

French, Rally After Being Driven Back Five Miles at Vregny—Say Retreat Was Necessary Because of Flood Washing Away Bridges.

Paris, Jan. 15.—Bayonet victories at Arras and artillery advantages gained at several points are the principal claims of success made in the official statement issued by the French war office at 3 o'clock this afternoon. It says:

"From the sea to the Lys there have been artillery combats, at times very violent. We made some progress near Lombaertzyde and near Becelacre. To the north of Arras a brilliant bayonet attack by zouaves captured the enemy's positions near the road from Arras to Lille. In the same region at La Targette and at St. Laurent, as well as the north of Andechy, which is the region of Roye, our artillery gained the advantage over that of the enemy. His batteries were silenced, two pieces being demolished, an ammunition depot was blown up and earthworks under construction destroyed.

"There have been violent artillery duels in the region of Craonne and at Rheims, in the course of which the enemy's batteries have been frequently silenced.

"In the region of Perthes, in the Argonne, on the heights of the Meuse, there is nothing to report.

"In the Vosges, to the south of Semones, we threw the Germans into confusion in a sharp infantry engagement, cut their wire entanglements and overwhelmed their trenches. On the rest of the front there is nothing to report."

Berlin, Jan. 15 (By wireless via Sayville).—The following statement was given out today at German headquarters:

"In the western theatre torpedo boats and other small craft approached within thirteen kilometres (about nine miles) of the coast of Westnde. French attacks on both side of Notre Dame Lorette, northwest of Arras, were repulsed. Two trenches, which we took a week ago near Ecurrie, were recaptured by the enemy. A battle here is again raging today.

"We have cleared the trench from the northern bank of the Aisne, northeast of Soissons, by a continuous series of attacks. We took Cuffies, Crouy, Bucy E Lond, Missy, Vauxvot and Vallerie. The French suffered heavy losses in their retreat to the south bank of the Aisne, which took place under the fire of our artillery.

"We repulsed a very strong attack north of Verdun, near Consenvoye, and on our positions near Ailly. French attacks at St. Mihiel, which reached our first line of trenches, were repulsed by counter attacks with heavy French losses. Last night we took some of the enemy's positions, which, after rebuilding our works, we left of our own free will without fighting.

"We repulsed an attack near Mesnil. There are only artillery duels in the Vosges.

"In the eastern theatre of war there is no change, in East Prussia or northern Poland. Our attacks are progressing west of the Weichsel. In that region we captured 500 Russians and three machine guns. Northeast of Rawka we repulsed Russian attacks with counter attacks. There were heavy Russian losses."

Petrograd, Jan. 15.—Eighty thousand Armenian refugees have crossed the border from Turkey into Russia. They have fled before the persecutions of the Turkish soldiers, and are absolutely destitute, and the Russian civil authorities are taking measures to care for them.

London, Jan. 15.—The defeated French army is today recuperating from the attack by the Germans which swept them from the heights of Vregny, five miles northeast of Soissons, to the south bank of the Aisne.

The Germans, under the eyes of the Kaiser, are attempting to follow up their advantage.

The assault was made in a heavy rain and lasted into the night. The operations were carried on under the eyes of the German Emperor himself.

Paris official bulletins conceeding the sucess of this attack, say its force is now spent.

The retirement across the Aisne by the French is laid to the sudden flooding of the river, which washed away bridges and made the sending of reinforcements impossible.

How far the offensive of the German troops may have helped to force

DUNELLEN

All the Happenings of the Day In Plainfield's Hustling Suburb.

Miss Sarah Hill, of North avenue, is spending a week at Jersey City with her brother, Augustus Hill.

RETURNS TO WORK.

Peter Vernon, of Washington avenue, returned to work today, after an indisposition of a couple of days with a severe cold, the result of being drenched with water while assisting the New Providence fire department in putting out a fire near New Providence on Saturday night.

Miss Jacinthia Frescolm, of Washington avenue, who has been ill, was able to resume her duties as librarian yesterday. Miss Gertrude Day, of Dunellen avenue, substituted for Miss Frescolm during her illness.

Mrs. Garfield Hunt, of Madison avenue, visited her sister, Mrs. Warren Green, at Sheepshead Bay, Brooklyn, yesterday.

Everett Gordon, of New Market road, was a recent visitor at Glen Gardner, where he has a sister, who is quite ill.

CHOSEN AS ELDERS.

At a congregational meeting of the Presbyterian church, held after prayer meeting on Wednesday evening, George Cameron and Frank R. Wynkoop were re-elected as elders of the church for terms of two years.

Miss Dorothy Cameron, of New Market road, entertained the B. + G. Club on Monday night.

Frederick Richards, the genial assistant of George H. Richter, the North avenue barber, has resumed his duties after an illness of several days.

Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Herlich, of Newark, spent Sunday in the borough as the guest of Mr. Herlich's father, Adam Herlich, of Front street.

George Margentino, of Plainfield, visited his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Margentino, of North avenue, yesterday.

Former Postmaster Peter C. Staats was a recent visitor at Bloomsbury.

Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Barto, of Front street, sailed today for Bermuda. They will be gone two weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Vail, of Washington avenue, entertained Mr. and Mrs. William Gary, of Bayonne, Sunday.

Mrs. Mary Runyon, of North avenue, entertained Mrs. Anne Hall, of Plainfield, over the week-end.

CANDIDATE FOR POSTMASTER.

Real Estate Agent Charles E. Tinsman has announced that he is a candidate for the appointment to the postmastership of the borough. Mr. Tinsman has filed his application with Congressman Cornish, who hails from his boyhood home in Warren county.

The W. C. T. U. will meet at the home of Mrs. T. J. Todd, on Front street, next Thursday.

The regular monthly meeting of the Board of Trade will be held in the Borough Hall, Monday evening.

Mrs. W. M. Fowler and child, of Washington avenue, are reported as getting along very nicely.

Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Shively, of Front street, will move into their new house on Lincoln avenue shortly.

John Hill, proprietor of the Park Hotel stables, was a visitor at Frenchtown, yesterday afternoon, where he attended an auction sale of horses.

PROF. WILLIS LECTURED.

Prof. A. L. Willis, of New York city, lectured before the grammar school pupils in the Whittier School between the hours of 3 and 4 yesterday afternoon, on physiognomy or the human face and what it indicates. Prof. Willis endeavored to show how the inner life of the individual is revealed through certain characteristic features of the hand and face as well as attitude in doing things such as walking, laughing and talking. The lecture was much appreciated by the children, who seemed to gain the understanding that character was bound to show itself.

Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Todd, of North avenue, are entertaining Mrs. George B. Martin, of Brooklyn.

ATTRACTIVE PROGRAM.

Francis Teeling, the local tenor, has collected together three promising singers in Ned Nemwan, Frank Day and Richard Hunt, all of this borough, and promises that he will bring them before the public in a few weeks. The initial appearance will be made in the local theatre and Mr. Teeling promises that he and his pupils will draw as much applause as the local favorite, Goodwin Lawrence. Private rehearsals are being held at Mr. Hunt's residence.

GIVEN A JUDGMENT.

In a case tried before Judge Woodbridge, seated in the District Court at New Brunswick, yesterday, Peter Ratti, of Cranford, and Paul Ratti, the local fruit dealer, were given a judgment of $72 and costs against Vincengo Tozzi, the North avenue barber. The plaintiffs sued for $97 alleged to be due them on account of a month and a half rent, a fire insurance premium paid on Tozzi's chattels and a gas range and stove. The plaintiffs were represented by Francis J. Blatz, of Plainfield, and the defendant by a New Brunswick attorney.

Funeral services for Mrs. Mary A Faulkner, who died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Thomas H. Norton, on Martine avenue, yesterday morning, after a long illness, will be held at the residence of her daughter tomorrow afternoon at 2:45. Rev. J. Madison Hare, pastor of the Scotch Plains Baptist church, will officiate, and the interment will be in Cypress Hills cemetery, Brooklyn, on Sunday.

Ever since the rain of two days ago Green brook has taken the form of a miniature river and the water has been pouring over the dams of the back pond and at Henderson's place with a roar that could be heard at a great distance. The field alongside School No. 1 filled with water and covered Park avenue, at that spot to a depth of nearly a foot, something that has not happened before in seven years. Schuyler's pond is twice its usual size and if it freezes over will be the largest place for skating in this place.

The second of a series of dances under the auspices of the Sunshine Club, composed of young people from Plainfield, Westfield and this place will be held in the Fanwood firehouse tomorrow evening.

About forty women of Fanwood and Scotch Plains gathered at the residence of the Misses Kyte, on Martine avenue, yesterday afternoon, to sew on clothing for the relief of the Belgians. The second box of things is nearly reeady to be shipped to the headquarters of the Belgian Society in New York. The next meeting will be at the same place on the afternoon of the fourth Thursday in the month.

Mrs. Walter Brown entertained about twenty of the children in the Sunday-school of the Methodist church at her home on Park avenue. It included those children that took part in the cantata held at Christmas time. The time was joyously spent playing games, after which all partook of refreshments.

Nothing has been heard from the basketball team that was going to be organized from the members of last year's Parish House five. There has been a rumor afoot that certain prominent local residents have been making an effort to re-open the Parish House, which was the community social center of Fanwood and Scotch Plains for two years, and certainly a better thing for the local welfare could not be done.

The representative basketball team of the local Boy Scouts will get in action tonight for the first time when it will journey to Dunellen and endeavor to show the Crow Patrol of that place, some of the fine points of the game.

Dr. Maurice Hall, who is spending the winter in New York, was a visitor in town yesterday.

Charles Bent, of the township, has purchased a Hupmobile auto and has built an up-to-date garage in the rear of his home.

The first meeting of the Lepers will be held tonight.

Eugene Martin, of Terrill road, has returned from a short business trip of New York State.

The All Saints' choir met with Organist Dushanek, in Westfield, last night. It is probable that the choir, as well as the one from the Baptist church, will render several musical selections at the meeting of the Fanwood Township Sunday-school Association to be held Monday night.

Miss Rose Thomae has been confined to her home on North avenue for the past ten days by threatened pneumonia.

Many setbacks, offset by a fine of $100 when arraigned before Recorder Springstead, of Westfield, has forced Ralph Venizio, of Fanwood, until recently a liquor dealer in this section, to give up business. It was when supplying a case of beer to another Italian in Westfield that he was arrested last week and when taken before the recorder he said he had given up business and will tend to the tilling of his farm from now on.

COTTAGE PRAYER SERVICES.

Three cottage prayer meetings are to be conducted in various parts of the city under the auspices of the Park Avenue Baptist church. The meetings scheduled for tonight are to be held at the homes of the following: Mrs. Walter Freeman, 1008 South avenue; Mrs. R. C. Tredwell, 821 First place; Deacon D. M. Runyon, 1048 Arlington avenue.

STRONG APPEALS FOR PROHIBITION

Interesting Addresses Made at Gathering in W. C. T. U. Rooms.

For the purpose of furthering the interest of the temperance cause and especially the ultimate adoption of the National Constitutional Amendment, a meeting was held in the W. C. T. U. rooms on Madison avenue, yesterday afternoon, under the auspices of the union. The meeting was marked by a special program in which there were several short addresses.

Mrs. Mary D. Tomlinson, president of the union, directed the program. Rev. Dr. Birney S. Hudson, pastor of the Park Avenue Baptist church, spoke on "The Past: Milestones Passed in the Prohibition Movement," while Rev. J. Y. Broek, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, addressed the gathering on "The Future: The Outlook—a Prophecy." Rev. J. Madison Hare, of the Scotch Plains Baptist church, the last speaker, discussed "The Present: The Battle Today." All of the addresses were strong appeals for the continuance of the fight for national prohibition and words of engagement to the women engaged in the work. Mrs. Tomlinson also added a few words to the remarks of the afternoon and there was special music. The meeting was largely attended and full of interest.

MRS. EMILY MARTIN.

Mrs. Emily Martin, mother-in-law of Tucker Johnson, porter at the City National Bank, died last night, at the home of the latter on Webster place. She came here from Virginia four years ago. During her residence in the South she was identified with a Baptist church. She leaves four daughters, Mrs. Tucker Johnson, Mrs. Eliza Flannagan and Mrs. Frank Brown, of Plainfield, and Mrs. Susan Terrell, of Virginia. The funeral will be held at the late home Monday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Rev. J. Y. Campbell will officiate and the burial will be in Hillside.

UNORTUNATES NOT THE POOR AT HEART

Wickedest Man in Plainfield is Not the Wretch Who is Penniless.

Rev. Dr. D. B. F. Randolph, pastor of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church, delivered the sermon at the special service in that edifice last night, taking for his subject "The Wickedest Man in Plainfield." The speaker took occasion to comment on the tendency of the present generation to pick out a poor, unfortunate creature as an example of sinfulness and the general belief that one who is blessed with riches and every natural advantage is beyond reproach as far as character and conduct are concerned. Dr Randolph said that very often sinfulness may be traced to unfortunate inheritance, lack of education and worldly misfortune.

In his sermon, Dr. Randolph implied that advantageous environment to both heart and mind was a mere matter of chance, some persons being brought into the world shrouded in misfortune, while others enjoyed the rights of prosperity from birth. The wickedest man in Plainfield is the one who has blasphemed the Holy Ghost and who has destroyed his own conscience by continued wrong doing. Wickedness is produced by an expulsion of God's grace from the mind and heart and the commitment of eternal sin.

FUNERAL SERVICES FOR MRS. WILSON SULLIVAN

Funeral services for Mrs. Jessie Wilson Sullivan will be held at her late residence on South Second street, tomorrow afternoon, the Rev. Frederic L. Greene, of Hope chapel, officiating. Interment will be made in Hillside cemetery.

Mrs. Sullivan is survived by three sons; her mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Thompson; two sisters, Mrs. M. Watson and Mrs. John Miles; and four brothers, three of whom live in Scotland and the other being John Thompson.

EXPERT'S VIEWS ON WHISTLE

signals and special fire signals, including the compressed air outfit complete and including a reasonable profit to the contractor, for a sum not to exceed $750. He also states that the principal item for operating and upkeep would be electric current for the compressor motor which would not exceed $5 per month. Inasmuch as the city has set aside an appropriation in other years of $550 for the maintenance of the gong, the advisability of authorizing the expenditure of an additional $200 for 1915 to put the whistle in working order appears to be worthy of consideration.

Mr. Spicer suggests that the outfit suggested would not be sufficient to blow four rounds of the fire call, but inasmuch as the four-round idea is a mere custom and is not compulsory, this feature would not prove a drawback in the scheme advanced by the communicant.

The letter follows:

"Referring to your editorial in yesterday's 'Press,' discussing the desirability of putting the large whistle again into service, it may be of interest to note that the whistle could be taken down from its present location, removed and set up at the rear of fire headquarters or other suitable location, and operated by compressed air for the time signals, school signals and special fire signals, including the compressed air outfit complete and including a reasonable profit to the contractor, for not to exceed $750.

"The principal item for operating and upkeep would be electric current for the compressor motor which should not in any case exceed $5 per month and in most cases not more than one-half that amount.

"The very small amount of attention required could easily be given by the superintendent of the fire alarm system without additional cost to the city.

"The outfit suggested would not have sufficient capacity to give four rounds of the fire box numbers, but would be ample for special signals when required."

QUAKE VICTIMS INCREASING

its people are dead or injured.

Firemen from Rome are centering their efforts at the Girls' School, in which many pupils are buried. They have recovered one living child and one body.

Late advices say that about 500 bodies have been recovered and that hundreds of injured have been taken from the ruins. Nearly all the civil officials of Avezzano, including the mayor, lost their lives.

Similar conditions exist in towns and villages around Avezzano. Magliano, to the north, and Pescina, to the east, are in ruins. Among the missing in the last named place is Mgr. Bagnoli, bishop of Prescina.

Cold and snow are adding to sufferings of the survivors. Lamentations of the people are pitiful and they are begging to be taken to places where it is possible to care for them.

The Italian government and people have quickly responded to the call for help. Thousands of troops have been sent to the scenes and the work of rescue and relief is going on night and day.

The soldiers have been ordered to assist in excavating the ruins, to build wooden huts for survivors, transport the injured and guard property.

Supplies of food, clothing, blankets and medicines have been despatched by train where possible and motor cars where the railroads are blocked.

King Victor Emmanuel is tireless in his endeavors to spur on the rescue work and in encouraging the survivors.

Messages from along the line from Rome to Tivoli, Carcoli and Avezzano say that everywhere he passed people rushed to greet him and express their gratitude.

The King asked all to abandon unnecessary formalities and to desist from inappropriate demonstrations. His only wish, he said, was to visit the wounded and express his sympathy and to ascertain what was possible to be done to relieve so much misery.

Having heard that means of transportation are still lacking, the King has ordered all automobiles at the royal palace to be sent immediately for use in the stricken districts.

He returned to Rome last night. He had three cars attached to his special train in which forty badly injured at Avezzano had been placed. Three of these died on the journey.

HEAVENLY REST MEN'S CLUB TO ENTERTAIN AT A EUCHRE

Members of the Men's Club, of the Heavenly Rest church, met in the parish house of that edifice, last night, and enjoyed a social hour following the disposal of accumulated routine matters. During the course of the evening the names of two new members were added to the roster and reports presented by directors of the club indicated that the work being accomplished is of an encouraging nature.

Among the subjects brought to the attention of the organization was the proposed euchre and reception. This will be given Thursday night, January 2, in the parish house, the date being set at last night's meeting. The committees in charge of the event will plan a pleasing and enjoyable program for the evening and the invited guests will be friends and relatives of the club members.

Considerable interest is manifested in the work of this men's association in the Church of the Heavenly Rest and the fast growing roster is evidence of its increasing popularity among the male members of the congregation. A number of social evenings have been spent recently and several excellent lectures have been delivered by well known local men before the club.

TEMPLE SHOLEM SERVICES.

At the regular Friday night services at Temple Sholem this evening, Rabbi Herman L. Martin will take for his subject, "The Royal Road to Wealth." The augmented choir will render special selections.

ITALY'S DISASTER.

The loss of tens of thousands of lives in the Italian earthquake of Wednesday for the moment even overshadows the killing of other thousands of men in the titanic conflict raging in nearly every country of Europe. The spectacle of men, women, children and every other living things being wiped out in a few moments' time is more appalling than can be any battle, no matter how great.

Coming on top of all the other demands for assistance, the problem of relief for those stricken is a serious one. Under normal conditions the people of the United States would immediately start a movement to aid the suffering residents of Italy, but with the demands made upon us of late for Belgium and other European countries, it will be difficult for us to do half that the American people wish they could do. It is indeed fortunate that Italy has not entered the war, for had that been the case relief would have been next to impossible.

If, however, there is occasion for outside assistance there can be no doubt, as the Newark Evening News says, that it will be forthcoming. Proof of this is amply afforded by the response that has been made swiftly and generously in time of great calamity, no matter what people were the victims. The present times are admittedly exceptional, and many calls have been made on the charitable. But the world now, as never before, has been quickened to the appreciation of suffering.

Earthquakes are no respecters of persons or of national boundaries. The shock might have occurred in hostile instead of peaceful territory. With this the case, the sobering sense of the calamity could be conceivably more pronounced, in certain quarters at least. But this sense, with attendant recognition of real, human kinship, is a factor that the earthquake has served to bring into the present world situation.

A correspondent, in a letter to the Press last night, says that "it is a misfortune to read that you (The Press) are in favor of increasing facilities for the sale of intoxicating drinks in this city." He drew the inference from an editorial printed in these columns on Wednesday night, in which we stated that "the general impression is that another wholesale license will be granted, and we cannot see how this can do any great harm in this city." The Daily Press does not "favor increasing facilities for the sale of liquor." We do not believe in prohibition under any circumstances, and with hundreds of other citizens we do believe that the traffic is handled in this city as satisfactorily as it is possible to handle it. It would not make the slightest difference to us if all of the saloons were abolished. We cannot, however, see how another well regulated wholesale liquor store could do any more harm in the city. If it were a retail place the Press would lead the opposition.

An unverified report about town is that the Board of Education will make a change in the secretaryship when it organies at the February meeting for another year. If this is true it is certainly to be hoped that an effort will be made to find home talent. When the present clerk was named he was placed in the position without any intimation being given that a change was contemplated, and plenty of residents of this city were disgused that a local man had not been selected. They had no objections to Mr. Conger personally, but felt that residents of Plainfield should be the first ones considered. It would seem, in case the change is to be made, that there must be men now identified with the work of the Board of Education who could fill the position satisfactorily with the help, perhaps, of more clerical assistants, and possibly at a substantial saving in salaries.

Although there were fifty-seven candidates voted for by the preferential method, the high man on the ticket for commissioner in Asbury Park received a majority vote. Considering the number of candidates this is a remarkable tribute to the personal popularity of Clarence E. F. Hetrick, who was the high man, and who undoubtedly will be chosen Mayor when the commissioners organize next Tuesday. The success of the commission government election is in a large part due to the Asbury Park Press, which made a determined figh for the new form from the day that the petitions were started.

It is a pleasure to see that the Courier-News is editorially taking up the agitation in favor of abolishing the glaring headlights, which was started by the Daily Press some months ago. If there is one thing that needs correction more than another by the Legislature, it is the glaring headlight evil, and the legislator who fathers an act to stop it will receive the blessing of every citizen who walks out at night.

Governor Blease has resigned five days before his term expired, and with a record of having pardoned more than 3,000 murderers and lesser criminals. It is said that he quit because the Legislature of South Carolina was getting ready to "fire" him, by the impeachment route, and the only remarkable thing about the case is that he was not put out of the office long ago. He has been a disgrace to every American institution.

The fates seem hard to satisfy. Not content with destroying hundreds of thousands of the citizens of Europe by the ravages of war, an earthquake comes along to bring great sorrow to the one great neutral nation left in Europe.

"Martine Unmoved in Hampton Case," says a headline. Those of us who know "Jim" realize that when once he makes up his mind there is nothing on earth that will move him, and we expect to see him stick.

The contributing editor for tomorrow will be Dr. Richard Moldenke, of Watchung, who will discuss the need for more efficient industrial education.

THE FORUM

Editor, Plainfield Daily Press:

While the Board of Trade and other civic bodies have been boosting Plainfield through your valuable paper, permit me to suggest one very important point that seems to have been overlooked.

Much has been truthfully said of the beauty and attractiveness of Plainfield, as a place of residence yet very little has been said of the steady and permanent advance in its real estate values, making it a safe and profitable investment for capital. Just a few words appropo to this. In 1872 one property on West Front street was sold for $4,500, and is now held by the owner at $35,000 with a cash offer from an investor of $30,000. Property in the same section sold in 1878 for $20,000, and now has a cash buyer offering $65,000. East Front street has shown nearly as much increase in value. One property that sold a few years ago for less than $6,000, today has a ready market of $35,000. Land in the same section that was then considered worth about $100 a foot recently sold for $600 a foot. Park avenue and Watchung avenue properties have more than doubled in value within the last few years. The same may be said of the residentia sections, East, West and South.

At the present time when interest money is hard to raise, and capital everywhere is limited, very few indeed are foreclosers, because the man who holds a mortgage on Plainfield real estate has confidence in that investment, based upon Plainfield's past history. Hundreds of our citizens today are enjoying fortunes made on Plainfield real estate, with not one important failure in over forty years.

In conclusion allow me to say that the question of how to care for the unemployed would be permanently and satisfactorily settled if people who have savings to invest, will place within reach of responsible builders, money on bond and mortgage, every unemployed man will have work within the next thirty days.

FIRE DESTROYS SHELDON HOUSE AT WARRENVILLE

Fire which was discovered in the Sheldon house on the hill near Warrenville last last night, entirely destroyed the dwelling. Owing to the lack of water supply the nieghbors who gathered were unable to save the property, the flames having gained so much headway. The house had been unoccupied for sometime, but had just been leased by William Snell. He spent yesterday at the place fixing it up, it being his intention to take possession within a few days.

Gus Kirch and John Cooper were the first ones to see the blaze and they with a number of other residents hastened to the burning dwelling, but upon their arrival found themselves helpless to do anything. The house was a small one and it is estimated that the loss will be in the neighborhood of $500. The property was occupied for many years by Joseph Sheldon, but recently had been owned by Mrs. Florence Wakefield, who resides near Watchung.

PLAN RIGID ENFORCEMENT OF BORO LIGHT ORDINANCE

North Plainfield minions of the law are engaged in a crusade against the practice of driving vehicles on the streets of the borough after dark without the necessary lights, and wholesale arrests are due to follow. Four offenders fell into the drag-net yesterday, and were arraigned before Recorder Hand in the borough court this morning.

Herbert Gonnella, of Somerset street; Joseph Green, of West Third street; Harold Blackford, of Manning avenue, and Mathew Fox were the defendants, and all were given suspended sentences with warnings. The first three were found guilty of riding bicycles without lights and the last one drove a wagon through the streets in violation of the same ordinance.

TESTIMONY MEETING.

The prayer meeting at the Seventh-Day Baptist church tonight will be without topic and those attending are requested to bring a personal testimony.

CLARENCE SLAPE PERFECTS A NEW SILK STRING

Clarence D. Slape, of Greshani road, has just perfected a new silk string for musical instruments which has attracted considerable attention. He has been manufacturing strings for banjos and violins for the past sixteen years and has become an expert in that work.

Recently, Mr. Slape interested Chief Edward E. Pratt, of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, in bringing European dealers in musical instruments in touch with the local manufacturer. Owing to the fact that the war has stopped the exportation of goods from abroad, Mr. Slape's business has increased considerable in supplying these musical strings to the trade.

WAR NEWS

the retreat, if at all, is not known. There is no mention in the Berlin official report of this admitted French movement.

The battle of Soissons has developed the most important action in the western theatre since the German drive against Ypres. It is being fought on a five-mile front and in the open.

The Germans' continued offensive tactics at Soissons, it is believed here, is due to the presence of General Von Kluck.

The struggle for the knoll of ground northeast of Soissons, known as "Spur 132," still remained undecided today, according to information from the front.

The Germans, by their counter attacks, appear to be in the better position to the eastward of the spur and show no signs of giving up their attempts to retake the hill. It is said General Von Kluck himself is now in command of the German forces.

A Havas St. Omer dispatch, dated January 10, relating to a British victory and an advance near La Bassee of one mile, says:

"The British by an impetuous attack stormed the strongly entrenched German position near La Bassee at 5 o'clock this afternoon, after a vigorous preliminary shelling.

"This is an important strategic point, and its occupation represents an advance of one mile. The British losses were slight, but the Germans lost heavily. Many Germans were taken prisoners."

KING'S DAUGHTERS' TEA.

The City Union of The King's Daughters will give a donation tea at The Day Nursery, Thursday, January 21, from 3 to 6 o'clock in the afternoon and from 7 to 10 o'clock in the evening.

WOULD FREE COPPER CARGOS.

Washington, Jan. 15—Attempts are being made by the United States through its ambassador in London to secure the release of three American ships loaded with copper. This became known today from an unimpeachable official source. The British foreign office has been frank in saying that the copper cargoes on board are believed to be for the ultimate consumption of German gun works.

PARIS GRADUALLY GROWING NORMAL

Following Von Kluck's Retreat, Near 1,000,000 Return.

BIG STORES REMAIN OPEN.

Commercial and Industrial Side of War to Be Waged With Great Determination—Luxuries In Little Demand—Transactions In Spot Cash and Volume of Business Restricted.

The war population of Paris, estimated at 2,000,000 after the exodus of the first days of General von Kluck's approach to the city, has gradually increased to nearly the normal 3,000,000, and business is affected accordingly.

Factories of most kinds are still crippled—some from lack of funds tied up by the moratorium, some from lack of raw materials and others from lack of skilled help taken away by the mobilization. "Proprietor and Clerks at the Front" is a notice appearing in increased numbers on closed shop fronts since the calling out of the territorials. The big stores have remained open and are now thronged with shoppers, as usual. Most of these establishments formerly gave extended credit, but so long as the moratorium lasts all transactions are spot cash and the volume of business restricted.

Simplicity of styles also has its influence. Luxuries which form a considerable part of Parisian commerce are in little demand. Something for the comfort of sons, brothers and fathers at the front is mostly called for, such as heavy underwear, jerseys, sweaters, warm socks, gloves and scarfs. Apart from these articles, the demand is almost exclusively for the necessaries of everyday existence.

Dreads to Think of Defeat.

A prominent merchant, asked what would be the permanent effect of the war upon the business of retail shops, declared it would be partly a question of victory or defeat. He dreads to think of the latter eventuality and the lasting influence it would have on business and on life in general in France. In case of victory, however, the commercial scars of war would be quickly healed, but even in that case the people, habituated to simplicity by the force of circumstances, will be slow to come back to luxuries.

Merchants will do well, he thinks, to turn their attention more to the lines of goods that will be required in the rebuilding of what has been destroyed and in the re-establishment of family life in the regions that have been devastated.

The partial disappearance of luxuries, he thinks, is quite likely to be more than compensated by the impetus that many look for as the result of the war.

To Develop Foreign Trade.

The mission of ex-Minister of Finance Caillaux to Brazil is with a view to the development of foreign trade that is made possible by the control of the Atlantic by the allies.

The commercial and industrial side of the war is seemingly to be waged with the same determination as the struggle of arms. This is the spirit discerned in the decrees against commercial relations with subjects of the powers at war with France, and the newspapers of all shades of opinion are prosecuting a vigorous industrial campaign.

The sequestration of property of German and Austrian subjects, companies and industries goes on. Columns are devoted daily by some papers to the exposure of German interests in firms whose origin is not apparent.

MEAT INJURIOUS TO THE KIDNEYS

Take a Tablespoonful of Salts if Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers.

We are a nation of meat eaters and our blood is filled with uric acid, says a well-know authority, who warns us to be constantly on guard against kidney trouble.

The kidneys do their utmost to free the blood of this irritating acid, but become weak from the overwork; they get sluggish, the eliminative tissues clog and thus the waste is retained in the blood to poison the entire system.

When your kidneys ache and feel like lumps of lead, and you have stinging pains in the back or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment, or the bladder is irritable, obliging you to seek relief during the night; when you have severe headaches, nervous and dizzy spells, sleeplessness, acid stomach or rheumatism in bad weather, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning and in a few days your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys, to neutralize the acids in urine so it is no longer a source of irritation, thus ending urinary and bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, and nobody can make a mistake by taking a little occasionally to keep the kidneys clean and active.—Adv.

80 GUINEAS PER CENT.

London, Jan. 15—Lloyds today named a rate of 80 guineas per cent. to insure against war by Roumania against Austria or Turkey within the next six months. A rate of 70 guineas per cent. is charged on policies that Italy and Austria will not be at war with each other within the same period.

$40,000 FIRE IN MARYLAND.

Ellicott City, Md., Jan. 15.—A fire which started about 11 o'clock last night in the central section of this city spread with such rapidity that at 1 o'clock this morning more than a block, including the Postoffice building, had been burned. The loss is estimated at $40,000.

If you take Plainfield money and spend it in other cities, are you helping Plainfield to grow? Spend your money home where you and your children are enjoying the splendor of our city. Do YOUR part for a better and bigger Plainfield.

Interesting to Men--But to Women

The question of cultivation of good taste in a home means the purchase of whatever improves the appearance, comfort and welfare of every one connected with it. The woman is the purchasing agent of the American home; keenly interested in high grade merchandise and table goodies; the kind presented by Plainfield merchants, backed by prompt courteous attention, a stock of large variety to select from, and prices that are no higher than the stores of other cities.

Trading in Plainfield is the easiest, safest, and most profitable, and when you purchase an article that is not entirely satisfactory you experience no difficulty in having it exchanged or your money refunded. On the other hand, can an article purchased in stores in these other cities afford you the same protection as our Plainfield merchants? Sometimes an article can be exchanged, but then it is necessary to have it travel 20 or 25 miles back to the store where you purchased it, and the second selection forwarded to you, and if you wern't fortunate enough to make a second selection on the day you did your shopping you are either obliged to make it from a catalog or take another trip yourself to straighten the matter out. Do your shopping in your home town and avoid any unnecessary risks or delays. Help your city to grow.

During the last rain storm the Dead and Passaic Rivers have overflowed their banks, making the road impassable, the water in the road near F. P. Ralph's home is four feet deep. This is a very dangerous road when the water is high, as several horses have been injured, and the Town Committee have done everything in their power to prevent any more accidents.

DANCING CLASSES FOR BORO SCHOOLS

Young and Old to Be Taught the Latest Steps in the Art.

The monthly meeting of the North Plainfield Parent-Teacher Association was held in the Somerset School, yesterday afternoon, with the president, Mrs. M. H. Ewart, presiding. There was an attendance of over one hundred and twenty members. Ten new members were elected. The economic committee submitted a plan for a dancing class under the auspices of the association and it was accepted. There will be two classes every week, one in the afternon and one at night. The former will be for the young people who want to learn the various steps, and the night class will be for teachers, High School pupils and any others who wish to enter. Ronald Conroy, of the borough school, will be the instructor. Mrs. Frank Rowley is at the head of this plan and the classes will probably begin next week. The day set for the afternoon class is Saturday from 1:30 to 3:30 o'clock. No night has been set aside for the other class.

The plans for the entertainment, "The Hall of Fame," which is to be given by the association on March 12 in Saengerbund Hall, were discussed and the teachers of the various grades will start immediately to prepare for it. Two pupils from each class in the school will be selected to take part.

At the close of the business meeting a social hour was enjoyed and tea was served. The committee, which was in charge of Mrs. Alfred Emmons, consisted of Mrs. S. S. Swackhamer, Mrs. Warren Townley, Mrs. Frank Rowley, Mrs. E. D. Hutchinson and Miss McGurr. The membership of the association now numbers about two hundred. Several questions from the "question box" were answered during the meeting.

LODGE URGES PUBLICITY.

Washington, Jan. 15—Appealing to Congress to shed the light of pitiless publicity on the military unpreparedness of the country, putting it up squarely to the American people for them to decide what should be done for national defense, Senator Lodge, of Massachusetts, spoke today in the Senate in support of his bill providing for a national security commission.

WITHDRAWS EXCEPTIONS TO TRUSTEES' ACCOUNTS

Elizabeth, Jan. 15.—Mrs. Bertha Senger, daughter of the late Samuel Dreier, having withdrawn her exceptions to the accounting made by the trustees of the Dreier estate, following a conference between William Newcorn for the estate and W. R. Wilson for Mrs. Senger, Judge J. C. Connolly has ordered a distribution of the income fund now in the hands of the trustees, Harry and Garret Dreier. The last decision of the court in the case upheld the trustees and it is said that Mrs. Senger decided to drop the litigation.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Watson, of East Second street, have returned from a trip to Washington.

SCHEME ABANDONED.

London, Jan. 15.—The government's scheme for the formation of a national company to manufacture aniline dyes, which industry Germany has heretofore monopolized, has been abandoned, according to the Daily Express, owing to the failure of the interested firms to provide the capital. The present scheme will be withdrawn, says The Express, and some new plan formulated.

BILLIARD TOURNEY ON.

The annual billiard tourney of the Plainfield Association Football Club, for the cup and silver medals, is now under way and the games in the first, second and third rounds are expected to be completed this week. Some exciting games have already been played and the rivalry for the title is keen.

TEMPLE SHOLEM CONCERT.

Tickets for the concert to be given by Temple Sholem at the Columbus Club, on Wednesday night, are now obtainable from any of the members or at Tepper's, Woodhull & Martin Co. and Rothberg stores. Suhr's Imperial Orchestra has been secured for the dancing that is to follow the musical program.

URGES LONGER YALE YEAR.

Student Now Has 186½ Days of Rest Out of the 365.

Secretary Anson Phelps Stokes of Yale university, in his annual report says that in 1745 the total vacation periods of the university amounted to eight weeks, with forty-four weeks of study, while in 1913, counting in all the extra excused workdays, including Sundays, allowances for "cuts," etc., the Yale student had 186½ days of rest from the labors of the other 178½.

The secretary suggests that the year start one week earlier, with an optional reading term beginning Sept. 6, which would give two or three weeks for work prior to the regular term.

Remarkable Fortitude of German Soldier Who Was Severely Wounded.

The following incident was sent to the Berliner Tageblatt by a physician:

"In the royal surgical clinic in Ziegelstrasse there arrived a new transport filled mainly with severely wounded men, most of whom had to be carefully carried to their beds. One sturdy defender of his country clambered without assistance out of the wagon and approached the physician who was receiving them.

"'Well, my man,' said the latter 'you were not badly hurt.'

"'No,' the man in the field gray answered—'only three blows on the head with the butt end of a rifle, ten bayonet thrusts and a shot through my chest. Nothing else'."

Swimming News and Notes

Written for the Daily Press by

BY LOUIS P. HANSEN.

It is still prevalent among the many so-called present-day swimming instructors, that the proper stroke to teach the beginner, is the breast stroke. This is a false idea which has worked great hardships in teaching beginners to swim. It is a well-known fact among expert swimmers of this country, and also of other lands, that the breast stroke is the hardest stroke with which to acquire perfection. All of our better known swimming instructors have adopted the crawl (the elementary crawl) for this work, it having developed that it takes much less time for the beginner to acquire the arm and leg movements of the crawl than for the breast stroke.

This method was first tried by George H. Corson some five or six years ago with great success, and other instructors of natation were not long to see the advantages to be gained by this method and soon followed suit. Such great instructors as Matthew Mann, Whitaker, Sullivan, Cox and several others have adopted this latter method. The writer has had great success with this latter method during the past few weeks, and has found that some of his pupils have been able to discard the water-wings on the second attempt to swim.

Many persons have the idea that the crawl stroke is meant entirely for speed swimming. But this is wrong. It is a fact that crawl is used entirely for speed swimming, but it is a much easier stroke to use for just pleasure swimming. If we will look back to the Battery to Sandy Hook swim of last July, the winner, George Meehan, of Boston, used the crawl the entire distance. Our old standby, Bud Goodwin, uses this stroke for all distances, having discarded the use of the trudgeon stroke for the crawl. All of our best swimmers throughout the country use the crawl exclusively for all distances.

It is about time that persons, who are making their livelihood through the teaching of natation, would get abreast with the times and acquaint themselves with the latest methods now in vogue respecting the teaching of the coming generation this useful art.

Robert Hamilton, of Stuyvesant High School, captured the recent 50-yard championship held at City College, for the High School boys of greater New York. His time for the distance was 27 3-5, 1 2-5 seconds slower than the record made by Lemcke in 1912.

Swimming is now at full blaze among all the New York High School boys and, although no Lemckes or Vollmers have as yet come to light, some of the time made by these youthful swimmers have been very good, and as the season progresses, there is no doubt that some very speedy swimmers will be developed in the High School ranks.

Leo "Tiny" Giebel, of Stuyvesant High School, is the find of the scholastic swimming season, and his mates predict that before long he will be hailed as the best all-around performer in the ranks of the High and "Prep" School swimmers since Norman Lemcke, the High School of Commerce marvel, left all opponents wallowing in his wake.

Giebel is not yet fifteen years of age and is in his first year at Stuyvesant, but his performances have caused a sensation. He is one of the best plungers ever seen among the schoolboys, and it is said that in practice he has done better than 67 feet. He has been close to the record in the 100-yard and 50-yard swims, and has shown phenomenal speed over the furlong.

Giebel has been timed over the 50-yard distance in the remarkable time of 26 seconds, while he has lashed his way over the century in 1 minute and 5 seconds. Not content with these performances, he covered the 220-yard distance in 2 minutes and 52 seconds.

There are a few weaknesses in his method which will have to be corrected, but Giebel is working hard, and under the careful coaching is showing to better advantage every day. At the present time he appears to be the most logical contender for championship honors in the 100 and 220-yard swims. He is also, of course, the mainstay of the relay team.

Many another lad so talented would work to develop speed alone, but not this youngster. He likes plunging even better than speed swimming. In the last dual meets held in the West Side Baths, in West 60th street, he has had no trouble in plunging the length of the 60-foot tank, and in a meet with the Townsend Harris Hall team, held in the pool of the City College, he did 63 feet 6 inches, breaking the former record by six inches. He will more than take the place of Hal Vollmer, who was graduated last year.

Giebel is built for sport. He is 5 feet 11 inches in height, well proportioned, and weighs 189 pounds. He is going to try for the track team when swimming is over, and will also make a bid for football fame when the call is issued next September. In the meantime he will go right on growing big and healthy, and will while away his spare time smashing records in the tank.

The registration committee of the A. A. U. will soon designate an evening, to be known as "ladies' night," to decide the amateur status of six or more water nymphs who have been charged with professionalism. Jake Stumpf, the chairman of the committee, made the announcement last night.

The most prominent of those against whom charges have been made are Elaine Golding, Elsie Hanneman, Nellie Greenhall, Gladys Curls Ganzer, Bessie O'Neil and Alice Lee. Miss Golding is regarded as the champion long distance swimmer in this country.

Three charges have been lodged against Elsie Hanneman, the claimant of the fancy diving championship of the United States, and two against Gladys Curls Ganzer. Both have denied the charges, but nevertheless they will have to stand trial. Bessie O'Neil is a sprinter and a fairly good diver. She defeated Elaine Golding in a 300-yard swim last week.

According to the records, twenty-four women are registered with the A. A. U. As many more have applied, but they have not as yet received their membership cards.

Paterson bowlers captured two games out of three on the Elizabeth Elks' alleys, last night, and thus maintained their grip on first place in the Elks' Senior League. They have now an advantage of one game each way over the New Brunswicks, who are in second place. The pinning last night was decidedly classy. The visitors started off in good style by accounting for a tally of 983 and they enjoyed an advantage of fifty-three pins. Elizabeth came back with 996 and the Silk City pin-knights were unable to hold the pace, being 124 pins to the rear at the finish. The final and deciding game was a battle all the way, Paterson, with 931, pulling out by eight pins. Harry Taylor rolled 227, 215 and 204 averaging 215.1. Anderson had a mark of 246 and he averaged 203. Maloney rolled 223 and 218 for Elizabeth. Joe Nolte was there for 225 and 204 and averaged 204.2. Bock had 214 and 204 and Gathman 212.

NEW YORK CLEANS UP.

A clean sweep was made last night by the New York bowlers in an Elks' Senior League match on the Hoboken alleys. The scores were not high, as a rule, but there was close competition. In the first contest the New Yorks, with 825, won by three pins. In the next two the home five did not make much of a showing. In the final contest the visitors did their best work, accounting for a total of 946. Wessel rolled 212 and 210 for New York, and Lee Johns was there for 201. Miller led the Hoboken team with 205.

LOCAL JUNIOR ELKS LOST THE ODD GAME

Jersey City Pinners Cop the First Two and Drop Third on Local Alleys.

JUNIOR ELKS' LEAGUE RECORD.

	W.	L.	H. S.
Elizabeth	14	4	1009
Paterson	10	8	989
Plainfield	9	9	925
New Brunswick	8	10	910
Newark	7	11	1001
Jersey City	6	12	952

The Jersey City Junior Elk bowling team came to this city, last night, and defeated the local juniors two games out of three, Plainfield getting the last of the match. The visitors had things easy in the first game, but as the match progressed the local pinners became better and made their opponents work. This match did not effect the standing of the teams, although Plainfield dropped away from Paterson and second place with nine victories and as many defeats. Paterson now holds second place by two full games. Jersey City is still in the cellar, but is now only a pair of games behind Newark.

The Plainfield team did not do any startling pinning last night, although they had two of the three games about the 800 mark, none of the locals hit the two century mark, Causbrook coming the nearest with a 194 in the last tilt. Woolston made a 137 score as a starter, while Teicher, who rolled second for the visitors, hit for 207, which gave his team a fine chance to cop the initial roll. Hoyt and Townley made scores of 148 and 140 respectively, while Causbrook went the highest of the game for Plainfield, his mark being 173. Waldorf ended matters with 168 and the team scores were 818 to 745, a poor showing for the local five.

Ville's 213 for Jersey City in the second game helped materially in landing that one as it was only won by a margin of seven pins, the scores being 860 to 853. Waldorf went up to 188 in this game and Townley to 180. The visiting aggregation fell way down in the last game and lost out by 77 pins. Woolston hit the wood for a 186, while Causbrook made his high mark and Waldorf registered a 175. The scores of the games were 838 to 761.

Y. M. C. A. FIVE LOST TO ST. JOHN'S FIVE

Association Five Put up a Good Game But Lost by Count of 32 to 21.

The Y. M. C. A. basketball team met with defeat at the hands of the St. John's five, at New Brunswick, last night, the final count being 32 to 21. The game was interesting and close but the presence of four large pillars in the centre of the floor interfered with good teamwork of the local five, while the Brunswick players were used to the "dodging stunt."

The time of the first half ran on to fully ten minutes before a score was made, Polinsky dropping in a foul, which was quickly followed up by a field goal from Brynairski. The scoring of the initial period was low and the home team was two points to the good at the end of the half. The score was 12 to 10.

YALE VS. SPRINGFIELD.

The Yale University football schedule for next year contains a game with the Springfield Y. M. C. A. College eleven, which will be played in the Yale Bowl. "Hub" Stine, of the borough, is a member of the Springfield eleven and will undoubtedly get a place on the team next season. Last year, "Hub" played a full game against the Harvard champions, but that team is not on the Springfield schedule for next year.

HOLY CROSS MEETING.

Members of the Holy Cross football club will hold an important meeting in Manager "Doc" Doyle's studio, on West Front street, tomorrow night, when final arrangements for the club benefit in the Astor Theatre will be made. Tickets for the event have been printed and will be circulated among the members at the meeting.

TAILENDERS PLAY.

Three teams play in the Elks house tournament tonight, the Cose VanBuren and Hoyt aggregations being the rollers. None of these teams have yet won a game and all have lost two so there will be a break in last place after tonight's matches.

PARK CLUB VS. ELKS.

The Elks' and Park Club bowling teams will play on the Washington avenue alleys tonight. This is the second match of the series between these two clubs and the odd game of the first went to the Watchung avenue club pinners.

SIGN OF SPRING.

It may help to make these winter days more agreeable to know that this week Leland Stanford University started off the intercollegiate baseball schedule of the Pacific coast territory. Leland Stanford is out in California.

Crows	4	11	.267	953

The Dove team, of the Columbus Club five-man bowling tourney, broke a tie for sixth place, last night, and advanced over the Peacocks, who were idle. The Doves copped the last two games of the match with the Crows, who are now deeper down in last place than ever. The Crows were the easy victors of the first game, 83 pins separating the two scores. The Dove pinners were below form in this game and their highest mark was 162, while the others were 136, 111, 143 and 148. McAfee, of the Crows, did not show up for the match and he was given an average of 145 for the three games. The scores of the first game were 783 to 700.

The second game was the closest of the matcer, the scores being 760 to 739 in favor of the Doves. Shannon returned to form with a 190 and McCarty rolled 163. The scores of McCarty, Hann and Shannon in the last and deciding roll were enough to put the game and the match to the credit of their team.

WEEKLY COMPETITION AT THE PARK CLUB

A. M. Abbott, J. J. Sharretts and Dr. Hubbard Winners of Weekly Points.

A. M. Abbott won the highest number of points in the weekly competition of the handicap five-back tournament at the Park Club, last night. His score was 188 and with a handicap of five points, his 193 was the best turned in. Because of this high score he was put down for scratch in next week's games. J. J. Sharretts took second honors with a total of 190. He had a score of 157 and a handicap of 33.

Dr. Hubbard won the remaining point with a 177 and he was hard pressed by Dumont, who was three points below this mark. Dr. Hubbard turned in a 161 and a handicap of 16. The results follow:

GERMANY IN NO FEAR OF FAMINE

Can't Be Conquered by Starvation, Says Minister.

GRAIN CROP SUFFICIENT.

Meat and Eggs May Become Luxuries. Three Million Fewer Mouths to Feed Now Than In Times of Peace—Grain For Feeding Animals Has Been Forbidden.

Baron von Schorlemer, minister of agriculture of Germany, put to flight the idea that Germany can be forced into submission by starvation. With his fingers figuratively on the agricultural resources of the country, Baron Schorlemer went into much detail in attempting to prove his assertion, talking with a United Press correspondent, that Germany can feed her population and her vast armies for an indefinite period without importations of farm products and foodstuffs.

"If England thinks she can starve Germany into submission, failing to conquer us by arms," said the German minister, "she will find she has made a miscalculation. Germany can produce enough food to feed her population for any period the war may last, provided we continue our economizing and elimination of waste. Germany will not starve—no, nor half starve."

No Fear of Famine.

Baron von Schorlemer, who has been mentioned frequently as the next imperial chancellor, was unusually candid through his interview. He frankly admitted that he was not "exactly an optimist on the food question when the war broke out." The first months of the war, he declared, however, had shown that Germany need not fear a famine.

"In the first place," explained the minister, "we have 3,000,000 fewer mouths to feed now than in times of peace. These figures represent foreigners who have left Germany and our soldiers who are subsisting off the enemy's territory. They represent a saving of approximately 1,000,000 tons of grain and 2,000,000 tons of potatoes Add to this the great saving and elimination of waste by the people because of the war."

Baron Schorlemer turned to statistics gathered by his department showing average consumption and use of grain for all purposes. He pointed out that these figures showed that the annual requirements for 6,000,000 persons are 15,760,000 tons of grain for bread and 43,296,000 tons of potatoes.

"Our crop last year," he said, "exclusive of the seed, was: Grains, 14,651,000 tons; potatoes, 48,662,000 tons This left 1,109,000 tons of grains to be imported and a surplus of 5,366,000 tons of potatoes. We exported 581,921 tons of rye, but imported 2,007,610 tons of wheat. Exportations of foodstuffs is prohibited, and therefore the surplus rye and potato production will go a long way toward filling up the lack between production and consumption of wheat usually covered by imports.

"The use of grain for feeding animals or for industrial purposes has been forbidden. There is to be a small percentage of rye flour used in making wheat bread and not less than 5 per cent of potato flour in rye bread. Many use 10 per cent.

"Two hundred factories are being established for the manufacture of potato flour. There were 300,000 tons of grain left from last year's crops. One million tons of grains will be saved through prohibition of feeding it to animals. The mixture of rye with wheat and potato flour with rye to make bread means a vast addition to the bread supply."

Meat May Be Luxury.

Asked regarding Germany's meat supply, Baron von Schorlemer was not so optimistic. Of the per capita consumption of 116 pounds of meat, 108, said the minister, were produced in Germany. Fowls, and especially geese, may become very scare, he declared, as most of the supply has come formerly from Russia, and eggs may become a great luxury.

"Over 7,000,000 tons of geese of the 8,368,872 Germany imported last year," said the baron, "came from Russia; one-third of the 12,683 tons of chickens we imported came from Russia.

"We will have to go without approximately 166,286 tons of eggs which we imported last year, and we will have to replace coffee, tea and cocoa with something else. We produce more sugar than we use. Wool and rubber supplies may run low and become scarce even. Private individuals cannot now purchase automobiles or tires.

"Our annual census shows gratifying figures. Less than a year ago there were 20,994,844 head of cattle, 5,520,837 head of sheep, 25,669,140 hogs and 3,548,384 goats. There were 3,226,640 horses in Prussia alone at that time.

"Before this supply is gone we will get no slight amount more through importation, despite present unsatisfactory conditions along this line."

Ask Music Stores For Lead.

The lead supply is running so low in Germany a secret order is said to have been issued to music stores to turn over to the government all lead in pianos and other musical instruments in which it is used.

STOP CATARRH! OPEN NOSTRILS AND HEAD

Says Cream Applied in Nostrils Relieves Head-Colds at Once.

If your nostrils are clogged and your head is stuffed and you can't breathe freely because of a cold or catarrh, just get a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm at any drug store. Apply a little of this fragrant, antiseptic cream into your nostrils and let it penetrate through every air passage of your head, soothing and healing the inflamed, swollen mucous membrane and you get instant relief.

Ah! How good it feels. Your nostrils are open, your head is clear, no more hawking, snuffling, blowing; no more headache, dryness or struggling for breath. Ely's Cream Balm is just what sufferers from head colds and catarrh need. It's a delight.—Adv.

LOVE AFFAIR BLAMED FOR LONG BRANCH MAN'S SUICIDE

Long Branch, Jan. 15.—Leroy Durham, twenty-two years old, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Durham, of Morris avenue, committed suicide yesterday, by inhaling gas. A girl's veil and handkerchief were found beside him on the bed and he was fully dressed when found. It is intimated that he was driven to the act because of an unfortunate love affair.

Durham told Herman Spiegel, who lives next door, that he wouldn't see him again in his room. This was Wednesday night before he retired. The gas jet was turned on full.

ROADS MADE IMPASSIBLE BY FLOODS NEAR STIRLING

Stirling, Jan. 1.—Water yesterday covered more land in the vicinity of this place than at any time since 1902, according to those who remember conditions during the freshet in that year when a portion of Paterson was inundated and sections of Wallington and Passaic swept away. The Passaic River has overflowed and the direct roads between this place and Mt. Bethel cannot be traveled.

Mt. Bethel, ordinarily a five-mile trip, cannot be reached now except by a ten-mile detour. The water has made islands of the ground surrounding many farmhouses.

TEACHERS WANT WOMAN ON JERSEY CITY SCHOOL BOARD

Jersey City, Jan. 15.—Several teachers in the schools of this city called upon Mayor Mark M. Fagan, Wednesday afternoon, and asked him to appoint Miss Lydia K. Ennis, a former vice principal, to the Board of Education when he names three new members January 1. The Mayor promised to consider the request.

Miss Ennis for many years was a member of the legislative committee of the State Teachers' Association. It is understood that Mayor Fagan is thinking seriously of appointing another woman to the Board to serve with Miss Cornelia Bradford, who was named by Mayor Wittpenn. There are almost as many women aspirants for the position as there are men who want the other two appointments.

CLAIMS LILLIAN NORDICA SEPARATED FROM HUSBAND

Revelation that the late Lillian Nordica did not get along amicably with her husband, George W. Young, is contained in the complaint filed in the Supreme Court in New York, yesterday, by Robert W. Baldwin, an executor of the Nordica estate and a nephew of the singer. Mr. Baldwin obtained an order restraining Mr. Young from probating in Monmouth county a will made by the diva prior to the one she executed just before her death.

Mr. Baldwin's complaint relates that before January 10, 1914, Mme. Nordica had separated from her husband, although they were supposed to be living together at their home in West Twelfth street, New York. They had a country home at Deal Beach. The singer's estate is said to be worth more than $1,000,000. Her first will left most of the property to her husband, but that made a Batavia, Java, where she died, disinherited him.

The restraining order had the effect of keeping from the public letters in the Baldwin complaint which were admitted by Bainbridge Colby, of counsel for Mr. Young, to be objectionable. The letters are said to have been written by Mme. Nordica.

Mr. Young has been served with papers directing him to appear today in Surrogate's Court to answer to discovery proceedings brought by Leslie J. Tompkins, temporary receiver of the Nordica estate, to determine the property belonging to the singer remaining in the husband's possession.

ARRESTED FOR BREAKING DAM

Elizabeth, Jan. 15—Three laborers, said to have been employed by the authorities of Roselle Park, yesterday demolished a wall built by this city to prevent a sewer of the neighboring municipality from overflowing on local property. Some one saw them start and before they could complete the job a squad of Elizabeth police descended on them and haled them before Police Judge O. P. Mahon, who held them in $100 bail apiece for a hearing January 22. The sewer lies at Galloping Hill road and Grant avenue, at the boundary between this place and Roselle Park. It overflowed in rainy weather and fearing this might give some one grounds to sue the city the street department dammed it up three weeks ago and had the police keep watch to prevent just what occurred yesterday. The laborers arrested were Mortimer Shea, Edward Scudder and Galus Tipping.

LOST HEIRLOOM FOUND.

Jersey City, Jan. 15—When George E. Beckley, superintendent of the Union Trust Company's building, reached his home, 730 Park avenue, Weehawken, Tuesday night, he found a letter from his sister, Mrs. Edward W. Doughty, informing him of the loss of a gold stickpin, which had been in the family many years. With the letter was delivered a turkey, sent by Mrs. Doughty, parcel post. When the bird was carved Wednesday night the missing pin was found embedded. Without waiting to finish his dinner, Mr. Beckley hurried to the nearest telegraph office and sent the following message: "The turkey had the heirloom. Letter with details following."

LEGISLATURE FACES DEFICIT.

Little Rock, Ark., Jan. 15—The State Legislature, which convened today, is facing the problem of a deficit in the finances of the State government. According to John W. Crockett, State treasurer, the general reserve fund, from which current expenses are paid, is overdrawn almost $400,000, and the State is going into debt at the rate of $40,000 per month.

CHAPTER X.

The Warp In Fortune's Wheel.

ON the sixth night of play at the Elkhorn the limit was reduced to $5.

"It's all right," Smoke assured the gamekeeper. "I want $3,500 tonight, as usual, and you only compel me to play longer. I've got to pick twice as many winners; that's all."

"Why don't you buck somebody else's table?" the keeper demanded wrathfully.

"Because I like this one." Smoke glanced over at the roaring stove only a few feet away. "Besides, there are no drafts here, and it is warm and comfortable."

On the ninth night, when Shorty had carried the dust home, he had a fit.

"I quit, Smoke; I quit," he began. "I know when I got enough. I ain't dreamin'. I'm wide awake. A system can't be, but you got one just the same. There's nothin' in the rule o' three. The almanac's clean out. The world's gone smash. There's nothin' regular an' uniform no more. The multiplication table's gone loco. Two is eight, nine is eleven, and two times two is eight hundred an' forty-six—an' a half. Anything is everything, an' nothin's all, an' twice all is cold cream, milk shakes an' calico horses.

"You've got a system. Figgers beat the figgerin'. What ain't is, an' what isn't has to be. The sun rises in the west, the moon's a pay streak, the stars in canned corn beef, scurvy's the blessin' of God, him that dies kicks again, rocks floats, water's gas, I ain't me, you're somebody else, an' mebbe we're twins if we ain't hashed brown potatoes fried in verdigris. Wake me up, somebody! Oh, wake me up!"

The next morning a visitor came to the cabin. Smoke knew him—Harvey Moran, the owner of all the games in the Tivoli. There was a note of appeal in his deep, gruff voice as he plunged into his business.

"It's like this,' Smoke," he began. "You've got us all guessing. I'm representing nine other game owners and myself from all the saloons in town. We don't understand. We know that no system ever worked against roulette. All the mathematic sharps in the colleges have told us gamblers the same thing. They say that roulette itself is the system, the one and only system, and therefore that no system can beat it, for that would mean arithmetic has gone bughouse."

"Well, you've seen me play," Smoke answered defiantly, "and, if you think it's only a string of luck on my part, why worry?"

"That's the trouble. We can't help worrying. It's a system you've got and all the time we know it can't be. I've watched you five nights now, and all I can make out is that you favor certain numbers and keep on winning.

"Now, the ten of us game owners have got together, and we want to make a friendly proposition.' We'll put a roulette table in a back room of the Elkhorn, pool the bank against you and have you buck us. It will be all quiet and private—just you and Shorty and us. What do you say?"

"I think it's the other way around," Smoke answered. "It's up to you to come and see me. I'll be playing in the barroom of the Elkhorn tonight. You can watch me there just as well."

That night when Smoke took up his customary place at the table the keeper shut down the game. "The game's closed," he said. "Boss' orders."

But the assembled game owners were not to be balked. In a few minutes they arranged a pool, each putting in a thousand, and took over the table.

"Come on and buck us," Harvey Moran challenged as the keeper sent the ball on its first whirl around.

"Give me the twenty-five limit?" Smoke suggested.

"Sure; go to it."

Smoke immediately placed twenty-five chips on "00" and won.

Moran wiped the sweat from his forehead. "Go on," he said; "we got ten thousand in this bank."

At the end of an hour and a half the ten thousand was Smoke's.

"Got enough?" Smoke asked.

The game owners looked at one another. They were awed. They, the fatted proteges of the laws of chance, were undone.

"We quit," Moran said. "Ain't that right, Burke?"

Big Burke, who owned the games in the M. and G. saloon, nodded. "The impossible has happened," he said. "This Smoke here has got a system all right. If we let him go on we'll all bust. All I can see, if we're going to keep our tables running, is to cut down the limit to $1 or 10 cents of 1 cent. He won't win much in a night with such stakes."

All looked at Smoke. He shrugged his shoulders.

"In that case, gentlemen, I'll have to hire a gang of men to play at all your tables. I can pay them $10 for a four hour shift and make money."

"Then we'll shut down our tables," Big Burke replied, "unless"—he hesitated and ran his eye over his fellows to see that they were with him—"unless you're willing to talk business. What will you sell the system for?"

"Thirty thousand dollars," Smoke answered. "That's a tax of $3,000 apiece."

They debated and nodded. "And you'll tell us your system?"

"Surely."

"And you'll promise not to play roulette in Dawson ever again?"

"No, sir," Smoke said positively. "I'll promise not to play this system again."

"Great Scott!" Moran exploded. "You haven't got other systems, have you?"

"Hold on!" Shorty cried. "I want to talk to my partner. Come over here, Smoke, on the side."

Smoke followed into a quiet corner of the room, while hundreds of curious eyes centered on him and Shorty.

"Look here, Smoke," Shorty whispered hoarsely, "mebbe it ain't a dream, in which case you're sellin' out almighty cheap. You've sure got the world by the slack of its pants. They's millions in it. Shake it! Shake it hard! If you sell out for thirty thousan' I'll never forgive you."

"When I sell out for thirty thousand you'll fall on my neck an' wake up to find out that you haven't been dreaming at all. This is no dream, Shorty. In about two minutes you'll see you have been wide awake all the time. Let me tell you that when I sell out it's because I've got to sell out."

Back at the table Smoke informed the game owners that his offer still held. They proffered him their paper to the extent of three thousand each.

"I was about to intimate that I'd take the money weighed out," Smoke said.

The owner of the Elkhorn cashed their paper, and Shorty took possession of the gold dust.

"Now I don't want to wake up," he chortled as he hefted the various sacks. "Toted up, it's a seventy thousan' dream. It'll be too blamed expensive to open my eyes, roll out of the blanket an' start breakfast."

"What's your system?" Big Burke demanded. "We've paid for it, and we want it."

Smoke led the way to the table. "Now, gentlemen, bear with me a moment. This isn't an ordinary system. It can scarcely be called legitimate, but its one great virtue is that it works. I've got my suspicions, but I'm not saying anything. You watch. Mr. Keeper, be ready with the ball. Wait I am going to pick '26.' Consider I've bet on it. Be ready, Mr. Keeper. Now!"

The ball whirled around.

"You observe," Smoke went on, "that '9' was directly opposite."

The ball finished in "26."

Big Burke swore deep in his chest and all waited.

"For '00' to win '11' must be opposite. Try it yourself and see."

"But the system?" Moran demanded impatiently. "We know you can pick winning numbers, and we know what those numbers are, but how do you do it?"

"By observed sequences. By accident I chanced twice to notice the ball whirled when '9' was opposite. Both times '26' won. After that I saw it happen again. Then I looked for other sequences and found them. 'Double naught' opposite fetches '32' and '11' fetches '00.' It doesn't always happen, but it usually happens. You notice I say 'usually.' As I said before, I have my suspicions, but I'm not saying anything."

"I'll promise not to play this system again."

Big Burke, with a sudden flash of comprehension, reached over, stopped the wheel and examined it carefully. The heads of the nine other game owners bent over and joined in the examination. Big Burke straightened up and cast a glance at the nearby stove.

"H—!" he said. "It wasn't any system at all. The table stood close to the fire, and the blamed wheel's warped, and we've been worked to a frazzle. No wonder he liked this table. He couldn't have bucked for sour apples at any other table."

Later, back in the cabin, Shorty silently overhauled and hefted the various bulging gold sacks. He finally piled them on the table, sat down on the edge of his bunk and began taking off his moccasins.

"Seventy thousan'," he calculated. "It weighs 350 pounds. And all out of a warped wheel an' a quick eye' Smoke, you eat 'em raw; you eat 'em alive; you work under water; you've given me the jimjams, but just the same I know it's a dream. It's only in dreams that the good things comes true. I'm mighty unanxious to wake up. I hope I never wake up."

Of Interest to Women and the Home

Daddy's Bedtime Story — How Mr. and Mrs. Hassenpef Moved.

They Rolled Up the Carpet.

"KIDDIES, I'm going to tell you a story about faroff Belgium," said daddy as the children climbed up on the divan to listen to the evening story.

"All right, daddy," sang out the kiddies, who were very much interested in all the war countries.

"This is about Mr. and Mrs. Hassenpef and their little kiddies. When the war broke out Mr. and Mrs. Hassenpef had their household goods packed to move when Antwerp fell into the hands of the Germans.

"Of course kiddies always like to move. The dismantling of room after room is like a new and fascinating game for them. The rolling of carpets and the packing up of furniture satisfy their sense of adventure and mystery.

"So little Hans and Gertrude were very happy helping their mother and father, playing hide and seek about the packed up furniture and having a big time generally.

"But they'd no idea of the adventures they were to have before they were settled in another house.

"One day the packing was all done, and then a moving van came, and all the furniture was packed into it. It was a queer looking van, like a big house on wheels, and it was a motor moving van.

"Little Hans and Gertrude screamed with joy when they saw this van and begged to be allowed to play in it for a little while. So while the men were moving the furniture into the street preparatory to packing it into the van the kiddies played 'keeping house' in it.

"Then when the furniture was all packed the big van that looked like a house whizzed away. Then little Hans and Gertrude were taken on a train to a seaport and there embarked upon a big ship.

"They had a beautiful time on shipboard and had almost forgotten about the big moving van when one day Papa Hassenpef took them by the hand and led them down some flights of stairs, and there in the hold of the ship they were surprised to see the big moving van with their household furniture all safe and snug within.

"When they arrived at the new home in New York city the big moving van had preceded them, and workmen were busy unloading the furniture when Hans and Gertrude arrived there.

"You may be sure that they were very much surprised little children to see the same moving van again, and after the furniture was all taken out they played in it, as they had in Belgium."

The Wife's Money

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

"Please take these away," said Miles Watkins, pushing a pile of letters away from his plate. "I can't eat a thing if I open them. I have been dunned till I am afraid to open a letter."

"The first of the month is always hard in that way," said Mrs. Watkins, perfunctorily.

"If they were just the month's bills I would not mind, but some of these are six months old. I am in debt for our furniture, and I am not making enough to keep up our present pace and ever catch up and break even." Silence fell between them while he ate his dinner.

After dinner he took the pile of bills to the living room and began opening and sorting them. When Mrs. Watkins came in he said: "I wish you would go over these things with me and see if together we can't find a way to retrench and square ourselves," and he reached out his hand to her.

"I know nothing of business, Miles," she said, not noticing the gesture, and she began looking over the evening paper.

Finally he said in a constrained manner: "Blanche, I feel like a beast to ask it, but——"

She looked up listlessly.

"You know that amethyst necklace I gave you. It isn't paid for yet, and the jeweler says in this note that if I am unable to pay for it this month he will take it back and let the $5 down payment go for the use of it you have had. It is very decent of him, I'm sure."

She stared at him highly offended. "Are you going to do it?" she asked coldly.

"Really, Blanche, it seems the only sensible thing to do. I am sick over the whole mess. I never thought much about debt before I was married. I bought everything I wanted and usually there was enough money to go around, but it's different now. We neither of us knew how to be saving and I am getting scared about the size of the debts."

She rose and left the room and presently returned, bringing her jewel box. She opened it before him and said frigidly: "Take anything you want. There is my engagement ring and my wedding ring," slipping it off her finger and putting it in the box with the other jewels. Then she resumed her reading of the news.

He was stung by her attitude, and did not touch the box. Finally he said, as he looked up from his figuring:

"I think we can manage to pay for the amethysts if we take a cheaper apartment."

"Do you wish to move in winter?" she asked.

"I am not hunting now for things I wish to do. I am trying to devise a way to become an honest man and pay my debts," he answered in a low, tense voice.

"Didn't you take a lease for a year?" she queried.

"I think I can find someone to take this place off our hands. It is a very attractive apartment. We shall have to go into one of those new suites on the corner. They are $10 a month cheaper than this," he replied.

"I don't want to live in those little stuffy rooms," said Blanche, pettishly.

"Just what do you propose to do to help out? Your part seems to be to block the wheel every turn I try to make," said her husband angrily. He had never spoken to her in that tone before.

"I don't know what to do; but I do not want to move. I would rather have the amethysts go back," she said, beginning to cry. "It would be so humiliating to move into cheaper quarters six months after we were married."

"I am sorry to have to do either, dear," he said pitying her distress, "and if you will give them up now I will replace them just as soon as possible. Can't you get along on $5 less a month for housekeeping expenses? Give me less to eat," he added, laughing.

"If you will give up smoking I will try it," she said, wiping her eyes.

"I will do it. And I am sure we can find other ways to manage better. We simply must do it, and both must look for ways to check our expenses. We have been too careless."

NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS.

Notice is hereby given that the Board of Education will meet on Monday, February 5, 1915, at 8 p. m., at the Board room in the High School building, corner Ninth Street and Arlington Avenue, in the City of Plainfield, at which time and place the said Board of Education will receive sealed proposals for furnishing 200 tons more or less, of the best anthracite Buckwheat coal for steaming and hot-air purposes.

Parties bidding will be required to specify in their bids the name of the coal and shippers of same.

The coal to be non-clinking, thoroughly screened over a sieve fine enough to take out all dust and small particles of coal and to be of quality acceptable to the Board of Education or their agent.

All coal to be placed in the coal bins in the High School without any extra expense to the Board for handling or trimming the coal in the bins, and to be delivered at such time as the Board may direct.

Bids to specify whether long or short tons are to be delivered.

All proposals to be sealed and endorsed "Proposals for Coal," and addressed to the Secretary of the Board.

No proposals will be opened prior to 8 p. m. Monday, February 1, 1915, and none will be received later than that hour.

Bidders may attend the meeting of the Board on February 1, 1915, and submit their bids in person, but in writing, if desired.

The Board of Education reserves the right to reject any or all bids.

For the Board of Education.

The annual meeting of the Somerset County Past Councilors' Association, Jr. O. U. A. M., was held with Pioneer Council, No. 58, at this place on Wednesday night, with the following county officers in charge: Councilor Isaac N. Wyckoff, of No. 72; Vice-Councilor S. V. DeMond, of No. 237; Conductor Herbert VanPelt, of No. 263; Warden Fred Conklin, of No. 150; Inside Sentinel Harry G. Auten, of No. 72; Outside Sentinel Roy Rinehart, of No. 58; Jr. Past Councilor William B. LaRue; Recording Secretary Harry S. Johnson, of No. 58, and County Chaplain Abraham Tunison, of No. 72. It was reported that the first annual banquet would be held in the Methodist church February 19, the speaker to be Ex-Governor E. C. Stokes, of Fidelity Council. The nominating committee nominated the following officers, which were elected: Councilor, Simon V. DeMond; vice-councilor, Herbert VanPelt; Jr. past councilor, Isaac N. Wyckoff; conductor, Fred Conklin; warden, John Frost; chaplain, Rev. B. V. D. Wyckoff; inside sentinel, W. H. Vail; outside sentinel, George Zimmerman. The officers-elect were installed by State Councilor R. F. vonMinden, of New Market, who gave a short address. As this was musical meeting Pioneer Council provided the following selections: Violin solo, Archie C. LaRue; acompanied by Miss Bunting; vocal solos by Elwood W. Stryker and F. LeRoy Fisher, accompanied by Miss May Fisher. Four new members were added to the association, making a total membership of 105. The next meeting will be held at Bernardsville on February 5.

Household Hints

THINGS WORTH KNOWING

To keep birds from mussing up the porches, etc., put a black rag or old black stocking into thes crevice where they congregate; they won't bother you any more.

For Mothers With Babies—Have you ever tried pasting fine sandpaper on the soles of baby's shoes, when learning to walk? It will prevent him slipping, giving a firm foothold and also prevent many unnecessary falls and bumps.

For Bedbugs—Use corrosive sublimate and turpentine, equal parts. It is very poisonous, so be sure to keep it where children won't get hold of it.

To Freshen Bacon—Cut slices ready for frying. Let them soak about 12 hours in sour milk. Wash thoroughly and fry in hot lard or drippings. The bacon will be very much better and more palatable than if freshened in water.

THE TABLE

Turkey Loaf—Blend one-fourth cup stale bread crumbs (or cracker crumbs) with about two tablespoons soft butter; add two-thirds cup milk. Put on stove and let simmer five minutes, stirring constantly. Add one cup chopped cooked cold turkey, two teaspoons chopped parsley and three well-beaten eggs. Season with salt and pepper. Turn into well-buttered mold, set in pan of hot water, cover with buttered paper, bake until firm. Remove to serving dish. Garnish with parsley.

Stuffed Onions—Scoop hearts out of large onions, to form cups; mix pieces of onion cut out with minced meat (sausage is best, but any meat can be used if flavored with a little bacon); add a dash of mace and tablespoon of cream. Stuff onions with this and bake an hour, basting often with melted butter. Take out and place on warm dish. Squeeze half a lemon into juice in baking pan and add tablespoon of browned flour. When this comes to a boil add four tablespoons cream and pour over the onions.

Horseradish and Beet Relish—Boil one quart beets till done; peel. Grate one large root horseradish; also the cooked beets. Add together, with one tablespoon salt, one cup or more white vinegar, sugar to taste. Mix all together thoroughly, put in glass jars and seal tight; will make two quarts.

Cranberry Pudding—Cream half cup butter with one cup sugar, add three beaten eggs. Sift 3½ cups flour with two teaspoons baking powder and stir into the butter mixture with half cup milk. Then mix in the cranberries; pour into pudding mold and steam three hours. Sprinkle with nutmeg, serve with cream and sugar.

Rice and Meat Croquettes—One cup boiled seasoned rice, one cup finely chopped cooked meat (any kind will do), one saltspoon salt, a little pepper, two tablespoons butter, half cup milk, one egg. Put milk on to boil, add meat, rice and seasoning. When this boils add egg, well beaten. Stir one minute, remove from fire and when cool shape like croquettes. Dip in beaten egg, then in cracker crumbs and fry in hot fat till brown.

White and Yellow Pudding—Dissolve one tablespoon cornstarch in a little cold water, add small pinch salt and one-fourth cup sugar; pour over one pint of boiling water, stirring constantly. Stir in whites of two eggs beaten stiff, boil one minute more and pour into square granite pan which has been dipped in cold water. Set in cold place. Make custard of one cup sweet milk, two beaten egg yolks and half cup sugar. Boil and flavor with lemon. Let get cold. At serving time cut slices of the white and pour a spoonful of the yellow over it.

Flank Steak is cheaper than other cuts of meat and there is absolutely no waste. Have butcher score it. Salt, pepper and pound flour into both sides. Fry good and brown in suet, then pour hot water over to cover, and simmer (with lid on) about two hours. If necessary add more water; 20 minutes before done add three onions sliced. Add a little thickening to the gravy, which will be rich and brown.

New and Incomparable Blouses at $2 to $6.95

Blouses of Sand-Color Net---Embroidered in Gold----$2.95

Have You Ever Heard of Such a Value?

Sand-color net is the newest material for transparent blouses.

Gold embroidery is the "last word" in fine trimmings, and this is the first time, to our knowledge, that it has been used on a blouse which sold for less than $10.

As these Blouses are lined with flesh-color chiffon, the color harmony is very effective.

Spring Blouses of Georgette Crepe, $3.95

Both Paris and New York fashion authorities predict that this material will lead all others this Spring. It is dainty, has a tone of elegance and launders beautifully. These blouses, which are in flesh-color and white, are trimmed with Venise and shadow laces.

New Voile Blouses at $2 and $2.95

Blouses of Radium Silk—Washable—$3.95, $5, $5.95 and $6.95

The Coats that Women Want—at $9.50 to $29.50

Plush now has the greatest following of devotees because it is rich in appearance and is warm—in fact, it is the best substitute for furs.

Fur-trimmed Plush Coats
At $15, $19.50, $25 to $29.50

Those at $15 have collars of skunk-opossum, the $19.50 coats have "chokers" and cuffs of this same attractive fur, and those at $25 have collars and deep cuffs of the fur—the latter coats are lined with artistic flower-printed silks, while those at the other prices are lined with plain peau de cygne.

"Waved Plush," which is lighter in weight, might be called more dressy. The coats of this fabric at $25 and $29.50 are also trimmed with skunk-opossum.

Coats of Imported Leopardskin Cloth, $9.50

- Proctor's Theatre -

The World Film Corporation five act photo-play based on the famous William A. Brady production, "As Ye Sow," which will be shown at Proctor's Theatre, Monday and Tuesday was written by a clergyman, the Rev. John Snyder, and was produced with great success ten years ago. Alice Brady in this film has a part which will unquestionably establish her reputation as a screen actress. This part is that of Dora, the "woman who suffers and endures" of the play. The daughter of a wealthy man she marries a good looking young fellow from the country who has made an auspicious start in New York business life. Having won the girl by trickery he proceeds to reveal a baseness of disposition which makes the life of his young wife a terrible burden. He becomes a drunkard and ill-treats his wife and baby child. Dora resents his cruelty and he robs her of the child, surreptitiously conveying it to his mother and then, himself, going away to sea on a fishing schooner.

Dora, bereft of husband and child, becomes a prey to grief. She is in all essentials a widow, for the news comes that her vicious young husband was drowned at sea. Fresh sufferings await the girl, calling for the display of sustained emotional power on the part of Miss Brady. Concealing her identity she makes her way to the fishing village where her husband was born; becomes the paying guest of his mother; recognizes her own child; and excites the love of her husband's brother, now a clergyman.

These poignant situations make this photo-play a drama of strong heart interest, and keep Miss Brady at her tensest as an emotional actress.

Dora's troubles are about to recommence with undiminished severity. Her husband married her under a false name, so she is in ignorance of his relatives. And in this state of ignorance she lends a willing ear to the wooings of the Rev. John St. John, her late husband's brother. The wedding ceremony is about to take place when a storm at sea arises; a ship in distress is sighted; there is a call to man the life-boat, and Dora's fiancee volunteers. Amongst the rescued there is Dora's legal husband, Frank.

The drama enters upon its third episode when Dora's sufferings reach their climax. Frank re-asserts his claim to wife and child; grows jealous of his brother and once more becomes a drunkard. One of his New York reprobate companions appears to demand money. There is a quarrel and both men are killed.

The sinful man has reaped as he has sowed and like so many of his kind has made others suffer for his misdeeds, particularly the fond girl who married him. Dora Leland, in the hands of Alice Brady, will without doubt win the sympathies of the millions of women and girls who look at World Films.

The shipwreck; the life of the Massachusetts fishing village; the scenes in New York, make fine opportunities for the producer to offer some striking sets and effects.

BANKS AND TRUST COMPANIES PAY TAX

Majority of Institutions Meet Assessment as an Item of Expense.

While banks and trust companies throughout New Jersey have paid their new State tax of three-fourths of one per cent. on capital, surplus and undivided profits for the first time this year, their officers admit that their methods of payment were largely in the nature of an experiment and may not be continued.

Most banks paid the tax as an item of expense and charged it to the profit and loss account. Others deducted the amount, or a portion of it, from the dividends, and a few "washed their hands of it" entirely and put it up to the stockholders to make the payment. Many blanks followed a system of giving the tax receipts, instead of cash, to stockholders as a special dividend.

In many quarters there is a belief that the banks had no legal right to pay the tax as items of expense, but should pay it as special dividends, or else allow the stockholders themselves to take care of the payments. Former Governor Edward C. Stokes, president of the Mechanics' National Bank, of Trenton, is one of these. That institution, however, paid the tax as it would any other obligation and charged it to the running expenses of the bank. Mr. Stokes declares that next year it will be paid as a special dividend.

Mr. Stokes points out that national banks cannot be taxed, but that the present tax is sustained on the theory that it is a tax on the personal property of the stockholders. This being the case, he maintains, the banks have no more right to make the payment from their own funds than they would have to pay taxes on furniture or other personal property belonging to stockholders.

In this city The Plainfield Trust Company, the First National Bank and The State Trust Company assumed the tax, while the case of the City National Bank the directors paid the sum. The Plainfield Savings Bank is not affected by the new act.

BIG FLEET IS OFF FOR CANAL OPENING

Washington, Jan. 15.—The big Atlantic fleet, spick and span, is off for the winter cruise and war maneuvres in southern waters. After a month of practice, the fleet will escort the Oregon, the old bulldog of the navy, in the formal opening of the Panama Canal.

Rear Admiral Frank F. Fletcher, who last year distinguished himself in handling the navy's end of the Mexican situation at Vera Cruz, is in command of the big fleet. The base of operations will be at Guantanamo, Cuba.

LABOR MEN ARE TO ESTABLISH OWN BANKS

Philadelphia, Pa., Jan. 15.—With the completion today of the referendum vote by the members of the Bridge and Structural Iron Workers, the establishment of a chain of labor banks within the coming year appears more certain. The vote is being tabulated, and leaders in the movement declare it has carried. The executive board of the union will at once take steps to establish a depository, if the result is favorable.

The movement for workmen to control their own banks is a duplicate of the farmers' co-operative system. It is yet in its infancy, but many branches of organized trades are watching the outcome of the innovation and will follow suit when it is proven a success.

A great central labor bank is more than a mere possibility today. Union men believe that the time has come when they should control their own financial resources and place them where they would bring benefit to workmen. Co-operation in creating better working conditions and securing better wages has led to the inevitable consideration of co-operation in productive industry.

IMPORTANT CROP CONFERENCE BEING HELD IN GEORGIA

Athens, Ga., Jan. 15.—One of the most important meetings of farmers of Georgia began here today, when the agriculturists came together to discuss the methods of raising and marketing other crops than cotton. The movement to curtail the cotton production has brought to the front many questions pertaining to the crops which are to supplant cotton.

Today's meeting was a market conference. Many speakers were heard on the methods of harvesting and preparing for market hay, oats, corn, etc. The use of modern implements was described, and many suggestions were made to the farmers who will shift their crop the coming spring for the first time.

Tomorrow the annual meeting of the Georgia Breeders' Association will take place. Dr. L. H. Smith, of the University of Illinois, will be a speaker. Next Monday the Georgia Dairy and Livestock Association will meet. On Tuesday the State Horticultural Society holds its annual meeting, at which prominent speakers will be heard on truck gardening and fruit culture. The last of the meetings will be that of the newly-formed Georgia Apple Growers' Association.

NOTES FROM LABOR FIELD

Uruguay has enacted an accident prevention law.

Two million children under 16 years old are employed in this country.

Illness among workers involves an annual loss of $750,000,000 in the United States.

The coal operators of West Virginia have formed a new organization to fight the miners' unions.

The unemployment distress is severe in the big cities. Recent reports show only the ablest are getting jobs

The Bell Telephone employes are offered stock on weekly payments, to begin next March. The move is questioned by labor men.

That the present movement for the uplift of the toiling masses originated with Dickens is the belief of a prominent professor.

Porto Rico's Legislature has passed a compensation act, a women's eight hour law and a child labor law.

British unions spend $19,000,000 a year—one-third for strikes—and have $25,000,000 in accumulated funds.

Workmen's co-operative banks, operated by workmen, for the benefit of workmen only, and to aid honest ventures of workmen, is in prospect.

Nearly every legislature in the United States is facing this week the problem of improving its labor laws. The outlook is hopeful in many States.

Out in Racine, Wisconsin, they recently gave a six weeks' college course in janitor work. 23 men responded for tutoring in this fine art.

New Jersey Accident Board must decide a unique case. A Newark workmen killed at Natick, Mass., has children living in Italy. The liability company claims children living abroad are not dependents.

Union Pacific employes must take three baths a week, drink three pints of water a day, are encouraged to fall in love and do other natural things that any well-paid workmen knows how to do.

British railways kill each year one passenger in every 72 millions carried; in America one is killed in every 4,900,000 transported. These figures are taken from accidents in which the passenger is in no way responsible.

"The non-member of a labor organization is an 'individualist.' He does not help to correct wrongs, but endures them, and is beloved by his employer because he lacks the nerve to even complain. He takes no interest in proposed laws for the benefit of labor. He does nothing to check rapacious greed. He accepts whatever is doled out to him and calls himself a free man."—Railroad Wire and Signal.

SCOOP, THE CUB REPORTER — STOP THE WAR—IT DISTURBS THE GENERAL'S REST — BY "HOP"

WILLARD M. MAXIM IS CHOSEN SUPT.

Park Avenue Baptist Bible School Holds Annual Meeting.

The annual meeting of the Park Avenue Baptist Bible school took place last evening, with a full attendance of officers and teachers. The superintendent, Willard M. Maxim, presided. Routine business was transacted, following which annual reports were submitted by the secretary, general treasurer, benevolent treasurer, missionary committee, entertainment committee, superintendent of home department and superintendent of elementary department. The school has just closed a very successful year, and the outlook for the new year is especially bright and encouraging. The following officers and committees were elected:

Superintendent, Willard M. Maxim; associate superintendent, Harry G. Thompson; secretary, Howard R. Palmer; assistant secretary, Elwood Waller; general treasurer, Francis R. Mortimer; benevolent treasurer, Harry G. Thompson; librarian, E. Frank Vail; pianist, Mrs. John Manley; superintendent home department, Mrs. D. M. Kenyon; superintendent elementary department, Mrs. Harry Runyon; musical director, William N. Runyon; director of orchestra Arthur S. Mosher; blackboard artist Charles VanWinkle.

Missionary committee: Mrs. Birney S. Hudson, chairman; Mrs. W. S. Lowry, Mrs. Benjamin Hadley, Mrs. Charles VanWinkle, Harry G. Thompson. Entertainment committee: D. M. Runyon, chairman; Miss Elinore Stutsman, Mrs. Ada Cuming, Miss F. G. Hawkins, Arthur S. Mosher, Chester Gaskell. Room committee: William F. Doane, chairman; Chester Gaskell, E. Frank Vail. Music committee: Arthur S. Mosher, chairman; Mrs. John Manley, Mrs. Charles Hellyer. The secretary was instructed to convey to George E. Hall, for a number of years the superintendent, the sincere appreciation of the entire school for his faithfulness, loyalty and splendid service.

PRESIDENT'S STRIKE COMMISSION MEETS SUCCESS

New York, Jan. 15—The Strike Commission appointed in November by President Wilson has completed its negotiations with miners and coal operators of Colorado, and is now on its way to Denver to culminate an agreement between the coal barons and their workers looking to the prevention of future labor wars in the Colorado fields.

The Commission consists of Hon. Seth Low, of New York; Charles W. Mills, of Philadelphia, and Patrick W. Gilday, of Clearfield, Pa. These men have been in almost constant communication with both sides of the big controversy, and have brought reason to bear on both sides. "Everything is satisfactory," said Commissioner Mills, "and we hope and expect to devise a working agreement between the miners and the operators."

The present trip to Colorado is the second stage of its work. That is, the problem of the present unemployment of miners and their suffering as a result of their idleness. The Commission will co-operate with the local authorities in Colorado in an effort to solve the present situation of unemployment.

Before journeying Westward, the Commission awaited the new administration in Colorado. Governor Ammons has now been inaugurated, and his views have met with an improved popular confidence. The field has been cleared for conciliatory plans, for much of the bitter feeling against the State government on account of its harsh means of handling the strike situation, has been alleviated. Reconstruction is the watchword of the Commssion that will meet all sides in Denver next week.

PAST MASTERS INSTALL CENTRAL LODGE OFFICERS

Central Lodge, No. 48, Ancient Order United Workmen, at its meeting, last night, installed officers for the coming year. It was expected that F. E. Bird, the grand master workman would be present, but he was detained and instead a staff of past master workmen of Central lodge had charge of the work. After the installation there was a social time and refreshments were served by the entertainment committee of the lodge and cigars were passed. During the social hour reminiscences were exchanged. These officers were installed:

Past master workman, A. J. Stiglitz; master workman, Robert Laramour; foreman, E. M. Mosher; overseer, Frank H. Pond; recorder, Theodore J. Mason; financier, William Newcorn; receiver, C. H. Randolph; guide, H. R. Thorn; inside watchman, H. C. Vogel; outside watchman, Walter Bradford; representative to grand lodge, A. J. Stiglitz and E. M. Mosher; alternates, H. R. Thorn and Theodore J. Mason. Mr. Mason is also a member of the credential committee of the grand lodge.

SEEK DEFEAT OF BURNETT BILL

Plainfield Democratic Club to Hold Mass Meeting January 19 at Y. M. C. A.

MAYOR WILL PRESIDE

Former Congressman Bennett and Father Bogan to Speak Against the Adoption of Immigration Bill—List of Vice-Presidents Announced.

A mass meeting to voice protest against the literacy test as embodied in the Burnett Immigration Bill will be held at the Y. M. C. A., Tuesday night, January 19, under the auspices of the Plainfield Democratic Club. Among the speakers will be former Congressman William S. Bennett, of New York city; Father Bernard M. Bogan, pastor of St. Mary's church, and several other prominent men yet undecided because of the short notice for the meeting.

It will be recalled that the club at its meeting last week adopted resolutions protesting against the adoption of the bill and requesting President Wilson to veto it in case it was adopted. A copy of the resolutions were forwarded to Washington.

Mayor Leighton Calkins has been invited to act as chairman of the meeting on Tuesday night, and among those who will act as vice presidents are the following:

Former Mayor Percy H. Stewart, Roger F. Murray, Albert A. Atterbury, R. B. Corey, Howard Fleming, J. O. Stevens, Ernest R. Ackerman, Champlain L. Riley, Howard Lapsley, Jacob Sachar, Herman Schwed, Morris Abrams, William A. Coddington, City Judge W. G. DeMeza, Assemblyman William N. Runyon, Samuel Huntington, Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, Rev. Dr. C. H. Kohn and S. S. Carvalho.

There are many Plainfielders who are opposed to the passage of the Burnett Bill, especially because of the literacy test and not a few have written to their representatives at Washington urging them to vote against the measure. United States Senator James E. Martine is among those in Congress who stand with President Wilson in fighting the bill and it is hoped that the protest to be made at Tuesday night's meeting will have considerable influence in the final consideration of the bill. All persons who are interested in this matter and who want to register a protest against the Burnett measure are cordially invited to attend the meeting.

RELATIVES SQUABBLE OVER OWNERSHIP OF FURNITURE

Elizabeth, Jan. 16.—A dispute over the ownership of furniture occupied most of the time of Judge Connolly in the Orphan's Court, yesterday. The disputants were Milton B. Edward and James N. Frazee, of Westfield, who filed exceptions to the claim of their step-father, John J. Beers, that he and not their deceased mother was the owner of certain furniture they claimed. Beers was her second husband.

Beers claimed that the furniture was purchased after his marriage, while the exceptors said it belonged to their mother when she married him. Beers also contended that his wife said there "was no money in boarders," she having conducted a boarding-house for nearly thirty years. Lloyd Thompson, counsel for the sons, disputed this. Schuyler Cady represented Mr. Beers as proctor for the estate of which Beers is executor. Decision was reserv-

WOMEN'S BIBLE CLASS.

The Women's Bible Class of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, under the the leadership of Miss Caroline L. Palmer, will hold its first meeting at noon tomorrow. Miss Palmer has been for many years a member of the faculty of the Bible Teachers' Training Class, of New York city. She is particularly adapted for this work, having a deeply spiritual nature combined with an attractive personality and ability to present her subject matter in a highly interesting manner. It is hoped that many will avail themselves of the opportunity of joining the class.

FLOWER GUILD TO MEET.

The monthly meting of the Plant, Flower and Fruit Guild, postponed last Tuesday evening because of the inclement weather, will be held at the Friends' Meeting House Tuesday evening of next week. Rev. Charles L. Goodrich, pastor of the Congregational church, will make a short address upon this occasion, while special music will be rendered under the direction of Mrs. J. H. Evans.

TOWNSHIP TO ENTER INTO NEW PROJECT

Public Hearing on Washington Rock Park Topic to Be Held.

With a view to prevailing on the Washington Rock State Park Commission to build a road from the West End avenue bridge in North Plainfield to the Rock and thence to Warrenville road, a resolution passed by the Borough Council was presented at the monthly meeting of the North Plainfield Township Committee last night, asking for the co-operation of the latter body in the enterprise. William de LaR. Anderson presided at the meeting and during the evening the many advantages of such a proposition as the one outlined by the Park Commission were discussed. A resolution was finally adopted endorsing the proposition and a hearing will be given taxpayers and voters in the near future.

The length of the road in the township would be about two miles, ten per cent. of the constructural work to be borne by the township.

The police department came up for a lot of consideration at the meeting owing to adverse sentiment that has been aroused recently in various quarters. After lengthy consideration it was the unanimous opinion of the Committee that the present system was the best and it will be continued. The various reports of the officers and committees of the township for 1914 were ordered printed and distributed. Road districts were appointed as follows: The Greenbrook district to A. Brokaw; the Watchung district to W. Anderson, while Dr. Moldenke received for his share, besides the Scotch Plains district, the whole of Valley road as far as the chapel. After adjournment the Committee met the Board of Health. The health officer, Theodore Luerssen, reported but one case of measles in the Scotch Plains district.

JUSTICE SNAPE REFERS CASE TO THE PROSECUTOR

Justice Thomas H. Snape, before whom the case of the Public Service Gas Company vs. David C. Allen was heard, Wednesday afternoon, and who reserved decision for a period of two days, yesterday announced that all of the testimony and evidence which had been taken in the case had been turned over to Somerset County Prosecutor Frederick A. Pope, who will probably place the matter before the Grand Jury of that county.

Because of the complications in the case, Justice Snape feels that it is one for the prosecutor's consideration. Mr. Pope will undoubtedly place the case before the jury should he find that the evidence and testimony as taken before Justice Snape warrants such action. Witness for the plaintiff testified that they saw the burning of gas at the home of Mr. Allen on December 18 last, this being the evidence on which the case will be taken before the jury, although Mr. Allen denies any knowledge of gas being used in his home.

ANNOUNCE THE MERGER OF INSURANCE AGENCIES

Announcement is made today of the merger of the insurance business of the J. C. Pope Company with that of the Frederick A. Martin Company, making one of the most important changes in the local insurance field that has taken place in many years. The Frederick A. Martin Company purchased the insurance agency of Elston M. French about a year and a half ago and under the management of Mr. Martin it has been one of the foremost agencies in the city.

J. C. Pope & Co. is one of Plainfield's oldest and largest insurance agencies in this section, having been built up by James C. Pope and successfully conducted for the past year by William Demler and Harry B. MacDonald. The combined agencies will be known as the Frederick A. Martin Company, with offices at 171 North avenue, and will be managed by Mr. Martin. The agency is now one of the largest in the city and is equipped to take care of its customers in a satisfactory way.

FUNERAL OF MRS. WATSON.

MARTINE VICTIM OF 'DRY' PRANKS

Jersey Senator Thought He Was Being Enticed to the Gilded Bar.

HIS DEFENSE GOT WET

In a Heated Debate Plainfielder Put Alcohol Up to the Creator and Took a Fall Out of Alleged "Dry" Conditions in Georgia.

Washington, Jan. 16—The Senate was enlivened yesterday by an old-fashioned debate on the prohibition question.

Senator Martine, of New Jersey, was opposed to all such legislation. He furnished most of the enjoyment of the debate. He roused Senator Bristow, from the prohibition State of Kansas, until that gentleman cast aspersions upon the social and moral condition of New Jersey as compared with Kansas.

"Geographically, New Jersey is situated next to New York, the great Empire State, with her open port, open to all the world, and on the other side is Pennsylvania, with the great open port of Philadelphia," said Mr. Martine. "Naturally we might get some of the evils of the great city."

The Senator from New Jersey intimated that his Commonwealth was as good as could be expected considering the company that she was keeping.

FAVOR MERGER OF CITY AND BOROUGH

Board of Trade Proposes to Inaugurate Campaign of Education.

Judging from the trend of recent events among several members of the local civic bodies of the city, there is a strong probability of a meeting being called in the near future to discuss the question of the consolidation of this city and the borough of North Plainfield. In view of the fact that the Board of Trade was largely instrumental in securing a vote on the question in the borough, it is highly probable that that organization will take up the question at one of its meetings in the near future, to plan a campaign of education.

The failure of the Common Council to take any definite steps calling for a vote on the question on the south side of Green brook, has been instrumental in stirring up more or less adverse comment in several sections of the city, where there is a strong sentiment in favor of the ultimate consolidation of the two communities. It is known that the Building Trades Council favors an early vote on the question, while the matter is still fresh in the minds of the voters. The contention of the labor body is that the development of the borough following consolidation would be so great that practically all craftsmen connected with the building trades in this vicinity would be kept busy for some length of time.

Whether the Chamber of Commerce, which advocated a new county idea prior to the North Plainfield election, will change its stand, and support the Board of Trade in favor of the movement is not known. It is believed, however, that several of the sectional civic bodies will join with the Board of Trade should they take the initial steps in opening a campaign. The Building Trades Council has already expressed itself as agreeable to entering the campaign. The latter body, the only central union labor body of the city, endorsed consolidation by resolution during the North Plainfield campaign of last September.

PLAN FOR ANNUAL BANQUET.

The Tuesday Afternoon Club, composed of members of the Knights of Pythias of Pythias from various sections of the State, an organization which meets once a year, has made final arrangements for the annual banquet to be held at the Trenton House, Trenton, Tuesday evening, February 16. This occasion is always held just prior to the opening of the grand lodge session of the Knights, and the occasion is a time of the expression of the fraternal spirit existing between members of the order. A number of the lodge members of this city are planning to attend the banquet, the local party to be in charge of Jeremiah VanWinkle.

MANY IN PERIL AS HORSES MADLY RACE

Animals Frightened by Falling Limb Do Much Damage in a Short Run.

Many pedestrians in the business section of the town had a narrow escape from serious injury this morning, when a team of horses attached to a large farm wagon filled with garden produce, dashed down Park avenue and turned into West Front street, at a frenzied clip. The animals became frightened while standing at Park avenue and West Fifth street, when a large limb cut off by the employes of the Shade Tree Department, fell to the ground near their feet with a thud.

The equines, which belonged to E. F. Bremer, of Terrill road, raced down the thoroughfare and before they had traveled two hundred feet, brought the heavy farm wagon into a collision with a new Pullman touring car which had recently been transferred from the freight yards to a temporary resting place in front of the Thompson garage. The vehicles locked wheels and the auto was dragged nearly to the Fourth street trolley tracks, considerable damage being done to the new machine.

Shaking their wagon loose from the auto the horses tore down Park avenue, going from one side of the street to the other in a threatening manner until they reached the junction of Front street. Here a turn was necessary and the frightened steeds pranced up on the sidewalk in front of the Schwed store, missing by inches the large plate glass windows in the store. One of the back wheels of the wagon locked against the telegraph pole and further progress was abruptly curtailed. The horses were quieted down at that point and the owner soon appeared on the scene to claim them.

Considerable damage was done to the wagon and the loss on the Thompson auto will amount to over $100. Large cabbages comprised the greater portion of the stock in the farm wagon and these were scattered about the thoroughfare over which the animals raced, a trail being left from the starting to finishing points. Park avenue is generally crowded at this time in the morning and the fact that no one was injured is considered little short of miraculous.

URGES APPOINTMENT OF A PLAINFIELDER

Trades Council Favors Local Man for Board of Education Job.

Believing that a sufficient amount of intelligence is to be found within the city to properly fill the position, and that the attitude taken by The Daily Press is entirely proper, and in keeping with the spirit of civic pride, the Building Trades Council, last night, endorsed the movement for the appointment of a Plainfield man to the clerkship of the Board of Education at the February meeting of the latter body, should any change be made, as has been rumored. William H. Harding, delegate of the Carpenters' Local Union to the central labor council, introduced the resolution expressing the desire of the Trades Council that Plainfield jobs should be for Plainfielders first. The resolution received a unanimous vote of the members of the body present at last evening's weekly meeting.

The restoration of the fire whistle, which was discontinued December 31, and which has been the subject of much comment during the course of the past week or ten days, was discussed at length by the union men, but the matter was laid over until the session of next week, when it is probable that some action will be taken. The discussion of these public questions is in keeping with those of several other matters of civic form during the course of the past year.

ASSOCIATION'S JOINT MEETING.

The question of the consolidation of the Business Mens' Association and the Business Men's Credit Association is to be discussed at a joint meeting of the associations to be held at Coward Hall, Monday evening of next week. The vote on the proposition will be taken at that time, and for this reason a full attendance is desired.

REQUEST FOR FRUIT.

The local Plant, Flower and Fruit Guild, will receive contributions of flowers, fruit, vegetables and delicacies at the W. C. T. U. rooms Monday and Tuesday at the usual hours. The donations will be distributed to the sick and the shut-ins of the city and borough.

QUAKE DEAD NOW PLACED AT 35,000

Only Houses Which Escaped in Stricken Territory Were of Concrete.

RESCINA LOST 4,500

Ambassador Page Says That Loss May Not Be Over 15,000—Proffer of Aid on Part of United States is Not Accepted.

Paris, Jan. 16.—The correspondent of the Excelsior in Rome wires that he learns officially that 35,000 persons were killed and 45,000 injured in the earthquake.

Newspaper specials from Rome agree that the great mortality is attributable to the method of dry construction employed in the affected region, the stones being piled upon each other without mortar. The only buildings which escaped total destruction were the modern houses, built of reinforced concrete.

The serious landslide which has occurred at Montecorvino-Rovella, which sent masses of earth from the mountainside into the Fucino Canal, damming that stream, threatens to add a flood to the other calamities in that region. Gangs of men are working strenuously to remove the obstruction.

BOUGHT $500 OUTFIT FOR $55, THEN SELLS

But Lucky Purchaser Never Had Full Possession of His New Stock.

When Joe Delonero attempted to take possession of a team of horses and a wagon that he bought at a constable's sale yesterday morning, he was met with a strenuous protest on the part of the original owner, Ralph Delibrio, of Randolph road. The latter refused to relinquish a claim to the animals and Delonero sought his counsel, V. W. Nash, Jr. Armed with the necessary credentials the purchaser of the animals with Patrolman Martin Flatley and William Mernagh held a conference at Park and North avenues, yesterday afternoon, the result being an order to Delibrio to leave the animals in the Central Livery Stables over night.

It appears that Delonero was granted a judgment of $52.50 against Delibrio in the District Court, three months ago, and in default of settlement Constable George York conducted an advertised sale of Delibrio's horses and wagon, yesterday, to satisfy the judgment. Lelonero was the only bidder and he put in an offer of $55, a sum that covered his judgment and provided for the contable's fee.

He was given authority to sieze the animals and wagon when Delibrio came back to town following his day's work, and the two met on Park avenue at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon. A lengthy fracas in Italian was culminated by the intervention of the police and the parties were ordered to apear at Mr. Nash's office this morning. At that time Delonero agreed to sell back the outfit at a figure that left him a neat profit for his long wait.

ANNOUNCE THIRD SERVICE IN PRACTICAL CHRISTIANITY

The third service in practical Christianity to be held in the Babcock building, room 207, by Miss Edith Martin, of New York city, is announced for tomorrow afternoon at 3:45 o'clock. All those interested are welcome. Interest in Miss Martin's meetings has been growing each week. She has been connected with the development of the new attitude toward Christian teaching and living for many years, having been a pupil of Mrs. Emma Curtis Hopkins, of Chicago, and a fellow graduate under that leader with Charles Fillmore, the head of the Unity Society, of Kansas City, Mo. After five years' association with Mrs. Hopkins, Miss Martin organized centers in Chicago, New Haven and Philadelphia, and has been a prominent leader in the work in New York city for several years past.

IT'S A BOY.

Mr. and Mrs. Morris J. Dumont, of Martine avenue, are the parents of a son, born to them a few days ago. Mrs. Dumont was formerly Miss Janet Wildey.

PNEUMONIA FATAL TO JAMES STEWART

Well Known Resident of West End Succumbs After a Brief Illness.

Following an illness of about three weeks with typhoid pneumonia James Stewart, one of the most widely known residents of this city, died early last evening at his home on Grant avenue. He had not been in the best of health for the past six months and when his system was attacked by the double malady he failed rapidly. His death had been expected for the past week.

Mr. Stewart was a native of Scotland, where he was born in 1860, but came to this country when a young man. He located in Worcester, Mass., with the Pond Machine Tool Company and when that concern moved to Plainfield in 1888 he was retained with the force of men removing here. He was promoted to the position of general foreman of the foundry department under Superintendent McCardell, and retained it until the time of his death.

Mr. Stewart was the possessor of a genial disposition and readily made and kept friends. While he was more or less active in local politics he never sought public office, but was one of the charter members of the "Get-Together" Club, composed of men prominent in political circles. He was also a member of Jerusalem Lodge, No. 26, F. & A. M., Plainfield Lodge, No. 885, B. P. O. E., and Perseverance Lodge, No. 74 Knights of Pythias. He is survived only by his wife, a son by a previous marriage having died about twenty years ago.

The funeral will be held at his late home, 324 Grant avenue, Monday afternoon at 2:30. It will be in charge of Rev. Dr. Charles E. Herring, of the First Presbyterian church, assisted by Rev. Frederic L. Greene, pastor of Hope chapel. Burial will be in Hillside cemetery.

MADAME F. BERKELEY SMITH TO GIVE TWO LECTURES

Mrs. Charles W. McCutchen, of Rockview avenue, the borough, announces two lectures to be given by Madame F. Berkely Smith (nee Jeanne Constentin), the first on "The Comedie Francaise," to be given at Mrs. McCutchen's home, 21 Rockview avenue, Tuesday afternoon, January 26, at 3:30 o'clock, and the second on "Conflicts of Conscience in the Modern Drama,' Tuesday afternoon, February 2, at 3:30 o'clock at the home of Mrs. Harry G. Runkle, 511 West Eighth street

The patronesses for the affair are Mrs. Elliot T. Barrows, Mrs. Allan Cowperthwait, Mrs. Chapman Fisk, Mrs. Francis de Lacey Hyde, Mrs. Frederick G. Mead, Miss Munger, Mrs. J. Kirtland Myers, Mrs. David H. Rowland, Mrs. Percy H. Stewart, Miss Tweedy and Mrs. C. Boardman Tyler.

WINFIELD A. SCOTT.

Winfield A. Scott, husband of Margaret VenDeventer, formerly of Plainfield, died Thursday at his home, 1151 South 20th street, Philadelphia. The funeral will be held at the late home tomorrow night at 8 o'clock and the burial will be in Bound Brook at 1 o'clock Monday afternoon. Relatives and friends are invited.

ARTILLERY FIGHTING

Not a Single Infantry Fight Reported Yesterday From the Somme to the Meuse—Bulgaria Mobilizes 60,000 Troops on Frontier.

Paris, Jan. 16.—The French war office gave out the following statement this afternoon:

"At Belgium there have been artillery combats in the region of Nieuport and in that of Ypres. Between the Lys and the Somme at Notre Dame De Lorette, near Carnce, the enemy has reoccupied part of the trenches which he lost January 14. At Blangy, near Arras, our progress has continued.

"The enemy made a sharp attack, preceded by a violent bombardment upon our positions to the west of La Boiselle. That attack was repulsed. On the entire front from the Somme to the Meuse not a single infantry engagement has been reported.

"In the sections of Soissons and at Rheims our artillery has obtained results at several points, including the displacing of a regiment that was an attempt to concentrate for attack, and the explosion of one of the enemy's batteries and the demolition of an earthwork.

"In the Argonne the artillery of the enemy has viodently bombarded Fontaine Madame. Between the Argonne and the Vosges there was a complete check administered to a very sharp attack directed against our trenches from Flirey, and the Germans evacuated their positions on the elevation north of Clenery, east of Pont A Mousson, because of our artillery fire. In upper Alsace there is no change."

Berlin, Jan. 16 (By wireless).—The following statement was given out at the German headquarters today:

"In the western theatre of war there were only artillery battles in the neighborhood of Neiuport. The enemy's attacks on our positions northwest of Arras have been repulsed. We captured in a counter attack two trenches with their occupants. La Boisselle, northwest of Albert, was completely destroyed and cleared of Frenchmen yesterday.

"The number of cannon that we captured in the region of Soissons on January 12 and 14 was increased by the taking of 36 in the Argonne forest. At Consenvoye, north of Verdun, we were successful in several engagements. Nothing of importance occurred in the Vosges.

"In the eastern theatre the situation is unchanged. Rainy and gloomy weather prevented fighting yesterday."

Athens, Jan. 16.—According to reports Bulgaria has mobilized about 60,000 fully equipped troops on the Siberian frontier, most of them stationed on the Orient Railway near Tzarilrod.

Petrograd, Jan 16.—The general staff of the army in the Caucasus has transmitted an official communication, under date of January 13, which

WOODS GIVEN PROBATION SENTENCE OF SIX MONTHS

John Woods was arraigned before Judge Rene P. F. von Minden, seated in the Borough Hall, last evening, on a charge of trespassing on the property of the New Jersey Central prefered against him by Detectives Latourette and Hiney. Woods pleaded guilty to the charge and was given a probationary sentence of six months.

Just as the court was about to adjourn Judge von Minden announced that he had something to say to some persons in Dunellen who seem to think that they have an iron-clad right to come into court whenever a case is being heard. In the Francis and Waldron hearing on New Year's day, when the court for moral reasons did not see fit to allow the public to come in and also before the court was ready to commence the Woods case, last evening, some of the crow banged angrily on the door clamoring for admittance and Judge von Minden, in this connection, in stern tones, said that the court had a perfect right to keep the public out whenever in its discretion it deemed proper. If the rowdyism is repeated the court admonished, the officers will be sent out and those arrested will be sent to New Brunswick for ten days.

The condition of Mrs. W. H. Snyder, of Penfield place, has not improved much during the past couple of days.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Carpenter, of Prospect avenue, are entertaining Mr. and Mrs. John Henderson, of Brown Hall.

Mr. and Mrs. Weimer Snyder, of Front street, are entertaining Mr. and Mrs. James Gaff, of Trenton, over the week-end.

Harold Burdick, son of Contractor and Mrs. A. H. Burdick, has the grip.

Mrs. A. L. Barton and Miss Lottie Barton, of New York, were visitors in the borough, yesterday.

Mrs. Alfred Skinner, of Prospect avenue, who is confined to her bed with a severe cold, was somewhat improved yesterday.

Democratic Committeeman Willard N. Apgar, who is ill with bronchitis, put in a very bad day yesterday. He was about the same this morning.

Miss Lillie Felmley, of Front street, has been spending the week in Plainfield assisting about the home of her brother, George Felmley, whose wife is ill.

Among those from this place who attended the Elks' dance at Plainfield, Thursday evening, were: Postmaster and Mrs. Henry S. Garretson and daughter, Miss Lillian; Mr. and Mrs. S. M. Kookogey, Mr. and Mrs. William A. Craig, the Messrs. John and Leo Logan and sister, Miss Mary; Mr. and Mrs. Robert C. Craig and Sigard Nicolaysen.

The monthly meeting of the board of directors of the Watchung Investment Company was held last evening in the First National Bank.

Borough Engineer L. T. Churchill gave Paul Ratti, of North avenue, line for the one story building which he is to erect in the alleyway between his present store and the property of the Park Hotel.

William R. Craig has shown steady improvement since his recent slight setback and he is now able to sit up in his bed for a little while each day.

PRECAUTIONARY MEASURES.

At the monthly meeting of the trustees of the Public Library, held last evening, in the library rooms, it was decided to request the Board of Health to notify them of any family having a contagious disease in its midst so that precautionary measures may be taken against the spread of the disease in the event of the particular family having a library book in its possession.

TURKEY SUPPER.

The social committee of the Y. P. S. C. E. of the Presbyterian church, composed of Miss Laura Todd, chairman; Miss Eva Schneider, Miss Luella Stryker, Miss Edith Wyckoff and Mrs. C. T. Voorhees are making arrangements for a turkey supper to be served in the chapel of the church on the evening of Lincoln's Birthday. The number of suppers that will be served is limited to one hundred, so any one who contemplates attending would be wise to procure their tickets at once. Each one of the five members of the committee have twenty tickets to sell. The price of the supper has been set at 50 cents.

PLEADS NON VULT.

Before Judge Daly, seated in the criminal court, at New Brunswick yesterday, Samuel Anderson retracted his plea of not guilty to the charge of stealing a revolver, typewriter and clock from the office of the National Pure Foods Company, at Lincoln, to one of non vult. The court postponed sentence in order that Probation Officer McWilliams might look a little deeper into the case.

ANNOUNCE ENGAGEMENT.

BOWLING CONTEST.

At the meeting of the Baraca Class of the Presbyterian Sunday-school, held in its classroom on Thursday night, it was decided to hold a bowling contest in the church during the week commencing February 8. There will be a different contest on each night and prizes will be awarded to the winner. On one night there will be bowling behind a screen for high score and on another there will be bowling for low score with five points added to the score every time your ball goes into the gutter, and on another night there will be bowling for the head pin. On Lincoln's Birthday there will be a ten-hour endurance contest. The committee in charge is Henry D. Williams and Robert Braun and they cordially invite the public to enter the various contests. George Apgar and Rev. E. R. Brown were appointed a committee to arrange a bowling program for Washington's Birthday.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Snyder, of Penfield place, wish to announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Ethel, to Clarence Sherman, of Warrenville.

'Plains & Fanwood.

As a result of one of the plans adopted by the Union County Principals' Association, supervisor of local schools, S. Dana Townsend, has organized a poultry club in School No. 1. The children will be instructed in the care of chickens and at a later date an exhibit of the fowls owned by the different ones will be held at which prizes will be awarded to the winners.

Mrs. Richard Casey, of North Church street, recently entertained Miss Grace Voorhees, of Somerville, at her home.

Mrs. James Slattery, of John street, was among the guests at a card party given in Raritan, Thursday afternoon, at the home of Mrs. Driscol.

St. Joseph's Dramatic Club will present a play in the near future, under the competent coaching of A. J. Mueck. The play will be "Jane," and Mrs. A. J. Mueck will play the leading role. Other members of the cast are the Misses Kathryn Kronych and Vera Cody, and Messrs. J. Hughes, McBride and Dr. J. S. Leahy.

Mrs. J. Whitaker, of Washington, D. C., is visiting former friends in town, having been a resident of Bound Brook at one time.

Miss Kathryn Davenport, of Somerville, was the guest of her cousin, Miss Claire Robeson, Thursday.

The services in the Presbyterian church tomorrow will be as follow: Sunday-school at 10 a. m., Men's Bible Brotherhood at 10:15, morning worship at 11 o'clock, sermon by Rev. C. J. Culp, subject, "Gathering or Scattering;" union evangelistic service at 7:30 p. m., when Dr. Laws will preach.

Dr. Laws will address a meeting for men only tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock in the Palace Theatre, on the subject, "Temptation and How to Resist It." Grant Colfax Tuller will have charge of the singing. Harold Cressingham will be the soloist. A boys' meeting in the Methodist church at 3 o'clock will be addressed by Wendell Phillips, secretary of the Y. M. C. A. of Rutgers College. A girls' meeting in the parish house of St. Paul's church at 3 o'clock tomorrow will be addressed by Dr. E. R. Graff.

The services in the Congregational church tomorrow will be as follows: Men's Bible Class at 10 a. m., led by L. W. Guernsey; morning worship at 11 o'clock, sermon by Rev. William T. Boult, subject, "The Aristocracy of Character."

The annual meeting of the Bound Brook Motorcycle Club was held on Thursday night, when the following officers were elected: President, S. E. Sweazey; vice president, Lewis Ulmer; secretary, Harry H. Cohen; treasurer, Charles VanPelt; captain, Isaac S. Brokaw; first lieutenant, W. Edward Smith; second lieutenant, Henry Zimmerman; directors, Frank Stangle and William Banghart. At the close of the business a chicken supper was served.

Warrenville.

At the election held at Mt. Bethel, yesterday, the proposition to erect a building to shelter the township machinery was defeated by a majority of 16 votes. There being 40 against and 24 in favor of it, the vote being very light.

Grover F. Kipsey, of Plainfield, spent yesterday with friends at Hill Side Farm.

P. T. Rigg, of Coontown, has sold his farm to New York parties and will spend several months with relatives in the West, when he will return and make his home with his parents.

BOROUGH GIRLS' TEAM GUESTS OF TEACHERS

Miss Edna French and Miss Mary Robley, teachers in the North Plainfield schools, entertained the members of the North Plainfield High School girls' basketball team and their friends at the home of Miss French, 18 Craig place, last night. The evening was spent in playing games and having a good time generally and refreshments were served by the hostesses.

Those who were present are Mrs Frank Rowley, Mrs. W. O. Taylor, Mrs. W. L. Smalley, Mrs. Warren Townley, Miss Edna French, Miss Mary Robley, Miss Ethel Barnard, coach, and players, Marjorie Burtis, Lillian Spencer, Lucy Douglas, Theresa McCullough, Elsie Debele and Edna Green. The Misses Julia Rowley and Gladys Sullivan were also guests.

YOUNG MEN'S BIBLE CLASS GIVES A DINNER

The Young Men's Bible class, of Trinity Reformed church, of which William A. Kriney is teacher, gave a dinner at the church, last night, which was attended by about twenty of the members of the class. Mr. Kriney acted as toastmaster and among the guests were Rev. John Y. Broek, pastor of the church; F. E. Smith, superintendent of the Sunday-school, and E. F. Sheppard, assistant superintendent. The supper was prepared by Mrs. W. A. Kriney, who was assisted by a number of the women of the church. The Misses Maude and Nellie McAfee and Miss Brokaw served the dinner.

After the repast the officers for the coming year were elected as follows: George Latourette, president; Arthur Slade, vice president, and Henry Kinney, secretary and treasurer. Routine business was transacted, after which speeches were enjoyed. The new officers and guests all responded to calls for toasts. Before disbanding a rising vote of thanks was given those who assisted in making the affair such a great success.

reads as follows:

"The fighting in the vicinity of Kara Urgan, in Turkish Armenia, continues. We have captured many more officers and soldiers. We are continuing the pursuit of the Turkish troops defeated at Atzolu in divers directions. We continue successfully to force the Turks out of the Transtohoruk region. The other fronts show no important changes."

Vienna, Jan. 16.—An official statement says a great battle is in progress at South Bukowina. We have been reinforced and resumed the offensive. The Russian advance guard has been driven back.

London, Jan. 16.—A despatch to a news agency from Petrograd states that it is reported from Sebastopol that the Russian fleet, during recent days, sank eight sailing vessels transporting reinforcements to the Turkish army in Anatolia (Asia Minor).

Petrograd, Jan. 16. The vanguard of an entirely new Russian army, the strength of which, when its force is in the field, it is believed, will approximate a million men, has advanced westward from Sierpec (midway between the Vistula River and the southern frontier of the northern angle of East Prussia) to the Skrwa River, where it has driven the German cavalry from the forts occupied by the mobile force in its retreat.

The advance column of the Russian force ocupies a position of peculiar strategic value.

It is less than forty miles from the East Prussian frontier fortress, which is almost due west, with open ground intervening.

A HEAVY BURDEN.

A Bad Back Makes Life Miserable For Many Plainfield People.

A bad back is a heavy burden.

A burden at night when bedtime comes,

Just as bothersome in the morning.

Ever try Doan's Kidney Pills for it?

Know they are for kidney backache—and for other kidney ills?

If you don't, some Plainfield people do.

Read a case of it:

Mrs. Anthony Wahl, R. F. D. No. 1, Plainfield, N. J., says: "I had such distressing pains in my back that I could hardly stand and it was out of the question for me to stoop. I was all crippled up and I knew perfectly well that my kidneys were the cause of the trouble. A neighbor recommended Doan's Kidney Pills to me and on her suggestion, I used them. They gave me almost immediate relief and three boxes changed me from a chronic sufferer to a healthy woman. I still take Doan's Kidney Pills occasionally, when a cold settles on my kidneys and they act as a preventive of any serious trouble. You may publish this account of my experience for the benefit of other kidney sufferers."

Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Wahl had. Foster-Milburn Co. Props., Buffalo, N. Y.—Adv.

"PANAMA AND THE CANAL" IN PICTURES

Rev. Dr. W. T. Stuchell Gives First of a Series of Three Lectures.

Rev. Dr. William Torrence Stuchell, of Rahway, delivered an illustrated lecture in Columbus Auditorium, last night, on "Panama and the Canal." This was the first of a series of three lectures to be given in this city by Dr. Stuchell under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society of the First Presbyterian church, of this city. He is thoroughly familiar with his subject, having traveled in that section of the country last year. He presented some interesting slides showing the general character of the country and then he dwelt on the subject of the canal.

The speaker took his audience back many centuries and explained that at that time there was no need of a canal, as the land formation that now connects the two Americas was then water surface which has been gradually built up by volcanic action until the waters of the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans were cut off. The object of the canal, the speaker said, was to eliminate the ten thousand-mile trip from the City of Panama around Cape Horn to Colon, as the shortest actual distance between these two places is only forty miles. Colon lies twenty-two and one-half miles east of Panama, and contrary to general opinion the canal runs from northwest to southeast.

Dr. Stuchell showed moving pictures of the natives and the streets of Kingston. The greatest question to be considered in the building of the canal, said Dr. Stuchell, is that of labor, and the Jamaica negroes were found to be the best workers, although it has been determined that the working efficiency of that tribe is only one-third that of the American negro. The speaker outlined the route of the canal and commented on the locks, Gatun Lake, Colonel Goethals and other features in connection with the building of the canal. He stated that $375,000,000 had been appropriated for this work and that there was a large amount of this left that would not be used.

The great work of the Young Men's Christian Association is doing in that country was one of the noticeable features of the picture and the speaker gave the institution the end of praise. He stated that the Y. M. C. A. provided amusement and physical recreation and cared for all who needed help. He emphasized the influence that the association has there and showed several pictures of the fine buildings used for the work. The next lecture will be held next Friday night in Columbus Auditorium.

CHRISTIAN FIELD.

Rev. Frederic J. Hubach, district superintendent of the Methodist denomination, and former pastor of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church, will preach at that edifice tomorrow morning. The pastor of the church, Rev. Dr. D. B. F. Randolph, will occupy the pulpit at the evening service, preaching on the subject, "The Hand Writing on the Wall."

Rev. John Baltzly, pastor of All Soul's Unitarian church, will preach tomorrow morning on the subject, "The Saving Power of Memories."

Rev. Dr. Charles E. Herring, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, has announced his sermon-subjects for tomorrow as follows: Morning, "The Holy Spirit;" evening, "Things Men Live By."

"War Preparations of the Spirit" is the general subject of a series of sermons, the first of which will be preached tomorrow morning, by Rev. Dr. Birney S. Hudson, pastor of the Park Avenue Baptist church. The sermons will be an interpretation of the sixth chapter of the Epistle to the Ephesians. At the evening service, Dr. Hudson will preach the first of the series of sermons on the general subject, "The Times In Which We Live," the sub-topic of tomorrow evening's sermon being "The Meaning of Democracy." During the morning service small children will be cared for so that the parents may attend the service.

Rev. John Y. Broek, pastor of the Trinity Reformed church, will preach tomorrow evening on the subject, "The Faith of the Martyrs."

The special "Kriegsgottesdienst" services which have been held at the German Reformed church for several Sunday evenings past will be omitted tomorrow. The regular morning service will be held.

LINCOLN BIRTHDAY SERVICES.

The monthly meeting of the First M. E. church Brotherhood was held last night when a nominating committee was appointed to draw up and submit names for election at the February meting. Those named are Dr. James R. Joy, Francis Crawford and George Cornwell. It was decided to hold special services on Lincoln's birthday. The arrangements will be in the hands of the executive committee.

UNDERGOES AN OPERATION.

Rev. J. J. Allen, pastor of the Baptist church, South Plainfield, was operated upon at Muhlenberg Hospital, yesterday, following a sudden attack of appendicitis. His condition is quite serious.

FOR STEALING COAL.

Alleged to have stolen a quantity of coal from the cars of the Central Railroad, Richard Woortman and Patsy Fucco, both foreigners, were arraigned before Judge DeMeza in the city court, this morning. Both are foreigners and pleaded clemency in view of the present hard times and said that they had sought this means of getting a little house fuel. Judge DeMeza admonished the men for committing the theft and advised them that further trouble from them would result in a jail sentence. Sentence was suspended in both cases.

LOCAL MEN ON BIG JOB.

Burke and Bonham, local contractors, yesterday shipped twenty-four draught horses and four car loads of working material to Atlantic county, where they have secured a big road contract. The job will keep a large force of men at work until next July or August and several Plainfielders will be numbered among the employes. The working force will, for the present, be stationed at Williamstown, near Winslow Junction.

PLAINFIELD CASES IN COUNTY COURTS

Boy Fined $10 for Contempt of Court and Two Enter Pleas.

Elizabeth, Jan. 16.—Patrick Long, one of four youths who admitted assaulting Rudolph Vandroth, a gardener for former Mayor Randolph, of Plainfield, was fined $10 by Judge Connolly in the Court of Quater Sessions, yesterday. He failed to appear last Friday, when the others were discharged on a suspended sentence.

Victor D'Aloia, counsel for Dominick Cocci, brought to the county jail from Herkimer county, New York, on a charge of keeping a disorderly house in Plainfield and on another serious charge, pleaded not guilty for his client.

John Edward Steele pleaded nonvult to stealing a motorcycle belonging to A. E. Giles, in Plainfield, December 6. The machine was valued at $235. He wil be sentenced next Friday.

COUNIHAN AND SHANNON MAY TAKE ASTOR THEATRE

The Astor Theatre, a moving picture house, which has been conducted by Joseph Coven for the past month, will close tonight. It is rumored that Counihan and Shannon, who are running the Plainfield Theatre, will take over the West Front street theatre and continue it as a moving picture amusement place.

In case of a change in the management the theatre will probably be reopened in two weeks. Poor business is the cause of Mr. Coven's decision to close the playhouse.

EVERYTHING IN READINESS FOR SCHOOL CONSTRUCTION

Members of the building committee of the Board of Education met last night for the purpose of going over the details for the new Evergreen Avenue School. The various specifications outlined in the plans were discussed and minor matters pertaining to the constructural work about to be started were settled.

Work on the new building will probably start within the next week, everything now being in readiness for the cellar digging.

EUGENE O'REILLY RENEWS ACQUAINTANCES IN TOWN

Eugene O'Reilly, who for a number of years resided in this city, his home being on North avenue, returned to town yesterday and renewed old acquaintances. O'Reilly is at present proprietor of the Old Meeker Inn, at Union, and has an old landmark of the Revolutionary War in the hotel which he conducts. He left this city about six years ago to take possession of the hotel and has found that it is an historic building, dating back to the war times.

Recently Mr. Reilly was having some work done on the building and had part of a wall torn away. Inside the wall was found an old newspaper perfectly preserved, which was evidently published the day after the funeral of George Washington. A long account of the funeral could easily be read with the names of the pall-bearers.

While a resident of this city, Mr. Reilly was a musician and played the violin at many of the local dances. He also had a great hobby for fishing and spent much of his time with the road and line.

PERSONAL.

Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Meaney, of West Front street, are rejoicing over the arrival of a son, who came to their home yesterday. Mother and child are doing nicely.

Mrs. Arthur Collins, of Duer street, who has been ill for some time, was removed to Muhlenberg Hospital this week, where she underwent an operation for cancer trouble.

Mrs. John Higgins, of Codington avenue, is able to be about again after being confined to her home for the past four weeks with a severe attack of the grip.

George Hummer, of Codington avenue, who has been confined to his home for several weeks, is still unable to attend to business.

ANNUAL MEETING

The annual meeting and election of officers of the Y. W. C. A. will be held Monday night, January 18. A full attendance of the membership is desired. At that time there will be exhibits of the dressmaking and basketry departments of the association. The exhibits will be continued for several days.

RESCUE MISSION NOTE.

Rev. Charles Fountain will preach at the Rescue Mission meeting tomorrow night. All are cordially invited to attend.

MANY LOST IN EARTHQUAKE

The victims, according to reports received from there, now number 4,500.

The whole village of Gioja-de-Marsi is reported destroyed. The number of victims there is not yet known.

At Collerosso there are twenty-four dead, and at Antelpedio forty persons were killed.

Washington, Jan. 16.—Dispatches from Ambassador Page at Rome, place earthquake dead between 12,000 and 15,000 and the seriously injured at about the same number. The ambassador said he had inquired of the Italian government if aid were needed, but was told Italy was not accepting assistance from any foreign country.

At the January congress meeting of the Plainfield Christian Endeavor Union, held Thursday night in the Y. M. C. A. parlors, arrangements were made for the next mass meeting of the local union, which will be held in the Temple Baptist church, on Thursday, February 11. The service will be appropriate to Christian Endeavor week which will be observer by Endeavorers throughout the world February 7 to 13. The speaker will be Rev. Dr. Phillip B. Strong, of the First Baptist church.

The newly organized choir under the direction of Gideon Fountain and the Christian Endeavor male quartet will assist with the music. The attendance banner will be awarded to the society having the highest percentage of active and associate members present at the meeting. The societies are expected to bring their individual pennants.

It was voted that a committee of three look into the matter of securing a centrally located C. E. and church bulletin board. Vice-President William Latourette, who presided, appointed Gideon Fountain, of the First Baptist society; Mrs. Lucy Coriell, of the Trinity Reformed, and Mr. Hoagland, of Warren chapel. Miss Ana Bach, chairman of the social committee, announced that another local union sociable would be held soon.

AMERICAN INDUSTRIAL EDUCATION.

The recent awakening of England from her dream of industrial independence to find her manufacturing activities cut to pieces for want of supplies "made in Germany" only, and a somewhat parallel situation in certain lines of our own industrial life, is making us all sit up and take notice. How does it happen that Germany can buy raw materials from all over the world, convert them into finished articles at selling prices that defy any competition, and thus hold the key to every national treasury existing? In the answer to this query will be found the solution of our industrial educational problems.

Only the other day, when Paterson was about ready to shut down for want of dyes imported from Germany, the statement was made that we could easily make these dyes from our crude benzol, etc., but when Germany got ready to enter the market again, our investments in this direction would be lost. True, and yet not true. Our equipment for this work would certainly be lost, but could we make the dyes? A Brooklyn chemical works tried something in this line a few weeks ago and blew up. In other words it takes brains in addition to natural advantages, or shall we say in spite of natural disadvantages, to attain industrial supremacy. Brains, to the last man involved in the various processes. Have we trained our growing youth accordingly?

A review of our educational system reveals the fact that out of one hundred boys leaving the grammar school, perhaps ten enter high school, and only one the university. We have excellent high school facilities, more or less good colleges, and some very excellent universities. What, however, are we doing for the ninety per cent. of those who cannot or will not strike out for higher fields. Here is where we can learn from our more active and able competitor, Germany. In that country you will not find as we do here, young men and women loafing about—mentally speaking—between the years after leaving school and settling down to their life work, but there are provided day and evening courses at school for their further training, and this is compulsory. In other words, they are in a continuation school, adapted to their mental wants, and adjusted to their daily work as regards time and requirements.

What a pity it is to see our young people of fourteen and over ending their mental development. They will not continue studying. They may not go to work on account of the labor laws, and so they drift into habits tending to unfit them for advancement in after life. On the other hand the German youth are carefully instructed in the general principles of all the important branches of learning, and become valuable citizens and a power for the advancement of their nation.

To illustrate, a man—a machinist—may be turning down a piece of shafting. In this country he will be thinking of the good time he expects to have that evening, or how soon payday is coming. On the other side, his thoughts will stray that way, as is perfectly human, but unconsciously his mind will conjure up a train of thought connected with that piece of steel. He will mentally see the Bessemer converter which blew the steel from the molten iron coming from the blast furnace, the coke going into it being made in the by-product ovens, in fact possibly go back to the formation of iron ore, coal, geologic epochs, the creation. Which of the two men is the most valuable to the industry—to his country?

Education which teaches a boy or girl that manual labor is unworthy, that the wearing of overalls or using the dustpan is to be scorned, is a menace to any nation. The introduction of the so-called "fads" into the curriculum of our schools is deplorable. Even manual training is recognized to have been a mistake, for manual dexterity is best acquired in the shop, but the principles underlying the arts involved should be school taught. Unfortunately the American home is to blame for much of what the school is now called upon to supply. I remember very vividly what turned out to be a rather desperate ride across some of the Appalachian ranges in winter time, years ago. The mountains topped with snow, the valleys a morass, the guide himself lost in his sense of direction, the horses floundering in deep snow drifts. Finally a perilous descent leading the animals over fallen logs, in bogs, and missing death repeatedly, to finally arrive at the desired coal miners' camp. There a meal—may I never have to eat another as awful—with the table loaded with quantities of badly cooked edibles of evident original good quality. The school marm ate there too. Why should our schools have to teach girls how to cook and do their housework properly? Yet the ability to cook a good meal is more potent in keeping the husband from the saloon than any sermon ever preached. I have been in every State of the Union but three, in cities, villages, mining camps, cross-country rides, exploring, in factories, and close to the people at the farm and cross-road hotel, and can contrast the absolutely unnecessary crudities of physical discomfort everywhere offered the digestive organs, with the excellent home-cooking found in every village tavern of Germany, Switzerland, France, in fact in northwestern Europe. If, instead of asking our schools to teach cooking—which is what we are steadily coming to—our good ladies working for universal suffrage would devote their energies to a universal understanding of how to cook a good meal, they would earn the lasting gratitude of mere man, who might then be inclined to let them vote. They would then have earned it.

There are three elements to be considered in studying the American school question—as it influences our industrial life. There are the opposing—and both selfish—demands of capital and labor. Capital, in the form of the employer of labor, asks that a boy be educated just sufficiently to be immediately useful as a producer of profitable work; that a girl have merely enough education to understand orders in the mill, or be a good salesgirl. Labor, on the other hand, is jealous of the entry of educated young men and women into the field, who by reason of this education can do better and faster work than the existing old guard. In other words, capital wants to make efficient machines of men and women; labor wants no interference with the existing conditions, in fact works for inefficiency. Both classes influence legislation and public opinion, and between both classes, and dependent upon legislation and public opinion back of this, stands the third element in the problem—the teacher.

The teacher, as a class, is able, conscientious and ever willing to adapt himself to the wants of a community. Necessarily he wants to get close to the problems he is called upon to solve. One of the encouraging signs of the times is the formation of "parents and teachers" movements. One of the dangers, on the other hand, is the consequent tendency of throwing on the school what should be done in the home. Out of this school and home getting closer together good will come in the end. If the powers that be in the school world could have heard some of the sarcastic comments by good old-fashioned mothers at such "meetings," there would be fewer swimming tanks and kindergarten exercises for grown-ups in our schools, much as such intentions were unquestionably honest and praiseworthy.

It really rests upon the general public to take a hand in the determination of what should be done for the good of the country educationally. Of the three elements mentioned, the capitalist should be forced to understand that the school system is not there for his exclusive benefit, that every boy and girl has a right to the best that can be given educationally. That if he wants manual skill, he must teach this to his employees himself at his own expense. That the school gives him thinking men and women, and the State good citizens able to act for the good of the whole rather than the individual.

To labor must be told that the world advances, and that to uphold the country's productive capacity against the fierce competition of other nation's our own labor being much higher paid, living better, and being more efficient generally than any other—every school boy and girl requires better training in how to use the intelligence they are endowed with—not how to use their fingers more rapidly. Labor must be made to understand that every boy and girl shall have his and her chance, and that the whole nation will see this enforced.

Finally the teacher must be given time to adapt himself to the ever increasing demands for an education that inculcates the reason for things even more than the existence of the things themselves. Based upon the experience of the pioneer nation for thorough, practical industrial education—Germany—there should be steps taken for a compulsory continuation school system, so adopted for time and studies taught that every boy and girl remains under its influence—if they do not attend high school or college—up to the eighteenth year at least. This thought is not new. It is recognized a long time already in this country, but what is everybody's business is nobody's business, and our legislatures are not made up of men who know much about the real needs of the masses.

To us in this country, unfortunately, it is always the case of the "after-thought." With the awful devastation wrought abroad, apart from any mercenary motives, we should be in position to touch markets so far held in other hands by reason of financial considerations and the mailed fist on occasion. Yet we have no merchant marine worthy of the name. When we get to think about it we have no difficulty in putting our finger on the European nation to blame for this state of affairs primarily. Yet it is our fault that the situation has remained as it is so long. Again with this war came a situation in our manufacturing industries that sent prices of some raw materials sky high. Had we a nation of workers so trained that no one felt it necessary for his life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness, to wear white collars and gloves at all times—in other words men believing in the dignity of manual labor—we should not have had to worry and impose a war tax in times of our peace. It is late, very late in our history to work for the necessary change in our educational system, but as Lucretius says, "what is food to one man may be fierce poison to others," and as the present war will see our competitors for the world's markets for ever handicapped with greater "overhead" charges, it will not be too late for us to assume our proper place, provided we do not allow grass to grow under our feet.

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

The bill at Proctor's Theatre, commencing Monday, will be headed by the highly successful dramatic playlet, "The Shoplifter." The cast includes a company of six people and is equipped with special scenery. It is one of the most expensive offerings now playing the Proctor circuit. Another big number on the bill is the "Six Harmony Kids," one of those delightful juvenile acts that always pleases. In addition to these the Le-Van and Martin Company, presenting a comedy skit; Mary Ambrose, vocalist and violinist, and the Knox-Wilson Company, offering novelty singing. The feature photo-play for Monday and Tuesday will be Miss Alice Brady in the William A. Brady production of "As Ye Sow." On Wednesday afternoon and evening, in addition to the seventh episode to "Zudora," there will be shown for the first time in this city, the Belgian war pictures, taken by the Chicago Tribune's staff photographer under special permission of King Albert. The series comprises four reels and is unquestionably the most interesting group of war pictures brought to this country.

"PILGRIM'S PROGRESS."

"Pilgrim's Progress," illustrated with pictures, songs and stories, will be given at the Netherwood Reformed church tomorrow evening at 7:45 o'clock. This will be the second sermon in the series. The story of the journey from the Gate to the Cross will be the subject of the discourse. At the morning service at 11 o'clock Rev. Edward S. Ralston, the pastor, will preach.

A NEW YEAR SUGGESTION.

The Home Saloon.

A reader of the Daily Press has suggested that the married man who cannot get along without his drinks might use the following method as a means of freedom from the bondage of the saloons:

Start a saloon in your own home. Be the only customer. You will have no license to pay. Go to your wife and give her two dollars to buy a gallon of whiskey—and remember there are sixty-nine drinks in the one gallon. Buy your drinks from no one but your wife, and by the time the first gallon is gone she will have $8.00 to put in the bank, and $2.00 to start business again. Should you live ten years and continue to buy booze from her and then die with snakes in your boots, she will have enough to bury you decently, educate your children, buy a house and lot, marry a decent man and quit thinking about you.

ACID IN STOMACH SOURS THE FOOD

Says Excess of Hydrochloric Acid is Cause of Indigestion.

A well-known authority states that stomach trouble and indigestion is nearly always due to acidity—acid stomach—and not, as most folks believe, from a lack of digestive juices. He states that an excess of hyrdochloric acid in the stomach retards digestion and starts food fermentation, then our meals sour like garbage in a can, forming acrid fluids and gases which inflate the stomach like a toy balloon. We then get that heavy, lumpy feeling in the chest, we eructate sour food, belch gas, or have heartburn, flatulence, waterbrash or nausea.

He tells us to lay aside all digestive aids and instead, get from any pharmacy four ounces of Jad Salts and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast while it is effervescing, and furthermore, to continue this for one week. While relief follows the first dose, it is important to neutralize the acidity, remove the gas-making mass, start the liver, stimulate the kidneys and thus promote a free flow of pure digestive juices.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and sodium phosphate. This harmless salts is used by thousands of people for stomach trouble with excellent results.

FEW FOLKS HAVE GRAY HAIR NOW

Druggist Says Ladies Are Using Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur.

Hair that loses its color and lustre, or when it fades, turns gray, dull and lifeless, is caused by a lack of sulphur in the hair. Our grandmother made up a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur to keep her locks dark and beautiful, and thousands of women and men who value that even color, that beautiful dark shade of hair which is so attractive, use only this old-time recipe.

Nowadays we get this famous mixture by asking at any drug store for a 50 cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," which darkens the hair so naturally, so evenly that nobody can possibly tell it has been applied. Besides, it takes off dandruff, stops scalp itching and falling hair. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also brings back the gloss and lustre and gives it an appearance of abundance.—Adv.

700 More Pairs Curtains

Join the Average Half Price Disposal

We have taken from our own stock all few-of-a-kind curtains and those that remain of previous large purchases and price lessened them materially.

We shall place these on sale Monday with another great purchase of a maker's entire season's surplus of curtains—4,276 pairs originally—which has now dwindled down to about half.

In the combine of groups there is every kind of curtain—scrim, net, Marie Antoinette, Irish point, lacet, Arabian, point arab, bonaz—some of these were imported directly by us.

The Curtains in the Special Purchase

At 75c pair, regularly $1.25—Scrim curtains, white and ecru; hemstitched edge, 2½ yards long.

At $1 pair, regularly $1.50 and $1.75—Scrim curtains, white, ivory and ecru; 2½ yards long; lace edge; variety of styles.

At $1.50 and $1.75 pair, regularly $2 to $3—Scrim curtains, white, ivory and ecru; 2½ yards long; lace insertion and edge; mostly linen.

At $2, $2.25 and $2.50 pair, regularly $2.75 to $4—Net curtains, white and ecru; hand-made lines cluny edges, some with insertion and some with insertion and edge.

The Curtains from Our Own Stocks

At $2 pair, were $2.50 and $3—American made Irish point curtains.

January Sale of White

Like a Fresh Bunch of Flowers Every Day

And even more welcome, for this Sale of White not only gives pleasure but saves money, too.

At no other time of the year (except in the May White Sale) is it possible to get such fine materials, and charming lingerie styles for so little.

How we planned for this Sale!

We wanted the $1 gowns to be as good for THEIR price as the exquisite French gowns were for THEIRS.

We bought up white materials at savings.

We scoured the markets for fine embroideries for less.

We took the utmost care to have the ribbons delicate in shade.

We copied, adapted and invented, and the result is that the Wanamaker January Sale of White, stands absolutely alone, for inexpensive, practical underwear as well as for originalities.

Nightgowns—there are hosts of good styles at $1.

Chemises, $1 upward.

Combinations, $1 upward.

Petticoats, 85c upward.

Exclusively here.

Fanchette—combination with brassiere top.

Moyen Age—A new long corset cover.

Elise—bodice, drawers and skirt.

La Belgique—the copy of a $50 French nightgown.

L'Exclusif—a vest chemise to wear under the corset combined with an over bodice.

Marie Jose—a surplice underbodice.

And many more including the Peasant Set, Paulette Set, Empire Set, Mariette and Borie Set, and the Marie Louise and Bolero gowns.

Read in Monday night's papers of the surprise in the White Sale. Something quite new and exclusively here.

COMMERCE PROBLEM WHEN DACIA SAILS

Galveston, Tex., Jan. 16.—When the steamship Dacia, formerly of the Hamburg-American Line, sails from here next week for Bremen, she will have to stand the severe test of a prize court, and on that important decision hinges the future policy of the United States with regard to the new registry measures being put into effect. The Dacia is threatened with seizure if she tries to engage in trade with Germany. The British admiralty will hold that her transfer was illegal, a mere subterfuge, and will treat the ship as a prize of war. The ship is loading here with cotton for German mills, having been purchased by an American while interned at Port Arthur, Tex.

Over 100 vessels have been bought for American registry. Some 15 of these were German steamers belonging to the Standard Oil Company and operated as tank steamers between New York and Germany. No objection was made to the transfer of German ships to American registry until it was announced that the Dacia had been bought and was loading for German ports. It has since been announced that the British Government will take measures to preserve her rights in the case of the Dacia, and that the State Department has been notified of her intentions.

The Dacia is now the property of Edward N. Breitung, of Michigan, an American citizen. She is now manned by an American crew, and the transfer had the sanction of the United States government. The Dacia had been employed in cotton carrying trade between here and Bremen before the war broke out. The purchase at this time is hailed with delight by cotton shippers, for huge amounts of the staple have been tied up here for lack of ships. The final decision in the case of the Dacia is therefore important to the cotton men of the South.

The transfers in registry in time of war were discussed at great length at the London conference of 1909 and an agreement was reached between the nations as follows: "The transfer of an enemy vessel to a neutral flag effected after the outbreak of hostilities is void unless it is proved that such a transfer was not made in order to evade the consequences to which an enemy vessel as such is exposed." It is claimed by her owners that the Dacia was bought as a good business venture to meet a trade situation. The British attitude as gleaned from the negotiations is that the transfer may be held to be merely a makeshift to evade the sea law which makes the Dacia a prey of the Allies. There is a resentment that the German ship should be purchased with the approval of the United States government, and allowed to continue the work that she was forced to drop when the war opened.

The objections bears heavily on the benefit derived by Germany from the cash involved in such transactions. The British leaders have questioned whether such purchases are not a breach of neutrality.

IN THE SPORTING SPOTLIGHT

Scattered Sport Gleanings

In celebrating basketball triumphs followers of the playing forces seldom go further back than the actual performers to place credit where credit is due. This was true of the brilliant spectacle on the P. H. S. court yesterday afternoon, praise being heaped on the heads of the dozen players who participated, for the contest was a veritable court victory for either side. The combatants certainly merited all of the laurels that could be dealt out to them but in distributing the credit the non-combatant coaches should be taken under consideration. Behind the excellent playing of both aggregations were the moulding hands of Miss Ethel Barnard, of North Plainfield, and Miss Katherine Sminck, of Plainfield. Long weeks of hard practise under the able direction of these two well informed basketball coaches have turned raw material into basketball machines which yesterday worked with a clock-like precision. It is true that the players ably handled their share of the exhibition but without the coaches the result might have been vastly different. It is not an easy matter to sit along the sidelines and watch a contest in which you have a vital interest, especially when you are coach of that squad, and the Misses Sminck and Barnard in all probability played the hardest games of any "player" in the P. H. S. gym yesterday afternoon. Both schools are fortunate in having such well informed and efficient leaders at their feminine basketball helms.

North Plainfield was glorious in defeat not only because it played the Plainfielders to a standstill on the latter's home court, but because of the sportsmanlike acceptance of the disheartening verdict. It is bad enough to lose a hard fought contest in the regulation thirty minutes of playing, but a defeat by two foul tosses in an extra period is well nigh unbearable. Not a whimper of dissatisfaction came from the borough camp during the entire contest and the visitors were enthusiatic in their praise of the conquereoring five.

It was only fitting that Plainfield should annex a decision in the initial Interscholastic League tilt on the new Ninth street court. Pitting a team of new material against what might be called "North Plainfield veteran stock" the locals relied largely on defensive tactics to cop the victory, and they made good. Miss Morris' foul shooting ability, to be sure, was largely responsible for the result and her performance yesterday indicates that she will be a conspicuous factor in the league activities this year.

Borough male representatives took a decided fall out of the West Orange delegation last night. The "Canadians" played rings around the home squad from whistle to whistle and easily outclassed the opposition in every department of the pastime.

Up Elizabeth way the basketball athletes are garnering lots of indoor recreation out of a city championship fanning bee. Every little "scrape-together" outfit in the Union County seat wants to be recognized as the city's basketball crown bearer this year and if the promoters are going to give consideration to all who apply it will probably take from now until next January to roll off the elimination rounds.

Revival of basketball on a theatre stage reminds us of the exhibitions that were played in the Plainfield theatre last year. The Proctor management in Elizabeth has announced a series to start in the playhouse next Tuesday night and it is to be hoped that the Betsytown engagements will prove a greater success than those staged in the Queen City.

Harry Taylor, of the Silk City Elks, looks like the one best bet for the individual laurels in the Senior League this year. Harry Taylor has been keeping his John Hancock on top of the heap for many weeks now and present indications are that he will be in the same spot when the final gong clangs.

Just as a little interest awakener the Plainfield Eagle bowlers shot a trio across at the expense of Newark last night. They don't often land but when they do they land hard.

BASKETBALL TONIGHT.

The Hope Chapel and Y. M. C. A. basketball teams will get into action on their respective courts tonight, and good attractions have been booked for both aggregations. Hope meets a team, the Bloomfield M. E. five, that has beaten them once this season, while the association team will play the Hasbrouck Heights Field Club quintet. Both games will be preceded by a preliminary.

HARRY TAYLOR LOOKS LIKE ONE BEST BET

Patersonian Still Leading the Senior Elks' Individual Bowling Race.

Averages compiled for the week from official scores in the Elks' Senior Bowling League, give Harry Taylor possession of the top rung in the individual standing, a seat he has occupied for several weeks and one which promises to be his at the culmination of the schedule. Taylor has rolled in twenty-six games for Paterson and has returned an average of 197.33 with a high score of 245. Coyne, of New Brunswick, is running a good second with a mark of 194.28 and Corydon, of Jersey City, is third.

Besides having the individual leader enrolled among their number, the Silk City aggregation also cherishes the honor of being high team in the circuit records with twenty-four wins and a dozen reverses. The Patersonians, although first in the team statistics, are running fourth in the average race, New Brunswick, Jersey City and Elizabeth topping them in the order named. Paterson is also fourth in the team high score tallies, Jersey City leading this department with a 1,070. Plainfield, although rooted in ninth place, is second in the high team score figures with a 1057.

P. H. S. GIRLS WON FIRST LEAGUE MATCH AGAINST N. P. H. S. IN BATTLE OF FOULS

Plainfield High School's new gymnasium, the finest of its kind in this section of the State, was auspiciously dedicated to an interscholastic following yesterday afternoon, when the Ninth street institution's feminine basketball representatives defeated the rival clan from North Plainfield High School in one of the most thrilling female athletic contests ever staged in this city or the borough. The final score was 16 to 14. So evenly matched were the rival forces in the point getting line that the score remained deadlocked at the completion of two regulation periods and a third chukker was necessary. In the eventful minute and a half of battling three fouls were called, one on Plainfield and two on the visiting side. After Miss Marjorie Burtis, captain of the borough sextet, failed by inches in her attempt from the fifteen foot mark, Miss Bessie Morris, the smallest individual on the court, came to the fore by bagging a pair of beautiful one point tallies for her side. It was Plainfield's game, the first blood to be drawn in the Interscholastic League race, the inaugural league verdict on the new court and the most sensational finish imaginable. P. H. S. cohorts swooped down on the playing floor and for several minutes a near riot was indulged in by the enthusiastic victors.

Although defeated, the North Plainfield girls covered themselves with glory. A beaten team of feminine athletes never went down to a more creditable reverse. Two points separated the combatants at the conclusion of the regulation thirty minute contest, but during that time the boroughites plainly outplayed their Queen City rivals. The fact that the North Plainfielders played better basketball does not retract in the least from the calibre of the exhibition staged by the localites, for the Ninth street girls guarded and passed in a clean-cut and effective style from whistle to whistle

The N. P. H. S. girls lost out on the shooting end. Failure to make good on a horde of penalty tosses and some chances at field goals threw the issue into discard. Plainfield, through the versitality of Miss Morris, made good on eleven fouls and this stemmed the tide of defeat and kept matters on an even footing.

Both teams indulged in offensive as well as defensive tactics and every kind of feminine basketball was exhibited to the record sized crowd of visitors. Close guarding resulted in the levying of many fouls, but not in a single instance was an intentional infraction noticed. The two fouls that decided the extra time verdict were prominent to everyone, although not intentional on the part of the offender. They were not unlike many others called during the contest on which North Plainfield failed to make good.

As a rule feminine basketball engagements are listless and uninteresting to the average sport follower, but the one yesterday afternoon was directly the reverse. Interest was at a high ebb from start to finish and the followers of the respective contingents kept up a continual round of applause. The din at times kept the players' nerves on edge and noticeably affected the foul shooters.

WEST ORANGE FIVE LOST TO BOROUGHITES

N. P. H. S. Came Out Ahead in Fine Game on Rivals' Court.

After a pleasant motor trip to West Orange, last night, accompanied by a lot of North Plainfield rooters, the borough basketball quintet easily defeated the West Orange High School five by the score of 39 to 9. The game was an easy one for the visitors, and they gained a good lead in the opening minutes, as Townley and Conroy started early to roll up the baskets, and at no time was the home team anywhere near its opponents' score.

In the first half the "Canadians" played a fast game, and with the aid of their signals, which seemed to work exceptionally good, played rings around the rival five. The first half ended 22 to 3.

In the second period the winners began to take things easy as they had an unapproachable lead over their opponents. But even at this they outscored the home team by 11 points, the half ending 17 to 6.

Every player on the local team must be given credit for the fine work that was accomplished, the guards playing a good defensive game and the forwards seldom missing a shot, while VanMater, in the pivot position, easily outjumped his man, a factor which kept the ball continually in the hands of the borough team.

Three games were played in the Elks' house tourney last night, with the result that the Van Buren aggregation broke away from the Hoyt and Cose teams by winning both of their games. The one captained by Marcus Hoyt dropped two and now has full possession of last place, while the John H. Cose quintet advances to a triple tie with the Waldorf and Todd teams.

In the first game played Van Buren's five took the measure of the Cose combination by scores of 798 to 642. The winner of that match then took on Hoyt. Cose and Hoyt then rolled a game and the former came out ahead at the end of the tenth frame, the scores being 755 to 736. Demler and Wescott, of the Hoyt team, were given averages of 145 and 115 respectively, as they did not appear.

WESTFIELD A. A. HOLDS ITS ANNUAL SUPPER

The annual supper of the Westfield Athletic Association baseball team was held at the home of the president, L. G. Venn, the early part of this week, and was a complete success. All of the players were present and Manager Fred McDonald made a report of the season. Financially the past season was a failure.

The Saurer baseball team, champions of this city, proved to be the best attraction in Westfield during the season, probably because the games played were always close. The association lost on the average of ten dollars per game, according to report, and some days there were not more than twenty-eight paid admissions. The team will probably be reorganized next season.

IS JACK MARTIN'S JOB SLATED TO GO?

So Says Philadelphia Despatch Which Sends Him to Portland.

Philadelphia, Pa., Jan. 16.—Developments in Charlie Dooin's quest of a new boss, yesterday made it pretty certain that the former manager of the Phillies will be traded to Cincinnati for Bert Niehoff, the third baseman.

With Lobert gone, the club needs a third sacker badly, and Niehoff would just about fill the bill. Either Stock, who comes here from the Giants, or Bancroft, of Portland, will go to short in place of Jack Martin, whose work last season could have been better. Reed and Murphy, the substitute shortstops, are to be let out.

There is only one possible hitch to the deal. When Herzog was here last week Dooin turned down the offer made him and Herzog went away. When Dooin finally consented yesterday to the trade Baker called Herzog on the 'phone at his home in Maryland. Herzog said the deal was all right as far as he was concerned, but inasmuch as he had reported to Herrmann that the deal was off he would have to have Herrmann's approval at this time before the trade was finally clinched.

PARK CLUB PINNERS TAKE SECOND SERIES

Elk Bowlers Could Only Grab One Game on Opponents' Alleys.

Exhibiting a mixture of good and bad pinning, the local Elks' alley representatives dropped a pair to the Park Club pin knights on the latter's drives, last night, the margins between each of the tallies being of a decisive nature. "To much one-step and hesitation" the night before, was largely responsible for the downfall of the antlered tribe, for the Parkers plainly had a better eye for the wooden bottles than their adversaries. The result of the return engagement on the borough lanes last night placed the rival forces on an even basis in their three-cornered title series, each having copped a trio of decisions and relinquished the same quota.

Brilliant bowling was blotted from the foreground in last night's engagement, there being little of a sensational nature connected with the three-game match. The "Canadians" opened in a runaway style by chalking up a 157 pin advantage, although their rivals obligingly held their total pinnage down to 766. With the Watchung avenue tribe spilling the wooden images in this style it was only natural that a rival force should go the score a few pins better and the Parkers simply walked away with the verdict. In the mid-session the visitors had a short relapse to form and came out of the scrimmage with a lead of thirty-seven markers, that being the one contest of the three in which the invaders loomed up as winners.

The final match, while closer than the initial one, was a second victory for the home talent, twenty-two pins separating the quintets in this chukker.

Double century scores went to the credit of Johnny Campbell and E. Daniels, the latter's mark of 216 going for the high individual tally of the series. Bill Nash, Daniels and Barlow climbed into the 190 class during the evening.

PROGRESS AND PROSPERITY IN PLAINFIFLD

MARKED INCREASE IN JERSEY CITIES

Eastern Counties of the State Indicate a Prosperous Year.

VALUE OF OPERATIONS

Reflected in the Purchase of Material There is An Approximate Gain of $69,127 Over Volume of 1914 Business.

(Special Correspondence to the Daily Press.)

New York, Jan. 16—Estimates from bureaus of buildings in all cities of importance in the metropolitan district including the five boroughs of New York, Westchester and Nassau and the five Eastern counties in New Jersey indicate that projected building operations only are in excess of the volume for the first half of January, 1914, and the estimated value is higher. The total number of buildings projected or started is 333 for this year as against 293 in the same peroid a year ago. The estimated value of these operations for the first fourteen days in this year was $5,259,041 as against $4,913,326.

Reflected in the purchase of building material or inquiries for basic structural commodities like steel, brick, cement, stone, reinforcement, plaster, lime and gypsum this represents a gain approximately of $69,127 over the same volume of business in the district in the first two weeks in 1914.

The gain in building construction and projection is outside of New York. In the five boroughs there is a drop in volume of sixteen and a decrease in value of $1,535,285. The big gain is shown in industrial projection and proposed residence and commercial construction in Newark, Long Island City, Paterson and to a moderate extent Jersey City, Elizabeth and Plainfield.

One reason why there is such a sharp decline in estimated building cost in this city is because competition is so keen that the well financed builder can get the full benefit of the present extreme low price of building material. In the suburbs the gain in volume is not in any degree proportionate to the gain in estimated value of buildings projected or moving ahead in the first two weeks of 1914. The gain in volume outside of New York city this year is twenty-four while the gain in estimated value is $1,781,000.

The state of the money market also has a bearing on the difference in construction cost and activity. In New York there is a retardant movement due to hesitancy among realty investors regarding the effect new subways will have upon such streets as Seventh avenue, Lexington avenue, Greenwich village and certain parts of Brooklyn and Queens. For the same reason there is a retardant movement around Military Park, in Newark, which is adjacent to the Public Service Corporation's new trolley terminal. The stagnation in shipping in Hoboken has crippled business there and has hampered free building construction.

Terminal improvement work of the New Jersey Central at Communipaw has helped to keep the volume of materials moving steadily in Jersey City. Industrial expansion is reported as being in contemplation in a limited degree in Union county, but residence work there is said to be putting additional work on architect's boards. The generally slow real estate market is responsible for owners trying to get as much out of their square footage as possible, hence the preponderance of double and two-family apartment houses in the outlying district.

The wholesale situation in the building materials market has strengthened, if anything. Portland cement, which recently slumped in price from $1.58 a barrel alongside of dock, in 500 barrel lots, New York, to $1.47, is said to be firmer and some interests in the trade predicted that this cutting policy had reached bottom and that the probabilities were that just as soon as building operations showed more definite signs of recovery the price would move up again. Suburban dealers have been showing more interest in this commodity since the cut and purchases are moving out with more regularity.

Hudson common brick buying both in New York and suburbs has picked up although current wholesale quotations are still low with the exception of covered brick. Nobody is making quotations on covered brick because navigation is still open to Poughkeepsie and brick barges are bringing in open cargo brick from Haverstraw. What covered brick that is being taken out now is for firms who have covered their own brick for distribution. Raritan River brick is being held on order at $6, and is stiff at that figure.

There is a better call for steel wire reinforcement, but pig iron is weak. Eastern structural steel orders are showing signs of improvement, but the current quotation at tidewater is still 1.21 c and 1.26 c. There has been a sharp advance in the price of flaxseed at Duluth and paint and varnish interests are paying 52 and 53 cents for linseed oil in this market. The market is strong here.

REALTY TRANSFERS

EXTENSIVE ALTERATIONS.

A number of alterations are being made about the shops of the Bosch Magneto Company on South avenue, the re-arrangement of the floor space being necessary to meet the new conditions arising since the present owners purchased the plant of Samuel Rushmore early last summer. No announcements have been made as yet as to when the company plans to erect further shops, which is understood to care for the work of the company. It is thought that the concern is still looking over several other properties in the immediate vicinity of their present holdings.

PLANS APPROVED.

Renewed activity in tenement-house construction was shown in the plans approved last week by the Board of Tenement House Supervision. Eight permits, aggregating $63,800, were granted, an increase of four in number, and $48,200 in value over the preceding week, when four were made, totaling $15,600.

READY TO START WORK ON SCHOOL

Weather Permitting Excavation of Cellar May Begin Monday.

Three building permits were issued during the past week by Inspector T. O. Doane, calling for the expenditure of $6,625, as against two permits and the expenditure of $2,000 for the preceding week. The permits are for the erection of one dwelling, for the installation of one tank for the storage of volatile liquids, and one covering alterations. These permits bring the total of the expenditures up to $7,628.

The signing of the contracts for the new Evergreen Avenue School, last night, by the building committee of the Board of Education and the contractors means the starting of the work in the immediate future. It is understood that the work on the excavation of the basement will be started Monday morning, should weather conditions permit. The permit for the erection of this building was issued by Inspector Doane during October of last year.

The permits as issued during the course of the past week are as noted below:

FIRST WARD.

William H. Abbott has been granted a permit for the installation of a tank for the storage of volatile liquids at 132 West Second street, at a cost of $28.

THIRD WARD.

Mr. Abbott has also been granted a permit for the construction of a frame dwelling on Sheridan avenue, east of Grant avenue. The structure will be two and a half stories high, have a frontage of thirty-eight feet, with a depth of twenty-six feet. The base course will be of concrete, with a cement block foundation, and a shingled roof. A modern steam heating system is to be installed. William H. Clum is the architect of the building. John T. Caulfield has the mason contract, while William D. Bird, of the borough, has the carpenter contract.

FOURTH WARD.

Samuel Taub is to place a two-story extension in the rear of the dwelling at 421 West Second street, measuring 10x20 feet. The estimated cost has been placed at $1,600. George H. Fisher is the architect of the improvements, and T. J. Freeman has been awarded the carpenter contract. The owner will care for the masonry contract.

JUST NOTES

Several more bungalows, which formed a unique feature of last year's building season in various mountain towns to the north of Plainfield, are to be erected during the course of the coming season, with Berkeley Heights, Warrenville and Watchung claiming equal numbers. Many New Yorkers continue to look to such places as ideal spots for summer homes.

All that remained of the old Force homestead, on Watchung avenue, disappeared during the course of the past week, when the foundation was carried away. The Friends' Meeting-house is now the only building on the block from Second to Third streets.

Local building craftsmen who are interested in the securing of employment are now inquiring what has become of the advertisement for bids on the work of the new Federal post-office promised by Congressman W. E. Tuttle for the opening of the new year. Bids will be as low now as at any other time, and the workingmen need the work.

indicate that extensive building operations should be expected during the course of the coming season.

A recent investigation by the New York State College of Forestry in co-operation with the United States Forest Service of the wood-using industries of the State has disclosed the fact that enormous quantities of larger sizes of lumber are now being manufactured into small articles, when they might profitably be made from slabs and other material formerly wasted. Wood is becoming of such value and the forests are being so rapidly depleted that new uses must be found for these materials. For instance, sawdust is now becoming of sufficient value to ship it to points where it can be used for ice packing, stable bedding, stuffing for upholstery, packing glassware and for the shipment of metals, crockery, etc. In Europe, sawdust is compressed into briquettes and sold for fuel, and a few plants have already been organized in this country for utilizing sawdust in this way.

BUILDING BOOM IN FANWOOD BORO

H. G. Lockwood Talks of the Future of Enterprising Suburb.

It has become well known that Fanwood borough has been experiencing a building boom during the past three years, but it was not known to what extent until recently, when H. C. Lockwood, who has been responsible for the reality activities, erected sixty dwellings since he has been connected with affairs in that borough, which compares favorably with the fact that during the ten years preceding only two houses were constructed. Land has doubled in valuation and the population of the little suburb has doubled with it.

Mr. Lockwood has realty holdings in various other parts of the East and says that in his opinion Fanwood is the most healthy and attractive place he has seen. To bear him out he points to the fact that it is the highest point on the Central Railroad of New Jersey, and also that not a contagious disease was reported during 1914. Mr. Lockwood believes that Fanwood is not prepared for a public school as yet, pupils are now attending in Fanwood township, but says he is ready to donate land for such a structure whenever it is wanted. All of the houses he has erected have been of the latest construction and of either wood or cement, while all have cost approximately $4,000, and have been bungalows, semi-bungalows and two and a half story dwellings.

Plans are underway for the construction of three dwellings besides three that are nearing completion at the present time. The building of others, including a store, has been hindered temporarily by the European war. When asked about the building outlook for the coming year, Mr. Lockwood is optimistic and says he would rather talk after things are accomplished, but it is plain to be seen that Fanwood has not yet finished her boom and will continue doing things for sometime to come.

COST OF BAY SPAN "PROPORTIONATE"

Basis of Distribution is Not Set Forth in Singer Bill, However.

Although the Union County Board of Freeholders has gone on record as opposed to the proposition of erecting a traffic bridge over Newark Bay between Elizabeth and Bayonne under any plan which involves an equal division of the cost between the two counties, Assemblyman-elect John J. Singer, of Hudson county, has prepared a bill for introduction in the Legislature providing for the construction of such a span to be built at the joint expense of both counties, the cost to be borne "proportionately."

The opposition of the Union county authorities to the plans for such a bridge, broached last year, was based entirely on the suggestion that the cost was to be shared between the counties in equal proportions. It is held that as Hudson county will derive the greatest benefit from such a structure, and as the tax ratables of that county are greater, so that the impost of taxes for bridge construction bonds will not be so heavily felt in Hudson as in Union county, the former should properly bear the greater part of the expense.

"Such a bridge, I believe, would be a big boon to the southern part of our county," Assemblyman-elect Singer declared. "Its need has long been felt. I have received hundreds of requests to present a bill bringing the matter before the Legislature. After having discussed the possibility of my bill being favorably received, I am prepared to go to Trenton to prove that every member of the Legislature should vote for its adoption. A structure across Newark Bay would mean a great deal for Elizabeth, but it would mean a great deal more for Bayonne."

The measure provides that the Boards of Freeholders in Hudson and Union counties shall build the bridge; that the cost shall be borne proportionately and that bonds may be issued to provide the necessary money.

In its present form it does not place a limit on the amount of money the Freeholders may spend.

ANOTHER DWELLING.

William H. Abbott, it is understood, is planning to erect in the course of the near future a two and a half story frame dwelling at Division and East Seventh streets, on a vacant plot next to the dwelling erected by Mr. Abbott last year.

BIG REALTY DEAL AT SO. PLAINFIELD

135 Acres of Land and Several Buildings Sold to New York Parties.

What may be considered one of the largest realty deals in this vicinity for several months, as far as the extent of the land sold is concerned, was completed yesterday afternoon, when 135 acres of South Plainfield land, including several buildings, was sold to a party whose name has not been made public. The sale was made by Slawson and Hobbs, New York real estate agents. It is understood that Nos. 246 to 252 West 103d street, New York city, was also included in the deal.

The South Plainfield property in the deal is part of what is known as the Plainfield Estates, and many local residents will know it as the old "Hollywood Farm." This tract was recently laid out for development purposes, with streets and building lots marked off. Whether it is the purpose of the new owner to do any extensive building during the course of the coming season has not as yet been learned, but it is probable that several dwellings will be erected as a result of the transfer.

CONSTRUCTION OF HOUSES MARK GROWTH IN EAST END

Prospects for an early spring revival of construction work have brightened considerably during the course of the past week, when it was announced that the Berry Construction Company, of which Enoch Berry is the head, is to erect from sixteen to twenty dwellings in the East End. It is estimated the cost of the structures is placed at $5,000 each.

The construction company recently purchased a large tract of land fronting on Leland avenue, East Front and East Second streets. It is expected that the work on the proposed buildings will not be started until after the first of March. The Berry Construction Company has erected a large number of dwellings in this section of the city during the course of the past five years.

"FUTURE OF CONCRETE" IS DISCUSSED BY EXPERTS

The number of realty transfers from the surrounding towns recorded at the Middlesex county seat surely Building page

In the Real Estate Journal for December appears a very interesting article on the "Future of Concrete." In it, the future of the material is placed dependent upon its appearance. Its structural value, the article avers, is unassailable. In regard to the possibility of beautiful effects, the article goes on to say:

"The limitation of concrete as to tone and color has not been, rightly speaking, a limitation of concrete at all. It is the limitation merely of the material which is used to bind up certain aggregates to make concrete. The cabinetmaker with his pot of glue does not bedaub his whole work with the material which is intended solely to hold together certain pieces. Why, then, if effects of color and tone are desired, should the concrete worker expose the binding material to the effacement of those aggregates which are in themselves beautiful? Concrete will be the poor man's material as well as the rich man's material and the average man's material."

POSSIBLE APARTMENTS.

It has become known since the sale of the Wills property this week to Charles C. Alexander, that it is probable that the new owner will erect modern apartment houses on the tract. The property runs through from East Seventh street to East Sixth street, and has a frontage of 110 feet on each of the thoroughfares. If Mr. Alexander finally decides on the apartment house idea, work will undoubtedly be started early in the spring. Several other apartments are under consideration by other realty owners.

CHAPTER XI.

The Race For No. 3.

"HUH! Get on to the glad rags!" Shorty surveyed his partner with simulated disapproval, and Smoke, vainly attempting to rub the wrinkles out of the pair of trousers he had just put on, was irritated.

"They sure fit you close for a second-hand buy," Shorty went on. "What was the tax?"

"One hundred and fifty for the suit," Smoke answered. "The man was nearly my own size. I thought it was remarkably reasonable. What are you kicking about?"

"Who? Me? Oh, nothin'. Say?"

"What do you want now?" Smoke demanded testily.

"What's her name"

"There isn't any her, my friend. I'm to have dinner at Colonel Bowie's, if you want to know. The trouble with you, Shorty, is you're envious because I'm going into high society and you're not invited."

By this time Smoke was straining at a pair of shoes. The thick woolen socks were too thick to go into them. He looked appealingly at Shorty, who shook his head.

"Nope. If I had thin ones I wouldn't lend 'em to you. Back to the moccasins, pardner. You'd sure freeze your toes in skimpy fangled gear like that."

"But there are to be women, Shorty. I'm going to sit down and eat with real live women—Mrs. Bowie and several others, so the colonel told me."

"Well, moccasins won't spoil their appetite none," was Shorty's comment. "Wonder what the colonel wants with you?"

As became a high salaried expert and the representative of the great house of Guggenheim, Colonel Bowie lived in one of the most magnificent cabins in Dawson. And here Smoke met the social elect of Dawson—men like Captain Consadine of the mounted police, Haskell, gold commissioner of the Northwest Territory, and Baron von Schroeder, an emperor's favorite with an international dueling reputation. And here, dazzling in evening gown, he met Joy Gastell, whom hitherto he had encountered only on trail, befurred and moccasined. At dinner he found himself beside her.

"I feel like a fish out of water," he confessed. "I've been living on trail too long. This sort of thing comes to me with a shock. I'd quite forgotten that women have arms and shoulders. Tomorrow morning, like my friend Shorty, I'll wake up and know it's all a dream. Now, the last time I saw you on Squaw creek"—

"I was just a squaw," she broke in.

"I hadn't intended to say that. I was remembering that it was on Squaw creek that I discovered you had feet."

"And I can never forget that you saved them for me," she said. "I've been wanting to see you ever since to thank you. And that's why you are here tonight."

"You asked the colonel to invite me?"

"No; Mrs. Bowie. And I asked her to let me have you at table. And here's my chance. You know Mono creek?"

"Yes."

"It has turned out rich, dreadfully rich. They estimate the claims as worth a million and more apiece.

"Well, the whole creek was staked to the sky line and all the feeders too. And yet right now on the main creek No. 3, below Discovery, is unrecorded. The creek was so far away from Dawson that the commissioner allowed sixty days for recording after location. Every claim was recorded except No. 3 below. It was staked by Cyrus Johnson, and that was all. Cyrus Johnson has disappeared, and in six days the time for recording will be up. Then the man who stakes it and reaches Dawson first and records it gets it."

"But why doesn't everybody know?" Smoke queried skeptically.

"They're beginning to know. They kept it secret for a long time, and it is only now that it's coming out. Good dog teams will be at a premium in another twenty-four hours. Now, you've got to get away as decently as you can as soon as dinner is over. An Indian will come with a message for you. You read it, let on that you're very much put out, make your excuses and get away."

"I—er—I fail to follow."

"Ninny!" she exclaimed. "What you must do is to get out tonight and hustle dog teams. I know of two. There's Hanson's team—seven big Hudson bay dogs. He's holding them at $400 each. That's top price tonight, but it won't be tomorrow. And Sitka Charley has eight Malemutes he's asking $3,500 for. Tomorrow he'll laugh at an offer of $5,000. Then you've got your own team of dogs. And you'll have to buy several more teams. It's dogs as well as men that will win this race. It's 110 miles, and you'll have to relay as frequently as you can."

"Oh, I see; you want me to go in for it!" Smoke drawled. "But aren't you afraid this is gambling?"

"It's a sporting proposition, if that's what you mean—a race for a million and with some of the stiffest dog mushers and travelers in the country entered against you. Big Olaf is in town. He is one of the most terrible dog mushers in the country, and if he enters he will be your most dangerous man.

"Arizona Bill is another. He has been a professional freighter and mail carrier for years. If he goes in, interest will be centered on him and Big Olaf."

"And you intend me to come along as a sort of dark horse?"

She nodded and continued earnestly: "Remember, I shall never forgive myself for the trick I played on the Squaw creek stampede unless you win this Mono claim. And if any man can win this race against the old timers it's you."

It was the way she said it. He felt warm all over and in his heart and head. He gave her a quick, searching look, involuntary and serious, and for the moment that her eyes met his steadily ere they fell it seemed to him that he read something of vaster import than the claim Cyrus Johnson had failed to record.

"I'll do it," he said. "I'll win it."

Smoke had traveled in a leisurely fashion up to Mono creek. Also he had familiarized himself with every mile of the trail and located relay camps.

So many men had entered the big race that the 110 miles of its course were almost a continuous village. Relay camps were everywhere along the trail.

Von Schroeder, who had gone in purely for the sport, had no less than eleven dog teams—a fresh one for every ten miles. Arizona Bill had been forced to content himself with eight teams. Big Olaf had seven, which was the complement of Smoke. In addition, over twoscore of other men were in the running.

No. 3 below Discovery was ten miles up Mono creek from its mouth. The remaining 100 miles were to be run on the frozen breast of the Yukon. On No. 3 itself were fifty tents and over 300 dogs. The old stakes, blazed and scrawled sixty days before by Cyrus Johnson, still stood, and every man had gone over the boundaries of the claim again and again, for the race with the dogs was to be preceded by a foot and obstacle race.

Each man in the contest had to relocate the claim for himself, and this meant that he must place two center stakes and four corner stakes and cross the creek twice before he could start for Dawson with his dogs.

Not until the stroke of midnight of Friday night was the claim open for relocation, and not until the stroke of midnight could a man plant a stake. This was the ruling of the gold commissioner at Dawson, and Captain Consadine had sent up a squad of mounted police to enforce it.

The Mono trail ran along the level creek bed and, less than two feet in width, was like a groove, walled on either side by the snowfall of months. The problem of how forty odd sleds and 300 dogs were to start in so narrow a course was in everybody's mind.

"Huh!" said Shorty. "It's goin' to be the gosh dangdest mixup that ever was. I can't see no way out, Smoke, except main strength an' sweat an' to plow through. I got a hunch right now they's goin' to be a heap of scrappin' before they get strung out. An' if any of it comes our way you got to let me do the punchin'. You can't handle dogs a hundred miles with a busted knuckle, an' that's what'll happen if you land on somebody's jaw.

"An' just remember," Shorty went on, "that I got to do all the shovin' for them first ten miles, an' you got to take it easy as you can. I'll sure jerk you through to the Yukon. Say, what d'ye think Schroeder's scheme is? He's got his first team a quarter of a mile down the creek, an' he'll know it by a green lantern. But we got him skinned. Me for the red flare every time."

The day had been clear and cold, but the night came on warm and dark, with the hint of snow impending. The thermometer registered 15 below zero, and in the Klondike winter 15 below is esteemed very warm.

At a few minutes before midnight, leaving Shorty with the dogs 500 yards down the creek, Smoke joined the racers on No. 3. There were forty-five of them.

Each racer carried six stakes and a heavy wooden mallet.

Lieutenant Pollock, in a big bearskin coat, looked at his watch by the light of a fire. It lacked a minute of midnight. "Make ready," he said as he raised a revolver in his right hand.

Forty-five pairs of hands were unmittened, and forty-five pairs of moccasins pressed tensely into the packed snow. Also forty-five stakes were thrust into the snow, and the same number of mallets lifted in the air.

Of Interest to Women and the Home

There He Sat With His Pipe Hanging Between His Teeth.

Daddy's Bedtime Story— About the Dog That Smoked a Pipe.

"THEY say that Duke has returned," said daddy as the children climbed up on the big divan to listen to the evening story.

"Who is Duke, daddy?" asked Jack.

"Duke is a doggie, Jack, that is the most human specimen of doggieness that you ever saw.

"Two years ago, when I was in New York city, I had occasion to go away downtown in the noise and turmoil of Nassau street.

"There is an interesting street called Ann street, very narrow, very noisy and not too clean. I was hurrying along at a great rate when I was stopped by a crowd that had gathered at the corner.

"Of course the sight of a crowd always arouses one's curiosity. So I stopped and craned my neck to see what was the attraction.

"There in the window of a billiard parlor sat a handsome collie. His coat was long and shaggy and of a beautiful brown color, with pure white markings.

"But it was not the dog's appearance that was creating the sensation. It was what he was doing."

"What was he doing, daddy?" asked little Evelyn breathlessly.

"Smoking a pipe," said daddy.

"Oh," chorused Jack and Evelyn, "how funny, daddy! Did the smoke really come out?"

"I didn't see the smoke," explained daddy, "but there he sat blinking complacently at the crowd with this big bulldog pipe hanging between his teeth.

"I was obliged to hasten on to a broker's office, but in the midst of business I asked about the dog.

"The broker told me that the dog's name was Duke and that his real home was across the big bridge in Brooklyn, but that every day he would take up his station in the window to overlook the crowd.

"A month later I was in the same locality, but the dog was not in the window. I inquired about him and was told that Duke had disappeared, that a large reward had been offered and that every one was on the lookout to find him.

"But for two years the whereabouts of Duke remained a mystery. Then as suddenly as he went away he returned.

"They told me, too, that Duke was a good swimmer and had saved the lives of several children at Coney Island."

The Wife's Money

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

"I want you to go to lunch with me today and meet a good friend of mine who is in charge of the grill room at Sears'," said a prosperous-looking woman in a fur coat.

"Thank you; that sounds pleasant," said her companion, who was so overshadowed by her friend's splendor that she looked like a modest little wren with a bird of paradise.

"This friend," continued the fur-coated woman, "was left a widow with three children. Her husband was a conductor on the New York Central and was killed in a wreck. They had their home and some money in the bank, but it would not begin to support them and educate the children. The plucky little woman never for one moment considered the possibility of not educating them. She moved here the year that Miss Jordon opened her girls' preparatory school and someone who knew her ability suggested to Miss Jordon that she be put in charge of the cafeteria. She tried her and the place became noted for its fine lunches and homey cooking. The girls began to engage her to do their catering when they gave parties. They learned that they never had anything to worry about if she was in charge; everything was well cooked and faultlessly served.

"Sears was looking for someone to run his grill room about that time and heard of her through one of her loyal friends. All the girls in school were her friends. They came to her with their troubles and she mothered the whole tribe far more than the Dean of women did. They were heart-broken when she left to accept the position at Sears' with a big salary."

"What a satisfaction it must have been. What about the children?" asked her companion.

"The oldest girl graduated at the normal in Sparta and is teaching in a big city school. The young man, a fine fellow, is studying to be a doctor and stands at the head of his class. His friends say he will win the big prize and be interne at the county hospital, and that means success later. The youngest girl graduated from high school with the highest honors of her class and is in an eastern college. I forget the name of it."

"What pride she must take in her success," said the plain little woman, with a sympathetic smile. "The day has gone by when a woman must sit down and be dependent in such circumstances; there are too many doors open to women. They can always find something they can do to support themselves."

"Yes, you proved that in your case," rejoined her friend. "Your boy has finished his education and is prosperously launched and you had nothing but your bright little headpiece to depend on when you were left alone.

"This is Sears'. We will take the elevator. Grill room, please."

Household Hints

TO USE CONDENSED MILK

Condensed milk can be used for almost every purpose that fresh milk is used for, and should be kept on every emergency shelf.

Directions for use:

For cream, add one part water to one of milk.

For rich milk, add three parts of water to one of milk.

For ordinary milk, add four parts of water to one of milk.

For infants, add from eight to ten parts of water to one of milk, according to age.

SIMPLE HOME REMEDIES

For the Baby Who Is Cutting Teeth—If the bowels are bad and where nourishment refuses to stay down, take a salt bag (be sure it has been washed clean), put two cups of bread flour into bag and boil five to six hours constantly; then take out, let cool, peel off the outside, scrape off a tablespoonful of the flour and add to a cup of milk and water (water must be boiled and cooled and milk sterilized); let baby have this instead of any other food, and it will be found excellent. It is a grandmother tried remedy.

A good thing for small babies who don't seem to gain as they should, is: After the bath in the morning, rub them well from head to foot with olive oil.

Spirits of turpentine used to wash out cuts and sores often saves blood poisoning.

For barber's itch, dampen the face with water and put powdered calomel on sores.

Hand Lotion—Two tablespoons of flaxseed, one pint water, one-half teaspoon carbolic acid, one teaspoon glycerine, one teaspoon benzoin, one-fourth teaspoon oil of lavender. Cook flaxseed and water ten minutes. Strain, add glycerine and carbolic acid. When cool, add benzoin and oil of lavender.

THE TABLE.

Lung a la Italiana—Cheap an substantial dish for 20 cents; feeds family of five. Two pounds beef or pork lungs, one pint tomatoes, two heaping tablespoons lard, one good-sized onion, one-fourth teaspoon red pepper (one of black pepper if preferred), one tablespoon salt, parsley to taste. Put lard in four-quart stewpan. Cut lungs in pieces size of walnut, salt and peper, add to lard and cook slowly about 30 minutes. Add onion to mixture and let brown, then add parsley and tomatoes. Fill stewpan with boiling water, boil slowly until quite thick, then repeat half amount of water and boil 10 minutes.

Good Hot Dish—Slice three potatoes, one carrot, two onions; put in saucepan, fry with a little butter. Shake around in pan until browned. Pour boiling water over till covered, then cook half hour. Add one teacup milk; season with pepper and salt.

Good Breakfast Dish—Take one large cup corn meal and one-half cup cream of wheat, a dessertspoon salt. Put two quarts boiling water in kettle, stir in slowly the dry meal, cook one-half to three-fourths hour. Mold in square pan and turn out on plate when cold. Slice and fry. Should be made the night before.

Good Vegetable Soup Without Meat—Put the vegetables in a kettle, put some butter and lard and a little water over it. When it is done it tastes as good as if meat were in. Is economical when meat is high.

Rolled Stuffed Steak—Take a nice round steak and pound it well. Make a filling of bread crumbs, peel and slice a few potatoes with one onion, chop these fine with a meat chopper. Spread steak with a layer of the filling, then a layer of the potatoes and onion, roll up tight, wrap with cord and roast in covered roaster until nearly done, then take off cover and brown. This is fine, either hot or cold.

ANTI-SUFFRAGE

Conducted by Plainfield Branch New Jersey Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage.

At the discussion of the child labor laws at the Monday Afternoon Club, on January 11, Miss Rochester, who had given a very enlightening talk on the subject was asked to name the States having the best labor laws for women and children. Amongst those named there was not a single suffrage State, while Wisconsin, Massachusetts and New York stood high on the list.

There has been some surprise expressed occasionally at the apparent apathy of the "Antis." The subjoined extract may explain this inaction as many of us have felt that while mothers and babies were starving the first and most important thing was to get agencies at work to relieve the dreadful need. We shall have to take up our anti-suffrage work soon and make enthusiasm help out our depleted treasury. We shall, of course, need money for absolutely necessary campaign expenses, but experience has shown that we can get along with less money than the Suffragists and still win.

The Elizabeth branch of the New Jersey association is giving out garments to be made by the unemployed women of that town for the Red Cross, thus aiding two worthy causes att he same time.

The Westfield branch gave a very successful card party, and realized $184 for the Red Cross Fund.

At the headquarters at Trenton a sewing machine has been installed and nightshirts and bandages are being made.

A part of the proceeds from the plays given in Trenton, November 10, will be forwarded to the Red Cross.

Fifty boxes for contributions have been taken by members of the Virginia association, although many of them have already contributed generously to the Relief Fund.

Mrs. A. J. Dudley, president of the New Hampshire Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage, has received the following letter in reply to her own offering the services of the organization to "arouse public interest and gather contributions:"

Dear Mrs. Dudley:

Your kind letter is just at hand and the Red Cross will heartily welcome any work in the raising of money or the making of garments that your society is willing to undertake.

Thanking you very much, I beg to remain,

Yours very truly,
GEO. B. LEIGHTON,
Vice-Chairman.

What Sort of a Landslide is This?

The Woman's Journal for October 3 predicted that "Ohio is going to win," and that success there "means a landslide in 1915, including New York, Massachusetts, New Jersey Pennsylvania and others."

But if suffrage success in Ohio would have meant that sort of a landslide; what sort of a landslide does suffrage defeat by a majority of 182,905 mean?

If we needed encouragement we might find it in the following clipping:

Suffrage Defeats Last Year.

IN CONGRESS.

In the Senate, March 19, a resolution providing for the submission of an equal suffrage amendment to the Constitution was defeated. The vote stood 35 to 34, 27 Senators not voting. This was 29 votes short of the required two-thirds.

IN THE LEGISLATURES.

In South Carolina, January 25, the House rejected unanimously a proposed suffrage amendment.

In Mississippi, January 22, the House defeated a similar proposal, 80 to 42.

In Maryland, February 18, the House of Delegates rejected the proposed amendment, 60 to 34.

In Virginia, the House of Delegates killed the proposed amendment, 74 to 13.

In Kentucky, the House took similar action, 51 to 29.

In Rhode Island, the suffrage proposals were killed in committee.

AT THE POLLS, NOVEMBER 3.

(Official returns to The Remonstrance from the Secretaries of State.)

Ohio: Yes, 335,390; No, 518,295. Majority against, 181,420.

Nebraska: Yes, 90,738; No, 100,842. Majority against, 10,104.

Missouri: Yes, 182,257; No, 322,463. Majority against, 140,206.

North Dakota: Yes, 40,011; No, 46,670. Mjority against, 9,659.

South Dakota: Yes, 39,605; No, 51,519. Majorty against, 11,914.

(Note: The majority in favor of suffrage in Nevada was 3,679; in Montana, it was 3,714—a total of 7,393. The majorities against suffrage in the five States in which it was defeated aggregated 253,303.)—The Remonstrance, January, 1915.

How Long Will It Take?

Suffrage was defeated in Michigan in November, 1912, by a majority of 760; in April, 1913, by a majority of 96,144. Suffrage was defeated in Ohio in September, 1912, by a majority of 87,455; it was defeated in November, 1914, by a majority of 182,905.

At this rate of progress, how long will it take for suffrage to sweep through the Middle West?—The Remonstrance, January, 1915.

Mrs. Feickert evidently has a special Suffragist history or she could not have failed to see the resolution introducing the bill disfranchising women in 1807, which distinctly states that the reason for such action is "to render the elections more dignified and orderly." The Suffragist stamps bearing the motto "Women voted in 1807—why not now?" seem to have fallen out of favor after the historical and logical answer was given.

SCOOP, THE CUB REPORTER — THE GENERAL'S JOB IS ALL BRAIN WORK — BY "HOP"

MARTINE VICTIM OF PRANKS

This brought Senator O'Gorman, of New York, to his feet.

"I am surprised," said he, "that the Senator from New Jersey in the situation provoked by the Senator from Kansas should find it necessary to resort to a plea of confession and avoidance. Living next to the State of New Jersey, as I do, I should be prepared to say that there is absolutely no foundation for the criticism of the Senator from Kansas regarding the Commonwealth of New Jersey. It would have afforded me much pleasure if the distinguished Senator from New Jersey had placed his answer on the same ground."

Senator Martine jumped into the debate not fewer than five times. He read statistics to prove that prohibition Kansas had a greater percentage of criminals and paupers and illiterates than Nebraska, her neighbor, which has high license and regulation.

Senator Martine charged also that Georgia's prohibition law had been a failure, which roused Senator Hoke Smith to action. Mr. Smith insisted that the law was enforced. Then Senator Martine got a copy of the last report of the internal revenue commissioner which showed the seizure of 876 illicit stills in Georgia last year.

Turning to Senator La Follette and shoving the report under his nose the New Jersey Senator remarked in a tone loud enough to be heard in the galleries:

"It's a hell of a record, I say; a hell of a record."

Mr. La Follette leaned back and laughed immoderately.

Senator Martine observed further that once he visited Georgia and while their saw bottles of "Schlitz."

"I never drink Schlitz," said he. "I want something stronger."

When he came to reply, Senator Hoke Smith, innocent that he is, confused "Schlitz" with "splits," and there was another occasion for real merriment in the staid old Senate.

In one of his flights Senator Martine gave the Deity full credit for the manufacture of intoxicants, bringing gasps from several temperance women in the galleries.

"It is a remarkable fact," said the New Jersey Senator, "in this connection that all the grains and all the fruits given by the great God of creation to his creatures that are most nutritous are richest in alcohol. I need only to cite wheat, rye, corn, oats, rice and grape, peaches and the apple. This was not an accident, but with a purpose deeper than our finite minds can fathom or discover."

That some clubman may have tried to "kid" the Senator from New Jersey was disclosed by an incident related by Mr. Martine, although the Senator himself apparently took the matter seriously enough.

"Mr. President," said he, "I was called to the telephone at my home Wednesday night at 10 o'clock, the party at the other end of the telephone telling me that we must abolish the saloon. He said the city was aflame with sentiment for the abolition of the saloon and requested me to join him at the Metropolitan Club (Washington's most prominent club), where we might talk the matter over while enjoying a glass of something.

"Innocently, I asked him where the Metropolitan Club was and I asked him also if it was a perfectly proper place for an old gentleman like me to go. He answered: 'Oh, yes, it is highly respectable,' emphasizing the words highly respectable.

"Think of it, Mr. President, here was a man wanting to rid the country of saloons, but inviting and enticing an old man to a highly respectable resort with a gilded bar."

The whole day was consumed in a temperance debate without a vote resulting.

It is doubtful if a vote will be reached today. The Democratic leaders were panicstricken last evening over the prospect that the whole legislative program may be tied up over the debate on prohibition.

STRANGE AS IT MAY SEEM

One of the most common contradictions in the average man is to thoughtfully provide an estate to sustain his family after he is gone, and then leave the estate unprotected, in the hands of inexperienced heirs or under the control of a friend who may not be equipped to handle or invest the property.

And even if an individual is competent to act as executor—trustee, he cannot be depended on to serve. He may not survive you; he may become disabled or move away; he may want to travel and not be tied down. No such uncertainties attend the appointment of this responsible Company. Its service is efficient and unfailing.

GREAT WORK FOR BELGIAN RELIEF

Local Committee Raises a Total of $2,045.89 for the Cause.

GIVE 1,901 GARMENTS

Balance in Treasury Will Be Used to Purchase Condensed Milk to be Sent Abroad for Starving Babies—More Money Needed.

Interesting reports were presented at the last meeting of the Plainfield Belgian Relief Fund Committee, held at the home of Mrs. F. W. Wallace, on Hillside avenue. When it is remembered that a few women were called together by Mrs. Wallace in October with the hope of raising a thousand dollars in Plainfield for the Belgian relief the following account of their success is encouraging.

Two thousand, forty-five dollars and eighty-nine cents had been subscribed to date and one thousand nine hundred and one garments had been donated. In adition to the garments three hundred barrels of flour, four thousand eight hundred cans of condensed milk, and one hundred and twenty-one pairs of shoes had already been shipped.

It was decided that the balance in the treasury be used for more condensed milk and that the sum be increased as rapidly as possible in view of the pressing need of food for the babies. The milk that has been sent from Plainfield, it is said, will support three hundred babies for three weeks. A New York firm has agreed through the efforts of a Plainfield man to furnish the milk in quantities of one hundred cases at the rate of little more than six cents a can, which means that for not much more than the cost of a carfare a Belgian baby can be nourished for more than a day.

An account written by Will Irwin and read by Mrs. Wallace did much to bring home to the women present the tragedy of the starving children and heart-broken mothers. The following paragraphs quoted from the account will be of interest to other Plainfielders:

"At the concentration yards they sat in family groups, the children huddled about their mothers and grandmothers like chickens around hens. No child among them laughed or played; they were too weary for that; but no child cried. I was trying to have speech with these refugees, and finding them too nerveless to give any account of their adventures when an ambulance arrived.

"A nurse and a physician descended. A woman rose from a distant group and joined them. She carried in her arms a bundle wrapped in rags. The slant of her back showed that the bundle contained a child—there is an attitude of motherhood that none can mistake.

"The women in the nearest group followed the pantomime with their tearless, hopeless eyes.

"'What is it?' I asked.

"For a time none of the women answered. Then one spoke in a dead tone.

"'Her baby is dead,' she said. 'She had no milk in her.'

"All that happened on the fringe of Belgium, to the refugees who had made their way out and were nearing safety, and enough comfort to keep soul and body together.

"I could multiply instances from the observation of others. There was, for example, the group of two hundred refugees who arrived in Holland early in November. They carried with them four dead, new-born babies.

"It was the same story which one hears everywhere. The mothers were so reduced by privation that they had no milk for their own. As for cows' milk, it was not to be had for any money."

COUNTY TAX BOARD TO HEAR 52 APPEALS

The Union County Board of Taxation has two hearings scheduled for this week. One is to be held at the courthouse on Wednesday, at which time fifty-two appeals are listed for hearing, and the other will be held in this city on Friday. It is expected the session in this city will dispose of the requests of residents here for reductions in their assessments.

The appeals to be considered at Wednesday's session are filed by residents of Garwood, Mountainside, Linden township, Rahway and New Providence. A number of large reductions are asked.

Nineteenth Anniversary Meeting and Supper Great Success.

Representatives from councils in Brooklyn, Westfield, Elizabeth, Cranford and Dunellen, attended the nineteenth anniversary meeting and turkey supper of Old Glory Council, No. 62, Daughters of Liberty, held in its rooms in the Babcock building, Saturday night. During the business session these officers-elect were installed by Mrs. Frazee, of Westfield, the deputy:

Councilor, Mrs. Minnie Stoeckle; associate councilor, Mrs. Gertrude Rittenhouse; vice-councilor, George H. Mundy; associate vice-councilor, Mrs. Elizabeth Mundy; guide, Mrs. Eva Eveland; recording secretary, Mrs. Annie Wyckoff; financial secretary, Mrs. Mattie Anson; treasurer, Mrs. Eva J. Moore; inside guard, Mrs. Mattie Martin; outside guard, Elmer Ganun; trustee, Walter Walker.

After the meeting and installation, the turkey supper was enjoyed by the members and their guests. This meeting marked the nineteenth anniversary of the organization. Eleven of the original 28 charter members are still living. The committee that had charge of the supper comprised Mrs. Maggie Thatcher and Mrs. Eva J. Moore, chairmen; Mrs. Elizabeth Mundy, Mrs. Anna Kettenring, Mrs. L. Demarest, Mrs. A. Wakefield, Mrs. Gertrude Rittenhouse, Mrs. Minnie Stoeckle and Mrs. Elise Soper. Mrs. Theodore VanPelt was general chairman of the entire affair, and Nimrod Horton had charge of the kitchen.

JAMES STEWART'S FUNERAL IS LARGELY ATTENDED

The funeral of James Stewart, whose death occurred Friday evening after a brief illness with typhoid-pneumonia, was held at his home on Grant avenue at 2:30 this afternoon. Rev. Dr. Charles E. Herring, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, was in charge of the service, Rev. Frederic L. Greene, of Hope chapel, assisting.

The large gathering of relatives and friends in attendance included delegations from the local Elks, Jerusalem Lodge, of Masons, and Perseverance lodge, K. of P., of which he was a member. The organizations also contributed set pieces to the large array of floral tributes.

During the service two selections were sung by Bertram F. Tallamy. Burial was made in Hillside cemetery, where brief commitment ceremonies were observed by the fraternities. The pall bearers were Alexander McDuff, John Mortimer, Jacob Blimm, William R. Townsend, John Traynor and Charles H. Dunham, all close friends of the deceased.

XMAS EVE DANCE NETS $167.15 FOR UNEMPLOYED

The net proceeds from the subscription dance given at the Plainfield High School, December 31, under the patronage of a number of society people amounted to $167.15, and a check for this amount was sent on Saturday by C. Ames Brooks, treasurer, to Arthur M. Harris for the fund for the benefit of the unemployed in Plainfield, the committee having voted to use the proceeds for this purpose.

The committee in charge of the dance comprised Austin W. Andrews, Henry W. Brower, Thomas M. Day, Jr., J. Hartley Mellick, C. Ames Brooks, Murray Rushmore, William P. Smith, Jr., William B. Tyler and John Valiant. At the time it was announced that the net proceeds would be voted to Plainfield charities.

LOCAL CONCERN REPRESENTED AT EASTERN CONVENTION

One hundred Eastern manufacturers, merchants, railroad and steamship men and bankers will leave tonight on the Foreign Trade Special over the Pennsylvania Railroad for the second annual foreign trade convention to be held in St. Louis on Thursday and Friday of this week. Among the delegation will be Walter L. Clark, vice-president of the Niles-Bement-Pond Company.

The convention will discuss the development of our foreign trade and an American merchant marine. Delegates from all over the United States and from American trade associations abroad will be present.

ELKS' FIFTH RECEPTION.

Members of the local Elks' Club will hold the fifth of a series of winter entertainments in their clubhouse on Watchung avenue, Thursday night, January 28.

AUTO STOLEN, THEN FOUND ABANDONED

Machine Belonging to Louis K. Hyde Taken From in Front of Theatre.

While the owner was attending a motion picture performance in the Plainfield Theatre, Saturday night, automobile thieves took the five-passenger Reo touring car belonging to Louis K. Hyde, of Mountain avenue. Immediately upon discovering the loss the owner notified the police and a call was sent to police departments in all surrounding cities to be on the lookout for the stolen machine.

Early yesterday morning the authorities of North Bergen, near Bayonne, found a machine which had apparently been abandoned on a lonely road. The Plainfield police were notified and the machine was identified as that belonging to Mr. Hyde. Sergeant Maurice Higgins and Mr. Hyde went to North Bergen, last night, and brought the automobile back to this city. It was none the worse for the "joy ride" through which it had probably been put and the local authorities are at a loss to know what the thief's motive was in taking it.

Many automobiles are lined up in front of the West Second street playhouse every night a feature film is shown and it is a wonder to many that similar feats have not been perpetrated before this time. Last week one of the patrons left a car standing too near the entrance to suit the police and the machine was moved to the other side of the road. When the owner came out he was unable to find his car and immediately set in circulation a rumor that it had been stolen. Mr. Hyde was fortunate in getting his auto back, inasmuch as the thief had probably gained a free road to escape and would have had little trouble in crossing into New York with his quarry.

PLAINFIELD COUPLE WED IN PASSAIC

Mrs. Julia Thornton Becomes the Bride of Ralph Auerbach at Sister's Home.

The announcement today of the marriage of Mrs. Julia Thornton and Ralph Auerbach, both of this city, which took place at Passaic on Saturday, occasioned considerable surprise among the friends of the couple. While it was known that they were engaged there had been no previous intimation that the ceremony was to be performed on the above date. It is understood that the couple will reside in Passaic after a trip.

Both the bride and bridegroom are well-known in this city. This is Mr Auerbach's second marriage, his first wife being Miss Clara Bloom, daughter of Mrs. George Geibelhouse, of West Front street. The bride was also previously married.

The marriage took place at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. William F. Coulter, 72 Prospect street, Passaic, the ceremony being witnessed only by the near relatives and a few friends. The bride was formerly engaged in the hair-dressing business in this city. Prior to her first marriage she was Miss Julia Allen. Mr. Auerback was president of the Plainfield Motor Cycle Club and he is interested in various sports.

WILL ARGUE MOTION TO DISMISS COMPLAINT

A motion to dismiss the complaint filed by Martin B. Bloomer against the Westfield Trust Company, former Congressman Charles N. Fowler and William Ackerman, to recover on a note alleged to have been given by the former Congressman to secure the purchase of stock, will be argued before Vice-Chancellor Emory, at Newark, tomorrow.

The complaint was filed several weeks ago. A rule to show cause why it should not be dismissed was obtained by Codding & Oliver, counsel for the bank, which acted as an extension in the filing of an answer to the charges. Judge David is counsel for the plaintiff.

DR. MOORE TO LECTURE.

Dr. Frank Moore, head of the New Jersey Reformatory at Rahway, will give an illustrated talk, under the auspices of the Men's Club, of the Crescent Avenue church, Tuesday evening, January 26. The meeting will be open to women as well as men and there will be no charge of admission. The subject will be "What New Jersey Is Doing For the Young Men Who Break Her Laws."

PRAISES SENATOR JAMES E. MARTINE

Rabbi C. J. Freund Commends His Stand Opposing Immigration Bill.

TALKS ON MORMONISM

Principles of the Faith Are Explained in Interesting Way and Many Beatiful Views in Salt Lake City Are Shown.

The first of a series of illustrated lectures under the auspices of the Young Men's Hebrew Association, of this city, was held in the Lyric Theatre, last night, and was largely attended. Rabbi Charles J. Freund, of Harrisburg, Pa., was the speaker and he gave an interesting talk, illustrated with slides, on "Mormonism From a Jewish Standpoint." Dr. Meyer D. Moldesky introduced Rabbi Herman S. Martin, who in turn presented Rabbi Freund.

Before beginning his discourse the Rabbi praised United States Senator James E. Martine for his support of the cause of the people of the world in the stand taken on the immigration question now before Congress. Senator Martine is opposed to the illiteracy test.

The speaker displayed many fine views. He said that there are many fundamental principles of Mormonism taken from Judaism. The Rabbi lived in Salt Lake City for nine years and is in a position to give facts first hand. The Mormons have thirteen articles of faith which are likened to thirteen in the Jewish ritual. All the mormon temples are called assembly halls and in Hebrew places of worship are called Bas-Haknases, which interpreted mean in "House of Assembly." In olden times the Hebrews went to the temple to pray, fast, feast and sleep if necessary and the same thing is done by the Mormons.

All Mormons are not permitted to go through the temple, unless they have morally lived up to the ritual, which is similar to the Hebrew sacred laws. Rabbi Freund showed a number of pictures of the interior of the Mormon temple which was started in 1853 and not completed until 1893. The baptismal fount is a beautiful piece of architecture and rests on the backs of twelve oxen.

Salt Lake City is called "Zion" by the Mormons. The Dead Sea in Palestine resembles the Salt Lake near Salt Lake City. He stated that the Mormons give one-tenth of their income to the church, which was also done by the Jews of early days.

The Mormon claims to be a half-brother to the Jew. The young men of the Mormon faith travel throughout the world and preach. They are not given money for their expenses and must earn their own living.

Pictures of Joseph Smith, president of the Mormons, were shown, and views of the grave of Brigham Young, father of the faith, surrounded by the graves of several of his wives were also depicted and proved of interest. Rabbi Feund stated that Maud Adams, the well known actress, is of Mormon parentage.

The Mormons believe in co-operation and stick together. They have a co-operative store in which 7,000 clerks are employed, all of whom contribute one-tenth of their wages to the church.

The speaker informed that in Salt Lake City there are churches of every denomination as well as the Mormon church. He told of a little colony of Jews which was begun forty years ago and has flourished. They irrigated the land which is now productive of luxuriant crops. He stated that the Jews and the Mormons are very friendly.

NEW EVERGREEN AVENUE SCHOOL WORK UNDER WAY

In an announcement made this morning Henry R. Conger, clerk of the local Board of Education, stated that all of the contracts for work on the new Evergreen Avenue School have been signed and all is now in readiness for the actual structural work to start.

Weather permitting the contractors will probably start the excavation work for the cellar within a few days. Materials to be used by the builders are being transferred to the plot.

EUCHRE AND PINOCHLE PARTY.

The Junior O. U. A. M. Club will give a public euchre and pinochle party in Junior Hall, 116 East Front street, Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock. Refreshments will be served by the committee in charge of the affair.

RASORES TO MEET.

The Rasores will meet tomorrow with Mrs. L. N. Lovell, of Crescent avenue.

ELEVEN QUAKES IN STRICKEN DISTRICT

Renewal of Seismic Disturbance is Felt Near Rome.

Rome, Jan. 18.—A renewal of seismic disturbance yesterday added to the terror of survivors in the earthquake district. Eleven more shocks were registered.

Although the shocks were light, buildings which had been cracked and were totering were completely razed.

In Avezzano and Sora, the towns which had suffered worst from the disaster, people left temporary shelters in which they are living and took refuge in open places.

Rain and Cold Hampers Rescuers.

Rain and extremely cold weather in some parts of the district are hampering badly the work of rescue. This is particularly true of Sora, where a cold rain fell throughout Saturday night and Sunday. In many of the towns thrown down by the earthquake it is feared there are still living many persons beneath the debris and that, unless they are extricated soon, they will perish.

List of Victims Increases.

Latest reports received in Rome increase rather than decrease the aggregate of casualties and extent of the damage done. In the Department of the Abruzzi alone it is estimated that 30,000 persons met death. Property loss is put at $60,000,000.

The Italian government has appropriated $1,000,000 for relief work, and King Victor Emmanuel has given $60,000,000 for the aid of children abandoned by their parents or made orphans.

Relief supplies are pouring into the strickent districts, and it is believed that shortly there will be sufficient food everywhere to relieve temporarily the distress of the people. Trainloads of timber also are being dispatched to the destroyed towns for erection of huts.

NAME TEMPORARY MEXICO PRESIDENT

Roque Gonzales Garza Chosen by Convention at Which He Presided.

Mexico City, Jan. 18—Gen. Roque Gonzales Garza was named provisional president of Mexico, Saturday night, by the convention here, over which he presided.

Martial law was declared by Gen. Garza and the city is being patrolled by mounted police.

In electing Garza the convention pronounced itself to be supreme, and until a new president is elected has assumed all the legislative, executive and judicial powers.

Former Provisional President Gutierrez, with Gens. Blanco, Robles and Jose Vasconcelos, have left Mexico City for Pachuco.

It is said Gutierrez fled to escape assassination at the hands of Zapata adherents.

It is reported here that Gen. Villa, with all the troops at his immediate disposal, is hurrying here from Aguascalientes.

Gen. Felipe Angeles, who recently occupied Monterey, is reported also to be hastily returning to Mexico City.

Reports also come that Gen. Obregon, with the main Carranza army, is moving toward Mexico City after taking Puebla.

ENTERTAINED HIS FRIENDS AT BIRTHDAY CELEBRATION

William Bush, of Mountain avenue, was the host for a number of friends, Saturday night, at a party given at his home to commemorate his twenty-third birthday anniversary. A most enjoyable evening was spent in playing games and dancing.

Refreshments were served at a late hour. Guests were present from Jersey City and Plainfield.

BOY SCOUT MEETING.

Scoutmaster A. V. Searing, Jr., has called a meeting of Troop 5, Boy Scouts of America, connected with the First Presbyterian church, to be held tomorrow night in the chapel at 8 o'clock. Plans for the part that this troop will take in the exhibition that is to be held February 8 will be discussed.

WITHDRAW TROOPS FROM NACO.

Washington, Jan. 18—Orders were issued today by Secretary of War Garrison withdrawing the United States troops from Naco, Arizona. The situation has been satisfactorily arranged. The force consisted of infantry, cavalry and artillery.

PROMINENT MEN TO ADDRESS MEETING

Strong Protest to Be Made Against the Burnett Immigration Bill.

Unusual interest is being manifested in the mass meeting to be held in Y. M. C. A. Hall, tomorrow evening, when several prominent speakers will express their views in opposition to the literacy test as embodied in the Burnett Immigration Bill, which it is earnestly hoped President Wilson will veto when that measure comes before him for its final disposition. The officers of the Plainfield Democratic Club, who gave the movement its impetus, have been assured by scores of persons of all creeds and political views, that they are heartily in favor of the meeting and that they will not only attend, but will bring their friends with them. From acceptances already received indications are that the hall will be taxed to its capacity.

Among those who will address the meeting are William S. Bennett, one time member of Congress of New York city; Father Bernard M. Bogan rector of St. Mary's church, this city; H. W. Herrman, efficiency engineer of the Equitable Building Corporation, New York, and Albert A. Atterbury, of this city.

So widespread has the interest in the forthcoming meeting become that Richard A. Claybrook, president of the Democratic Club, has received a number of letters from individuals, churches and societies requesting that seat reservations be made for the writers and those who will accompany them. At first it was hoped that U. S. Senator James E. Martine, who has so bitterly opposed the bill, would come and make a short address, but this he will be unable to do. In Mr. Bennett the club has found a most entertaining talker and one who has made a profound study of the immigration problem.

The Bunrnett bill, and especially the literacy test, has come to be one of the most universally discussed measures now before the present Congress. Opposition has cropped up from quarters the least expected and there is every indication that the President, who ever has been opposed to the measure, will withhold the signature that would enact it as one of the Federal laws. Resolutions commending the President for his stand and urging him to hold out to the end will be offered at the meeting and there is little doubt but that it will be unanimously adopted.

Invitations have been sent to many of the leading and most influential residents of Plainfield requesting them to serve as vice-presidents at the meeting and the majority of them have readily consented to do so. Members of the City Council will serve in this capacity and Mayor Leighton Calkins will act as chairman.

$5 MORE FOR BELGIANS.

The Daily Press acknowledges receipt of another contribution of five dollars from a friend to be used by the local Belgian Relief Fund. Sums of any size will be gladly welcomed by the local relief committee, and may be sent to Miss Hartridge, the treasurer, or to the Daily Press office.

ROUT TURK ARMY IN SNOW STORM

Complete Victory for Russians in Three-Day Battle at Kara-Urgan.

LITTLE NEW IN BELGIUM

Germans Reported to Be Massing Troops on Aisne and to Have Refitted Belgian Ships at Zeebrugge—Allies Gain at Loos, Near Lille.

Petrograd, Jan. 18.—"During the last three days of the battle of Kara-Urgan a violent snowstorm raged uninterruptedly. The conflict terminated in a complete victory for our arms," says a late communication from the army of the Caucasus.

"Thanks to the efforts of our valiant Caucasian and Turkestan regiments, as well as the Siberian Cossacks, the resistance of the enemy was broken up. The rearguards which covered his retreat were destroyed, and the remainder of the Turkish army, hard pressed on flank and front, fled toward Erzerum.

"Our troops, pursuing, found in the ravines parts of Turkish cannon which the fleeing enemy, unable to remove through the snow, had precipitated from the heights. The pursuit continues."

Another official communication says the Eleventh Turkish army corps has been exterminated near Kara-Urgan.

"The Eleventh corps of the Third Turkish army was held at Hassan to serve as a general reserve when the Ninth and Tenth corps attacked toward Kars. These two corps, according to Petrograd dispatches, met a crushing defeat at Sari-Kamysh, the Ninth corps being cut to pieces, and the Tenth, barely escaping as a unit, was broken up into small detachments and vigorously pursued."

Paris, Jan. 18.—The French war office gave out the following statement at 3 o'clock this afternoon:

"From the sea to the Oise a violent storm prevailed everywhere yesterday. In Belgium there were artillery combats at some points. Near Autreche, northeast of Vie Sur Aisne, two German attacks were repulsed. In the sections of Soissons and of Rheims there is no change.

"In the region of Jerthes our artillery conducted a very effective fire upon the enemy's position. In the Argonne, German attacks upon hill No. 263, which is west of Roureuvilles, were without result. We ourselves took numerous German earthworks. To the northwest of Pont A Mousson, in the only portion of the forest of La Pretre which still remains in the hands of the enemy, we repulsed counter attacks and maintained all our gains.

"In the Vosges there was a heavy fall of snow. The enemy bombarded without serious results."

London, Jan. 18.—An "Express" dispatch says: "German reinforcements from Antwerp and Brussels, as well as from Prussia, have been moving steadily through Belgium in the direction of the centre line on the Aisne for three days. It evidently is the intention of the Germans to try

COMMISSIONER SMALLEY'S MEN REPAIRING CULVERTS

Street Commissioner Smalley's men have completed gathering up the limbs which were strewed all over town as the result of the recent storm, and repairing the culverts which caved in.

The cave-in at the bridge on New Market road south of Grove street, however, has not been repaired as yet. The hole there is about two feet deep and is tenanted at present by a small barrel upon which a red lantern is placed at night. Street Commissioner Smalley has done nothing about repairing this cave-in, because New Market road is a county road and as such is under the jurisdiction of the Board of Freeholders.

The cave-in of the roadway was caused by the breaking of a flagging which covers the bridge. As long as the cold weather continued and the roadway remained frozen and firm, everything was all right, but the thawing weather that we have been having since the first of the year, when topped by the deluge of last week, softened the roadway to such an extent that it sifted through the vent in the flagging.

Quite a number of the boroughites are wondering when the Freeholders are going to get busy and attend to the bridge. And when the Board finally center their attention upon it the citizens hope that they will fix things up right. The bridge in the first place should be widened considerably as it is at present too narrow to take care of the water of the brook in stormy periods. This water backs up and drains into the cellars of a number of the residences in the vicinity. The last time the Freeholders tackled the bridge they widened about three-quarters of it leaving the east quarter, the mouth of the bridge, about a foot narrower than the rest of the bridge. The citizens, who are acquainted with conditions there, have long wondered why this was done. Another thing that some of the citizens and John Fedderman in particular, cannot understand, is why the Freeholders allow the main of the water company to cross and protrude above the bottom of the bridge, thus obstructing as they contend the flowing of the water. Mr. Fedderman, being a property-holder in the vicinity, is very much interested in this question and he threatens to institute a suit for damages if the pipe is not lowered.

A portion of the sidewalk across the bridge has caved in since the cave-in above mentioned and the citizens now feel that the Freeholders should be pronged into immediate action.

AWARDED CONTRACT.

Paul Ratti has awarded Contractor Charles Wrage the contract of erecting the store to be located in the driveway between Mr. Ratti's fruit store and the property of the Park Hotel. Contractor Wrage has subcontracted the mason work to Walter G. Clawson, who will commence work at once. Mr. Ratti is erecting the store with the intention of branching out into the barber business. He will hire a couple of tonsorial artists from New York to take care of the business.

John McMahon, of Railroad avenue, entertained Miss Elizabeth Bell, of Elizabethport, yesterday afternoon.

Contractor Charles Wrage has been making repairs about the residence of James Tarpey, on Front street.

'Plains & Fanwood.

The funeral services of Mrs. Mary A. Faulkner, who died on Thursday, were held at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Thomas Norton, Saturday afternoon, and were in charge of the Rev. J. Madison Hare, pastor of the Baptist church. Many relatives and friends of the deceased were present and there were many beautiful floral tributes. Interment was made in Cypress cemetery, Brooklyn, yesterday morning.

In his annual report for the year of 1914, Frank Anson, librarian of the Scotch Plains Public Library, makes a comparison with that of 1910, the year in which he took charge, and shows an increase of a hundred per cent in all departments. In 1910 the visitors were 675, books loaned 414, whereas in the year just ended the visitors numbered 1,954 and the books loaned 1,981. The officers for the ensuing year are the same as last year: President, Ira G. Walker; vice president, William F. Ward; secretary, Samuel Hollingsworth; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Thomas H. Paff; treasurer, Philip Jahn, and librarian, Frank Anson.

About twenty-five couple enjoyed an evening of dancing in the Fanwood firehouse on Saturday evening, under the auspices of the Sunshine Club. The next one of the club's dances will be held about the first of February.

The first meeting of the Fanwood Fire Company of the new year will be held in the firehouse tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock. The election of officers and other matters of yearly note, including reading of reports, will take place.

Indications point to the success of the open meeting of the Fanwood Township Sunday-school Association, at which all of the Sunday-schools in the township will be represented, to be held in the All Saints Episcopal church this evening at 8 o'clock.

Clarence Slocum led an interesting meeting of the Epworth League in the Methodist church last evening, and gave an interesting talk on "League Study Classes."

One of the busiest men in this place since the outbreak of the European war has been Captain S. B. Saunders, who has had change of the sending of many shiploads of horses across the ocean for the use of the allied armies. Three local boys are on ships making trips now as his representatives, his son, Keith, having already made two round trips. The others are Dick Hart and Benjamin Elliot. All are scheduled to arrive in this country the latter part of the week on return trips.

A meeting of the Junior League Society is in progress this afternoon at the home of the president, Miss Elizabeth Babcock, on North avenue. The girls are at present engaged in sewing garments for the missions.

Mrs. Edward G. Read, of Plainfield, will address the Ladies' Aid Society of the Mary E. Wilson Memorial Union church tomorrow afternoon, at the regular meeting, which will be held at the home of Mrs. William M. Demler. Mrs. Read will give an address on "Mountain Whites."

Rev. L. H. Shields, of Princeton conducted the services at the Mary E. Wilson Memorial Union church yesterday.

Miss Margaret B. Ackor, of Plainfield, visited relatives here yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard J. Vail, of East Orange, visited here Saturday.

George N. Beeching lost eight ducks Saturday night in the same mysterious way that so many have lost chickens and ducks. It is said to be the work of unknown dogs and although the police have been searching for the dogs no trace has been found. The township has paid out over $100 in the last two months for fowls killed by these unknown dogs.

A large number of friends and relatives attended the funeral of Stephen Bicknell, Saturday afternoon, at his late home on Sterling road. Rev. Dr. C. E. Herring, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, Plainfield, officiated. Mrs. Charles E. Spier, of Watchung, sang several favorites of the deceased. Interment was made in Hillside cemetery, the bearers being Silas Winans, Dirk de Haas, George A. Schmidt, William M. Demler, Clarence E. Kellogg and George N. Beeching.

Many have admired the handsome amaryllys lily bearing twenty-eight flowers, which was loaned to the Pleasant Word Workers for chapel decorations by Mrs. John Herrmann.

SUDDEN DEATH OF TWO FORMER PLAINFIELD WOMEN

Following the death of Mrs. Ada Stevens, wife of John Stevens, on January 3, at her home, 686 Avenue A, Bayonne, occurred the demise of her sister, Mrs. Agnes Whitely, wife of James Whitely, on January 12, at her home, 256 Classon avenue, Brooklyn. They were both daughters of the late Mrs. Alexander Cairncross, who resided in Plainfield for a number of years.

Mrs. Cairncross conducted a notion store on Park avenue, in the old building which was demolished to make room for the present fine structure erected by Walter Manning and Clifford Manning. Mrs. Cairncross and her daughters were well-known here several years ago.

NEED $75,000 FOR WOMAN'S COLLEGE

Rutgers Trustees Offer to Affiliate if That Sum is Guaranteed for Four Years.

If the New Jersey State Federation of Women's Clubs can raise a total of $75,000 to guarantee maintenance for four years, New Jersey will have a college for women affiliated with Rutgers College, at New Brunswick. This was the gist of a report made to the federation's directors by Mrs. William Shipman Douglass, chairman of the federation committee in charge of the project.

Formal expression of "willingness to affiliate with the Woman's College," under the proviso that funds sufficient to assure the existence of such a college for four years, was voted by the trustees of Rutgers at a meeting in New York last week, Mrs. Douglass reported. The college committee has already issued an appeal to citizens of New Jersey for funds. It will be aided in its work by an advisory board.

The federation committee, Mrs. Douglass related, referred its offer to raise funds for the proposed college and to stand sponsor for it, to the Rutgers College trustees.

MISS MARTIN TENDERED PARTY IN BROTHER'S HONOR

Those present were the Misses Mary Simons, Helen Peacock, Mary Dall, Margaret Rice, Marion Blanchard, Dorothy Manning, Elizabeth Martin, and Herbert Peacock, Russell Tomlinson, Chester Alpaugh, Miner Trowbridge, Eugene Martin, Townsend Dickinson, Donald Wean and Davis Blanchard.

SON OF DR. LESLIE D. WARD DIES AT WEYBRIDGE, ENGLAND

Wilbur S. Johnson, second vice-president and comptroller of The Prudential Insurance Company, Saturday received a cable announcing the death at Weybridge, England, of Leslie Perry Ward, son of the late Dr. Leslie D. Ward, first vice-president of The Prudential.

In the message announcing Mr. Ward's death no details were given. It is known, however, that Mr. Ward who was in his fortieth year, had not been well for some time. The arrangements for the funeral have not yet been made. During the latter years of his life Mr. Ward resided in Paris.

KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS PLAN TO REPEL ABUSIVE ATTACKS

Preparations are bing made by the Knights of Columbus to repel so far as possible recent attacks upon the Roman Catholic church. A fund approximately $50,000 is in the hands of the Knights, who announce their intention of carrying the campaign into every village in the country.

Within the last few years, two or three newspapers, published in the Middle West, claim to have attained astonishing circulations on the contents of their papers, which are restricted to abuse of Roman Catholics. Efforts have been made to exclude some or all of these from the United States mails, but so far without success.

Evidence is at hand indicating the desire of Protestant leaders to bring an end to religious bigotry and proscription. They declare their conviction that abuse by anybody is not the way to that end. Indications seem to be that Roman Catholics will find practically all Protestant leaders ready to co-operate with them, extended inquiry failing to discover any who sympathize with the attacks.

Trade In Plainfield and Grow With Us

The growth of a city depends largely on the amount of money spent within its borders. Are YOU buying in Plainfield? Are YOU selecting our own men to do your work instead of outsiders? Are YOU helping Plainfield to grow? Ask yourself this question. Are you?

Plainfield is one of the prettiest cities in New Jersey. She can point with pride to her magnificent High School, excellent graded schools, elegant homes and beautiful streets. What have you done? If you take Plainfield money and spend it in other cities, are you helping Plainfield to grow? Spend your money home where you and your children are enjoying the splendor of our city. Do YOUR part for a better and bigger Plainfield.

Interesting to Men--But to Women

The question of cultivation of good taste in a home means the purchase of whatever improves the appearance, comfort and welfare of every one connected with it. The woman is the purchasing agent of the American home; keenly interested in high grade merchandise and table goodies; the kind presented by Plainfield merchants, backed by prompt courteous attention, a stock of large variety to select from, and prices that are no higher than the stores of other cities.

Trading in Plainfield is the easiest, safest, and most profitable, and when you purchase an article that is not entirely satisfactory you experience no difficulty in having it exchanged or your money refunded. On the other hand, can an article purchased in stores in these other cities afford you the same protection as our Plainfield merchants? Sometimes an article can be exchanged, but then it is necessary to have it travel 20 or 25 miles back to the store where you purchased it, and the second selection forwarded to you, and if you wern't fortunate enough to make a second selection on the day you did your shopping you are either obliged to make it from a catalog or take another trip yourself to straighten the matter out. Do your shopping in your home town and avoid any unnecessary risks or delays. Help your city to grow.

THIRD OUTBREAK OF QUAIL DISEASE

Bureau of Animal Industry Prohibits Importation of the Birds.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 18.—The third known outbreak of quail disease has been discovered by the Bureau of Animal Industry in quail sent for examination from the National Zoological Park. These birds were received a few days ago from two of the principal importers in widely separated parts of the country. Most of the quail now on the market are imported from Mexico and are entered at the port of Brownsville, Texas. Under these circumstances all outstanding permits have been cancelled and further importations suspended for this season.

Quail disease, a highly contagious malady, to which all our native quail are apparently subject, was discovered in 1907 and was traced to a number of States. A second outbreak occurred in 1912, but was checked through the suspension of importation of birds from Mexico from which most of the supply of birds was drawn. Last year practically no birds were imported from Mexico and no quail disease was reported. This year a limited number of birds have been permitted to enter at Brownsville subject to quarantine maintained through the co-operation of the Biological Survey and the Bureau of Animal Industry. All birds which were suspected of having the disease were examined at Brownsville or forwarded to this department, but not until January 5 were the first undoubted cases of disease detected. Game commissioners and sportsmen who are interested in the introduction of quail or who may have purchased birds for restocking this season are requested to advise the department if any of the birds are known to have died from disease of any kind. As a measure of precaution any birds now in captivity should be kept under close observation for a period of at least ten days and in case any of them die the bodies should be forwarded to the Bureau of Animal Industry of the Department of Agriculture for examination.

LOCAL SPANISH-AMERICAN VETERAN MAKES APPEAL

Washington, Jan. 18—A Jersey boy who made the historic trip 'round the Horn with the battleship Oregon during the Spanish-American War and took part in the battle of Santiago, has written Senator Martine urging that a resolution be adopted by Congress which would permit the re-enlistment of all men who served on the Oregon during that trip and fight, for a period of three months beginning March 5 so as to permit them to make the trip through the Panama Canal and up to San Francisco on their old ship.

The writer was Paul G. Chase, of 508 Belvidere avenue, Plainfield, N. J. Senator Martine said a number of Senators had been appealed to for some such action as this, and he thought there was an excellent chance of something being done.

"YOUNG-OLD" MEN ORGANIZE CLUB

Won't Go Into Scrap Heap; Jobs For All.

MUST BE FORTY TO JOIN.

Average Age of Present Membership Is Little Over Sixty Years—Oldest Member More Than Eighty and Youngest Forty-three—Novel Club Instituted In Springfield, O.

With "Help Your Fellow Man" for its motto and a desire to aid its needy members by giving them a better chance to earn a livelihood, Springfield, O., has a novel organization in the Young-Old Men's association, made up of 100 members, all gray haired, with an average age of a fraction more than sixty years.

The association is made up of men from all walks of life who have passed the period of youth. The intention of the organization is to find employment for those of its members who are able-bodied, but have been thrown out of work because of the increasing number of gray hairs that have appeared upon their heads.

Under the leadership of former Mayor and State Senator Francke W. Dickinson the organization is beginning to get results. A workshop has been established in the business center of the city, where work can be sent to be done and where men needed for odd jobs can be obtained.

In the association are found men who have made their mark in professional and business life side by side with those who have failed and have been overtaken with old age and with little of this world's goods back of them. It is estimated that about 25 per cent of the membership are men who are in need of work and are able to work.

How Idea Originated.

The association was started by George W. Crossette of Cleveland, O., a native of Springfield. He visited his old home this last fall and met many of his boyhood friends. Finding some of these friends out of work, he conceived the idea of promoting this organization.

An advertisement was placed in the local papers for gray haired men over forty years of age to meet in the city council rooms on a stated night. No explanation of the meeting was given, and when the time of the gathering came a large number of elderly men was on hand. After the object of the meeting had been explained the association was formed.

Headquarters of the association have been established, where social rooms are maintained. The only qualification for membership is that the applicant be over forty years of age, have gray hair and be an American citizen. Religion and politics are barred as topics. No man is too poor to be eligible.

The membership embraces merchants, salesmen, farmers, physicians, undertakers, managers, messengers, agents, manufacturers, store clerks, janitors, caretakers, furniture workers, stockroom clerks, painters, carpenters, firemen, engineers, contractors, woodworkers, gasfitters, gas goods dealers, shipping clerks, foremen, hostlers, machinists, mechanics of all kinds and laborers. On the list are several under the heading of "retired."

The oldest member of the organization is over eighty and the youngest forty-three.

KITCHENER'S KINDNESS.

Sends Five Soldiers Home to See Their Dying Mother.

The London Chronicle says Lord Kitchener is so generally credited with an iron character devoid of sentiment in matters affecting his great purpose that the following story of his thoughtfulness is of special interest:

A Sunderland woman with five sons in the army lay dying. Her one desire was to see her boys again. Through the offices of a local Salvation Army officer four of the sons serving in England reached home within twenty-four hours, their expenses being paid by the authorities. The fifth son, however, was at the front, and there seemed little chance of the old woman's wish being fulfilled. But the Salvationist wired to the war office, and back came a reply over Lord Kitchener's signature saying that if the son could be found he would be sent home. Afterward came a wire to say the man was on his way home, and eventually he landed in time to see his mother. The authorities had paid his expenses and gave him a seven days' furlough and ration money.

PRIZE FOR WAR PROPHETS.

French Weekly Offers $2,000 For Best Revision of Frontiers.

La Vie Parisienne, the French journal, abandons austere war photographs for what approaches its usual levity. It offers its readers a $2,000 prize for the best forecast of the postbellum frontiers of European countries on a map supplied with its latest issue.

Readers must send maps with the frontiers drawn according to their individual prognostications before Jan. 19. The award will be made after the treaty of peace is signed.

GOVERNMENT LOOKING INTO RAISE IN WHEAT PRICE

Washington, Jan. 18.—Vigorous and immediate investigation of the wheat situation and the upward trend of prices has been ordered by President Wilson, it became known at the White House today. The President has instructed Attorney General Gregory to undertake a full inquiry to discover if the soaring prices are the result of a corner or combination in defiance of the law.

The President determined that some action should be taken at once when proof was laid before him that certain sharp advances in the grain market were not due to the heavy European demand, but to artificial causes. The President is said to have expressed himself vigorously in giving his opinion of men who would take advantage of world wide want to gain a few dollars. The Attorney General is to be given a free hand in pressing the investigation. The preliminary steps probable will be taken through the United States District Attorney's office in Chicago.

Y. W. C. A. NOTES

The annual meeting of the association will be held tonight and a large attendance is desired. The chairmen of the various committees will give their yearly reports and the election of board members will be held. An exhibit of the work of the educational classes will also be held.

DISQUALIFYING A JUDGE.

To the average layman the unanimous decision of the Court of Errors and Appeals that Judge Heppenheimer should continue to sit and hear the argument in the Passaic gas-rate case, is another blunder made in that litigation, as the Trenton Times points out.

The law, as found in the Compiled Statutes, seems to be clearly against the court: "No judge of any court who shall be related in the third degree to any of the parties to an action pending in such court, or be interested in the event of such action, * * shall nominate or strike the jury or sit on the trial or argument of any point in controversy in such action."

The charge brought by Counselor Record as a reason for disqualifynig Judge Heppenheimer is that he is an officer in corporations that have large sums invested in securities of the Public Service Corporation or in companies controlled by that corporation, the value of which securities, according to President McCarter, will be greatly affected by the gas rate decision. Further than this Judge Heppenheimer's brother is a director in the Public Service Corporation.

No denial was made of the facts and figures presented; the array of learned counsel for the Public Service Corporation could make no reply, and it took the Court of Errors and Appeals three-quarters of an hour to reach the decision that Judge Heppenheimer is merely a creditor of the Public Service Corporation, and therefore not interested to the extent that warranted his disqualification under the statute.

It is going to be difficult, as the Times says, to convince laymen that the president or a director in a corporation that has more than a million dollars invested in certain bonds and stocks, and whose business associates and relatives are directly interested in the management of a concern that stands behind those bonds and stocks will not be influenced in his decision by reason of such affiliations.

Judge Heppenheimer cannot afford to sit in judgment upon a cause in which he has an interest, even if his associates in the court concede to him the right to do so. He should withdraw. His interest is greater than is that of Justices Swayze, Garrison and Minturn, who are disqualified by the constitution, or that of Judge Williams, who was a member of the Public Utility Commission when the order in the gas-rate case was given.

TWO NEW FEATURES.

The average newspaper feature for children is a streotyped affair. The Daily Press begins a series of rhymes today which are so far above the average that we suspect that when one of them has been read to the kiddies, there will be an immediate demand that they be continued from night to night. In fact so clever are Mrs. Alice Crew Gall's Animal Jingles, that the elders will take delight in reading about Dora Duck, who had a bad temper; J. Augustus Rabbit, who told fibs and Frederick Mouse, who was greedy and didn't mind. Each little rhyme carries a moral with it, which is drawn in such a way as to carry its lesson and at the same time delight the imaginations of the little folks.

Everyone knows of George Randolph Chester, the originator of many clever present day characters. It is with pleasure that we announce tonight that Runaway June, Mr. Chester's latest story, will appear in the Press in serial form, a page being given to it each Monday night. At the same time our readers will have an opportunity to see the plot unfolded in moving pictures at Proctor's theatre each Thursday, following the publication of the various installments of the story. These are but two of the new features which will be added for our readers during 1915. Others will be announced from time to time.

C. W. Spicer's suggestion about placing the fire whistle at the rear of fire headquarters, with a compressed air plant to operate it, as outlined in his letter to the Daily Press following comment in these columns last Thursday, is a good one, provided it can be made to do the service. Councilman Cose, who as a member of the fire committee has given much time to investigating the matter, says that he thinks that Mr. Spicer's estimate as to the cost of installation is rather low, and he also says that in one or two cities which he visited where air whistles are in use the plan is not yet considered a complete success. the fire committee would never have had the whistle discontinued, had they been able to find a place to put it where there was some certainty that it would be maintained indefinitely. There are members of the committee who miss it just as much as the average citizen, and the people may rest assured that if a method can be found for restoring it to service its sonorous tones will again be heard in Plainfield.

As Abe Martin rises to remark: "It seems like ex-President Taft makes a speech every so often jest t show that he's still sore."

THE FORUM

Editor, Plainfield Daily Press:

Your writeup in Saturday's Press on "Martine Victim of Dry Pranks," was good reading. The Senator gave as a reason why he opposed prohibition the following. "It is a remarkable fact that all of the grains, and all of the fruits (including apples), given by the Great God of Creation to his creatures that are most nutritious are richest in alcohol." I would suggest that you ask the Senator through editorial comments, or in this letter any way you think best, either with or without my name, how many barrels of apples any man must eat to make him drunk; if there is rich alcohol in apples at all.

The facts are against our good Senator for there is no alcohol in apples while the apples remain apples, this has been proved fifty years ago. I challenge truthful contradiction.

Great Semi-Annual Shoe Sale

January 18 we begin the clearance of Women's Fine Shoes to make room for Spring Goods.

Three Reasons Why You Should Be Interested:—

First—the shoes offered in this sale are this season's models from many of the best factories in existence.

Second—the prices are irresistable in that you can save, in many cases, as much as two dollars on a single pair.

Third—because the department is in charge of salespersons who exhaust every means to see that you are comfortably fitted and perfectly satisfied.

BUILD UP THE HOME TOWN.

(By R. W. Glover)
In the "Advocate," Vulcan, Alberta, Canada.

If you want to live in the kind of a town,
Like the kind of a town you like,
You needn't slip your clothes in a grip
And start on a long, long hike.
You'll only find what you left behind,
For there's nothing that's really new.
It's a knock at yourself when you knock your town.
It isn't your town,—it's you.

Real towns are not made by men afraid,
Lest somebody else gets ahead.
When everyone works and nobody shirks
You can raise a town from the dead.
And if, while your make your personal stake,
Your neighbor can make one, too,
Your town will be what you want to see.
It isn't your town,—it's you.

NEW JERSEY PRESBYTERIAN MEN WILL MEET FEB. 22

"Men in Action" will be the general theme of the State convention that the Presbyterian Brotherhood of New Jersey will hold at Paterson on February 22. The convention is usually held on Lincoln's Birthday, but as Washington's Birthday is more generally observed as a holiday, thus increasing the likelihood of a large attendance if held on that day, the convention has been fixed for the latter date.

Copies of the official program will be mailed within a few days to the members in the different sections of the State. The leaders are hoping that special effort will be made to have all the Brotherhoods and other men's organizations in the Presbyterian churches of the State represented. They also invite the attendance of men from churches where there is no organization of the male members.

William O. Ludlow, of Madison, is the president of the State Brotherhaad, and William B. Kendall, of Paterson, is the secretary. The program of the day will include election of officers.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES.

The dancing classes organized by Miss Katherine F. Ball will meet for the first time this afternoon. There are two classes and each has an enrollment of about twenty-four pupils.

There will be a dance for the entire school in the auditorium, Saturday evening, January 23. An attempt is being made to secure the VanEpps' orchestra.

The committee for the choosing of the play to be presented by the senior class has decided upon "Trelawney of the Wells." The play will be given in the High School auditorium on Saturday evening, April 24.

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

During the coming week, Proctor's Theatre will present a succession of the most expensive and up-to-date pictures local patrons have ever been given. The feature today and tomorrow will be William A. Brady's production of "As Ye Sow," featuring Miss Alice Brady, the popular young emotional actress. On Wednesday, the eighth installment of the fascinating serial "Zudora" will be displayed and also the Chicago Tribune's special four-reel group of Belgium war pictures, taken under special permission from King Albert, now being shown in America for the first time. Thursday will mark the opening of another fascinating serial in George Randolph Chester's popular story, "Runaway June." Thursday will mark the continuation of the Pathe feature, "The Exploits of Elaine." These will all be given in addition to the high-class vaudeville program which has made Proctor's Theatre the most popular playhouse in the city.

K. OF C. LADIES' NIGHT.

Watchung Council, Knights of Columbus, has arranged to give a "ladies' night" on Wednesday, January 27. The program will be in charge of the house committee, of which George Howe is chairman, and will comprise an entertainment and dance.

MISSIONARY CIRCLE TO GIVE AN INDIAN SKETCH

The monthly meeting of the Woman's Missionary Circle, of the First Baptist church, will be held in the lecture room of the church tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock. At that time an Indian sketch entitled "Squaw 'Want-to-Know,'" will be presented by the following cast:

Squaw "Want-to-Know," Miss Rae M. Harris; grandmother, Miss Elizabeth McGee; Blue Bird, "Want-to-Know's" daughter, Miss Anna Sherwin; Sparkling Water, Miss Lucy Douglas; Bright Eyes, Miss Helen Roseberry; the missionary, Mrs. Albert Kennelly.

TO HOLD CONFERENCE IN CRESCENT AVENUE CHURCH

There will be a meeting for conference on spiritual matters in the Crescent Avenue church, Monday evening, January 25, conducted by the committee on evangelical work of the Presbytery of Elizabeth. These meetings are to be held at four central points in the Presbytery; at Plainfield, Rahway, Elizabeth and Bound Brook, and it is expected that other churches in the neighborhood will send representatives to this meeting.

It is hoped to have the assistance of such men as Rev. Dr. George Alexander, Rev. Drs. Jarvis, Mahey, Carson and Davies and the conferences will have for their object "The Stimulating of the Spiritual Life of Our Churches."

TO DISCUSS CONSOLIDATION.

The Board of Trade will hold a special meeting tomorrow night at 8 o'clock in the Exempt Firemen's Hall, 109 Park avenue, to discuss the subject of consolidation of Plainfield and North Plainfield. A full attendance is desired.

DONATION PARTY.

The City Union of the King's Daughters will give its annual donation party at the Day Nursery on West Front street, Thursday afternoon from 3 to 6 o'clock. All friends are welcome and are requested to bring dry groceries for the storeroom.

SIGMA BETA GIRLS HOLD MONTHLY BUSINESS MEETING

The Sigma Beta, a North Plainfield girls' secret society, held its monthly meeting at the home of Miss Lillian Spencer, of Grove street, Saturday night. All of the members were present and the general routine business was transacted. At the close of the session, a general good time was enjoyed and refreshments were served by the hostess' mother, Mrs. A. G. Spencer.

Those present were the Misses Lillian Spencer, Jubilee Rowley, Ann Hull, Edna Green, Margaret Ewart, Marjorie Burtis, Dorothy Martin and Lucy Douglas. The next monthly meeting will be held at the home of Miss Marjorie Burtis, of Fairview avenue.

ELOCUTIONARY TREAT IN HIGH SCHOOL AUDITORIUM

A rare treat is in store for lovers of good literature in the Plainfield High School auditorium Friday night. Principal Lindsey Best having arranged an evening of elocutionary entertainment.

Edward A. Meade, widely known as an elocutionist, will appear in two numbers, reading Charles Rand Kennedy's popular play, "The Servant of the House," and reciting the peace poem of Albert Noyse, "The Wine Press." The proceeds of the event will be devoted to the fund for the support of the Oracle, the High School literary organ, and to the incidental fund of the institution.

P. T. A. DANCING CLASS HOLDS FIRST SESSION

The first session of the dancing class under the auspices of the North Plainfield Parent-Teacher Association was held Saturday afternoon, in the new kindergarten rooms, at Duer street and Lincoln place. The Board of Education has consented to allow the economics committee to have the use of that place for their classes, which will save the expense of hiring a hall. The class Saturday was attended by about thirty of the youngsters of the borough who wish to learn the various steps.

Ronald Conroy is the teacher and Miss Jubilee Rowley presides at the piano. A night class for older people will be started this week, to be continued for twelve weeks.

GOING ABROAD.

Miss Emily Jopling, of Scotch Plains, is among the cabin passengers sailing on the White Star Liner Lapland, tomorrow for Liverpool. Miss Jopling will visit relatives while abroad. Booking was secured through the Estil Steamship Agency, of Park avenue.

ITALY EXPECTS—

FEDS ARE DETERMINED TO HAND O. B. THE K. O. POKE; BIG SUIT WILL SETTLE THE BASEBALL WAR FOREVER AND AYE

Whatever the outcome of the suit the Feds have brought against organized baseball may be its effect will be seen on our popular pastime next season. Should the Feds win, many predict wide confusion. Should they lose, they will likely pass from us forever into the limbo of forgotten things.

The opinion prevails that the Federal League in suing the bitter opposition are playing their last hand. It is said they are reaching the bottom of their resources and that failure to win a favorable verdict in the suit will mean their enforced demise. They have spent their nickels with a lavish hand and have raised the wages of players.

Should they die many ball players will gather in sable vestments, weeping at their bier, as will many ball fans, too. The Feds have been good sports and have enlivened the game no little. Excellent copy they have made for the sport page. A nation's sporting writers, should there be a Fed decease, would squirm in a frenzy of grief.

But the Feds are not dead yet. Not by a jugful, cry their officials cheerily, nor will they be, they say, when the thing is over.

If through a Fed victory in the courts ball players become free agents and may sign to perform when and where they please, the game may enjoy an added zest. If they are employed and discharged like any other employes one day will not know what the next may bring forth. It will be pleasant to go to the park and see a brand new infield that has sprung up in the night.

Till the affair is settled in the courts, however, it would be unwise to make any plans. The healthiest result for the game would be some sort of mediation or compromise between the factions. The Feds have shown themselves to be good sportsmen and have made many friends. It is hoped they will survive in one form or another.

WHITE AGGREGATION WINS OVER THE ORANGE TEAM

The White team, of the Y. M. C. A. Color Basketball League, swamped the Orange five Saturday night, by the score of 49 to 16. During the first half the Orange players did not score a point, while their opponents made 25. In the second half Bohl made 7 field goals and Vesterguard made one, which was the total of the losing team. For the winners, Buell, Vail and Karlberg did all the scoring. The score:

MORE ENTRIES FOR Y. M. C. A. CLASSIC

Many Athletes Will Compete in Noval Affair Tomorrow Night.

Additional entries for the first annual indoor athletic meet of the Plainfield Y. M. C. A. have been received by Physical Director Robert Meermans and the affair promises to be one of the largest of its kind ever held in this city. Five years ago a Booster Athletic Meet was held in the association gymnasium and proved a great success, representatives from the various schools and clubs in the city taking part.

The meet tomorrow night is planned on a larger basis and the management has received the entries of some of the best performers in the city. Contrary to expectations the meet has met with universal response and if it proves successful others of its kind will no doubt follow. The events offer a wide range for selection and the athlete of every kind will be catered to.

Prizes have been offered as an incentive to keen competition and the result will in an indirect way serve to single out the cream of the athletic talent in this city at the present time.

Judges selected by Mr. Meermans for the meet follow: Frank O. Dunning, Jr., C. B. Wardlaw, James McClymont, Henri Welle and Robert Meermans.

DISCUSS SPEED OF LINE.

Elizabeth, Jan. 18—Preparatory to the adoption of an ordinance regulating the speed of Trenton-Newark "fast line" trolley cars through this city, the Board of Works gave a public hearing on the matter at the City Hall. John J. Gettings, superintendent of the Elizabeth division of the Public Service Railway Company, suggested a twelve to fifteen-mile speed, that is a twelve-mile speed through Broad street and three miles higher on the outskirts. Melville Eggleston and Clark McK. Whittemore, representing the North End Improvement Association, urged a ten-mile speed limit.

BANK FAILS.

Pittsburgh, Jan. 18—The First National Bank, of Uniontown, Pa., failed to open its doors this morning. The directors are now in session. This is J. V. Thompson's bank. The failure of a coal deal to go through is thought to be responsible.

EUROPE'S WAR BLEW THESE LEVGAR WORKMEN SOME GOOD

When the 125 employes of the Levgar Structural Company at Dunellen quit work Saturday noon they were notified that commencing today the concern would start on a new time schedule, this change being due to various conditions that have recently arisen. A three-day schedule was put into force, but optimistic rumors in circulation yesterday indicate that the short schedule is not destined to last long.

Officials of the firm yesterday confirmed the rumor that a large order had been received from an ammunition concern that would probably give immediate employment to the full force for a month at least.

FIRST EPISODE

The Man With the Black Vandyke

CHAPTER I.

THE quivering center of all the intense agitation in Brynport was Bouncer. That energetic collie could remember no occasion so exciting as this in the Moore household, but as every one seemed thoroughly satisfied Bouncer helped in the happiness until his tail ached.

Once, and once only, Bouncer had been able to get past old Aunt Debby. This time he caught that coal black cook with her hands full of snow white dough. She lost her dignity and her center of gravity and sat down on the floor with a plump which jarred the house as Bouncer plunged beneath her flaring skirts, but she saved the dough. Bouncer meanwhile was up the back stairs, and a brown and white streak had flashed into the daintily cretonned room of his friend, mistress and playfellow, pretty June Moore. Here all was billowy confusion. June herself, standing by the long, low row of fleecily curtained windows, was the nucleus of all the frothing white. Her girlish cheeks were flushed, and her eyes were wide and shining, and a fat dressmaker, with her lip in her mouth and a maze of diabolical wrinkles in her brow, was on her knees completely encircling June with pats and pulls and twitches. A browbeaten dressmaker's helper, with a flaming red spot in each cheek and her yellow hair dragging to denote her repressed agony and with her bosom stuck full of pins and needles and things, was standing rigidly to one side holding an orange blossomed veil. June's mother, in a very special dress and with her hair done in the most painful precision of which a Frenchman was capable, stood just in front of June, wringing her hands and helping with her eyes in all the sacred ceremonies.

Marie, Marie of the broom and duster, black haired and red gummed, waited near, with a wide grin and moist eyes, to have things hung upon her when there was no more space upon the little white bed nor any of the chairs. Over by the door, talking incessantly, was Iris Blethering, June's bosom friend.

For only a moment Bouncer was permitted to gaze upon this puzzling scene. When he sprang too near the central figure of it all, with the perfectly natural and commendable intention of leaping upon her to show his undying affection, there was a combined shriek from six women, and five of them put him out.

Well, it was a strange world, and by way of setting his mind at ease Bouncer ran six times around the house and chased a cat up a tree and exchanged loud views with all the neighborhood children who hung upon the fence waiting to see the bride.

There were pink bridesmaids at every window, and a nice, regular father, gardenia and silk hatted and Prince Alberted, walked up and down the porch, looking at his watch until eternity dragged by, but when the end of time was come the limousines began to move, and Bouncer, with a yelp of welcome, sprang to his regular seat by the side of the first driver. Jerry pulled Bouncer's ear and shut the long pointed muzzle in a gasolined fist and gave him other rough tokens of friendliness; then the door opened and there came out a fleecy vision in whom the neighborhood children found it difficult to recognize June Moore, but filmy robes and pale cheeks were no disguise to Bouncer.

"Bouncer!" June Moore, in all her important finery, stooped swiftly down and took his head between her white gloved hands and looked into his wistful eyes and touched her cheek, for an instant, upon his silken ear and whispered to him, of all the world, her very last girlish secret. Then Aunt Debby, now divested of dough, dragged Bouncer back and locked him in the shed, while June Moore rode away never to be June Moore again!

What was this new world which she was approaching? No bride knows and no woman. June sailed contentedly. Ned—how he had filled her world! And how happy they were to be!

Why, they were at the chapel—the pretty little gray chapel loaded with vines. And there was Ned at a window of the Sunday school room and looking so strained and uncomfortable. And there were the ushers in the doorway. She hardly knew how she was suddenly transformed into a procession.

Why, here was Ned close beside her and trembling! In a mist they kneeled and said responses, and Ned put a ring on her finger. His own fingers were cold and clammy, but his voice was clear and earnest as he promised to love, cherish and protect her as he bestowed upon her all his worldly goods.

Some one in the church was crying softly—Iris Blethering, the bosom friend. Husband Bobbie was comfortably patting her hand. There was a general dabbing of handkerchiefs. Bright eyed little old Grandma Moore smiled and smiled through it all, a gay little grandma, with as smart a gown as any there, Ned's father, a strong faced, handsome man, sat stolidly with his arms folded and went over the ceremony with his lips, word for word. Bouncer trotted down the aisle, wagging his tail, his blue ribbon torn and the marks of the earth under the shed upon his fluffy coat.

Then the organ pealed again, and beneath the vine swung portals which June Moore had entered on the arm of her father, June Warner, on the arm of her husband, now emerged into the world of caroling birds and gay sunshine. And so they were married!

Then the bustle and confusion began again—the mad scramble into traveling clothes and the going away amid showers of rice and the earnest godspeeding of friends and the semihysteria of Iris Blethering, with Bouncer barking his indignant protest somewhere in the muffled distance.

Just before June came downstairs in her trim little traveling suit of blue her mother had slipped something into the hand of the daughter. It was the symbol of every woman's tragedy. It was a purse stuffed with crackling bills.

At last they were alone, launched upon the sea of life! They were in the tiny drawing room with a white toothed porter stowing things into racks and hanging things on hooks and sticking flowers everywhere.

Ned had clasped her in his arms and had covered her blushing face with kisses in that first realization, and now she sat by the window, her head pillowed contentedly upon his shoulder, and outside the world they had known up to this point in their lives was slipping past them. A tiny cinder darted into her eye. Her first instinct was to grab her handkerchief, and the search for that resulted in a little cry of dismay.

"My purse!" she gasped.

"Too bad!" Ned's voice was full of sympathy. "Anything in it?"

"My money," she replied in concern, with all at once a panic springing into her heart.

"Is that all?" he laughed. "Well, little wife"—and he laughed again at her swift blush—"why am I here?"

"I know," she faltered, "but"— She stopped, confused, and cast down her eyes at her interlacing fingers.

He studied her a moment in perplexity.

"I'm just the same as your purse, except that you can't lose me," he told her, dwelling with fond eyes upon her long lashes, her smooth, round cheeks, her red lips. He reached into his pocket with bluff heartiness and produced a roll of bills just as the porter came in with two snowy pillows.

"Good work, George!" approved Ned, and, catching two bulging eyes fixed upon the roll of bills he held in his hands, Ned stripped off a dollar. "This is my letter of introduction," he observed as he passed it over.

Ned turned to June, smiling, as the porter went out of the door and took three bills from the inside of the roll.

"I think you'll feel happier carrying this around."

He stuffed the bills into her clasped hands. She tried to close her hands against it with a sudden instinct which she could not fathom, tried to draw away from the money, but his fingers were the stronger, and, laughing, he kissed her and straightened up to put the balance of the money in his pocket. She looked at the bills, while a slow flush of crimson came up over her face. Why should this have embarrassed and humiliated her? It seemed absurd, for this was a part of marriage.

Ned sat beside her and put his arms around her, and she held up her lips to be kissed. Suddenly she buried her head on his shoulder and cried. Something had been swept away from her, something had been broken. The man had given, and she had received.

CHAPTER II.

THERE was a shadow on the Palisades, the grayness of a cloud which had not been there as they had started upon this journey. Money—the woman's money. It had been all right for June to coax her mother and wheedle her father, but they were mummy and daddy. Yes, Ned would give her all he could afford, but that was it—he would give it to her! She would be the recipient of his bounty, or, worse still, would be paid for being his wife! She suddenly arrived at the startling fact that this was the status of every wife. It was a most disquieting thought, destructive of self respect. It was unbearable.

Ned Warner felt the precious head on his shoulder become heavy. Poor little girl! Getting ready to be married was wearisome work. Well, little wifey's terrible tribulations, such as separating from home and friends and Bouncer and being made to give an account of herself, were all over. Ned braced himself against the arm of the seat for fifteen minutes, while the tired head drooped lower and lower. Poor little girl! Her neck would be stiff from that strained position. He moved ever so gently, but the gentleness was an unnecessary precaution. When he tried to shift her she slid into his arms without a flicker of her eyelids and lay there sleeping like a baby, her long lashes curving on her cheeks, her red lips half parted. Ned Warner was amazed at his wonderful luck. Who was he to deserve such a peerless creature as this?

He lifted June's feet into the other end of the seat. She gave herself one pretty shrug, which settled her into the graceful lines of perfect rest, put a pink palm under her round cheek and slept straight on. Ned covered her with a cloak, kissed her cautiously on the outermost surface of her cheek and strode out to the smoker.

He was back in five minutes to see how she was resting. The pretty little bride had not the rosy flush of sleep which he had expected to see. Her face had the pallor of weariness, and her beautifully curved brows were knotted as if in distress. He thought that the light in her eyes disturbed her and drew down one of the blinds.

That troubled knitting of June Warner's beautifully arched brows had not been due to the light shining in her eyes, but to the lurid flame which had sprung up in her mind, and that flame danced itself into the figures of weird dreams. She saw Ned tipping the white toothed porter; then she saw Ned, with equally hearty generosity, giving her three bills. The difference was $29!

Ah, the tantalizing fragrance of fresh cookies! She was in her mother's kitchen, and old Aunt Debby, black as midnight and round as a barrel, was drawing a pan of the delicious cakes from the hot oven.

Wonderful cookies, those! June was just reaching for one when, much to her disappointment, they were not there. The familiar old kitchen was not there. Why, this was the kitchen of the new apartments, the nest which was waiting for Ned and herself after the honeymoon! June was in a big white and blue dotted apron, struggling in the baffling art of making cookies. Some one came in. Ned—his eyes shining as the fragrant cakes were drawn from the oven! June turned them over on a white cloth. Ned burned his fingers on one of the cookies, and he burned his tongue, but he was highly pleased with the taste, and he gave June some money. He patted her on the shoulder. Again she saw her mother paying Aunt Debby and patting that valuable cook approvingly on the shoulder.

In her dream June saw Ned's office, a stiff, prim place, as stolid as the elder Warner. There was a nice looking stenographer, quite obviously great friends with a nice looking young secretary, and there was a nice looking office boy. It was evidently Saturday night, for Ned presently rose from his desk and walked over to the nice looking stenographer. He handed her the envelope containing her pay, and they exchanged a frank smile and a few pleasant words. Pretty good pay the stenographer received. She earned it. Ned handed the nice looking secretary an envelope. They exchanged a few pleasant words and a frank smile. Ned handed the nice looking office boy an envelope and laughingly squeezed the boy's chin and rumpled his hair. The boy grinned delightedly and popped the envelope into his inside pocket. Then Ned walked over to June and handed her an envelope. It was larger than the others. He bowed to her very courteously as he presented it. He spoke a few pleasant words, but did not smile frankly, and she cast down her eyes. There seemed to be a distinct understanding that she had not earned her envelope.

A poor, shivering old woman sat huddled in a doorway. Ned stopped, looked at the old woman a moment and then walked across to her and handed her a coin. He was very magnificent about it in spite of his compassion. He broadened his chest with the exhilaration of the good deed; then he smiled down at his wife most generously. Yes, his wife, for the old woman was gone, and June, in luxurious furs, but huddled, was in the doorway. It was she to whom he had given the coin!

A wan and tattered, pinched and hungry looking little boy stood mutely beside them, piteous appeal in his upturned eyes, and held out his clawlike little palm. Ned, beaming with kindly good will, placed a coin in the outstretched palm and put his hand in benediction on the head of June, for it was she, and not the wan little boy, who stood there piteously begging!

What wonderful scene was this? A bleak, wild country with huge, strange birds flying over it and no human habitation in sight. There were human creatures, though, two of them—a big, ponderous jawed savage with matted hair, who carried an enormous club over one shoulder. Behind him trudged a smaller figure, a woman, with matted hair hanging to her waist. In her nose was a ring, and to this ring was attached a leather thong, the other end of which was in the man's hand. He was taking home his bride. Music, the wedding march, the little gray, ivy hung chapel at Brynport. Was that Ned coming down the aisle? Was that June just behind him? Was there a leather thong in Ned's hand? Oh! Was the other end of that thong—

There was a sudden jolt and screeching noise, a rattle and a bang and the sound of hissing steam. June Warner jumped wildly to her feet and gazed around the little compartment. There were the flowers, the boxes of candy, the scattered rice. Comprehension came to her slowly, for she was still half in her dream. The train had stopped. She snatched up her cloak, jumped up on the seat and brought down the paper bag which contained her prim little traveling hat; then she jerked open the door. In the opening she stopped with a sudden flash of memory. Ned's money, the first of his generous bounty, the first of her pay for being Ned's wife! She jerked it from her belt, threw the three bills on the seat, ran down the steps, jumped to the ground and sped across the tracks to the opposite platform. She had no idea of where she was going, but anywhere would do.

As the train started to pull out she had a mad impulse to run after it to have it stopped, to call Ned, but there was no movement in her.

Across the tracks in front of the station a man, tall, splendidly groomed, black Vandyked, stood watching her intently.

CHAPTER III.

NED WARNER, as the train pulled out from that momentous station, was in the wash room of the smoker, with a pleasant smile on his lips, making the most elaborate toilet of his existence. He was to have the honor of dining alone for the first time with his charming wife.

Thoroughly complacent, he strolled back through the car to awaken the sweetest girl in the world.

"June!" he called and turned to bend over her seat.

She was not there! He hurried out to the vestibule. Not there! And now for the first time he saw the three ten dollar bills on the seat. One of them was slightly torn; all of them were crumpled.

Frantically he rang the bell; then he rushed out to meet the white toothed porter on the way.

"Where's my wife?" he demanded.

The porter's eyes widened until they made his teeth look gray.

"'Deed I don't know, boss!" he replied, as scared by contagion alone as if he had been accused of throwing the pretty little bride out of the window. "Honest to the Lord, I don't know!"

The delirious search began from that instant. In about two minutes the conductor, the brakemen, all the porters and half the passengers were searching for June Warner.

Ned, in his most lively vision of all, saw her dropping off the train, crushed and mangled beyond all recognition.

No vision, however, portrayed to him his bride slowly crossing the tracks toward the black Vandyked man! As she approached the man gave her a sharp scrutiny, smiled and strolled across the station platform to the bulletin board. New York local was due at 4:10. An express was due at 4:20.

June Warner was helpless and bewildered. She had no money, no friends. She could not even telegraph. Why had she done this foolish thing? Her dream! She saw herself again standing in the posture of a piteous beggar and accepting Ned's gifts. She saw Ned tipping the white toothed porter a dollar and then, with the same jovial generosity, handing her thirty. The touch of that money still burned her fingers. Foolish as her revulsion might be, it was keen and real nevertheless, and until she had thrashed out this question with the woman which had suddenly grown up in her she could not make of her marriage with Ned the sacred relationship which she had held as her ideal. The black Vandyked man passed quite near her, gazing at her with a smile. She walked around him.

Where should she go? Home? She could see her father and mother plying her with question upon question, driving her to tears with their worried insistence and their utter lack of understanding.

If not home where then? As if from the setting sun the answer came to her—just New York. So big and so intent upon itself that friends may dwell around the corner for years and never know.

Ned at that moment was extracting slow information from a half deaf and totally dumb old woman with a cross grained disposition. Yes, she had seen a young woman get off the train at a station back there. She didn't know if the station was Farnville or not, but the girl had rice in the brim of her hat.

June Warner, alone on the station platform, had grappled meantime with the first problem of her independence. That problem had to do with the means of getting to New York, and it was concretely expressed in her beautiful little gold watch.

In the meantime Ned's train had drawn up at the next stop, and he had the station master in Farnville in a minute and was inquiring for a lonely bride.

"Why, yes," huskily shouted the station master at Farnville, "a young person of that description has been loafing around here on the platform, and she's just getting on the down local," reported the station master. "She's with a tall fellow with pointed black whiskers. He's helping her on the train."

A black Vandyked stranger! Ned almost reeled. So that was why she had left the train!

"Stop them!" he yelled. But the phone was dead. Station masters are busy people.

A train thundered in—a down train. Ned looked at the bulletin board. The New York express. It arrived in New York at the same time as the local. The first passenger to board that train was a perspiring faced young man, swinging four pieces of white ribboned luggage.

June, paying but little attention to the man who had helped her, turned nervously into the car, a day coach, and viewed the interior with despair. In that coach there were only two passengers, a man and a woman, sitting together.

"Would you like to buy a watch?" invited June in her smallest voice as she confronted the rigid woman and held out her merchandise.

"No," returned the woman without moving a muscle. Only her feather wabbled. The man cast at the merchandise a look of contempt.

"It's a very nice watch," urged June. "It's a solid gold case and I don't know how many jewels. I only need money enough to get to New York and hire a taxi. Then I must find some work."

The black Vandyke man's eyes lighted. "I don't want it," observed the woman, looking straight ahead, while the man's glance of contempt strayed from the merchandise to the vender.

"Very well," nodded June, and a grain of rice fell from the brim of her little blue hat and bounced in the rigid woman's lap.

The woman turned sharply; then she half rose and looked at the top of the hat. There was more rice on it!

"Let me see that watch," she said icily. One lid contained a picture of June and her dog, and the other the date of the gift and her name and address.

"How much do you need for this?"

"She wants about $10, ma'am." This was from the pale faced conductor, who was so broad and stuffy that he was an offense in narrow aisles, but his eyes were full of twinkles.

The rigid lady snapped the watch shut and turned to her husband. "Dan." It did not seem possible that her voice could take on a wheedling tone, but it did. "I want $10."

The man turned to her with cold disdain. He produced $10 from a tight bound wallet, and instantly into June's mind there flashed that picture of her standing before Ned a piteous beggar!

The runaway bride took a seat by herself and was presently given the discomfort of knowing that the man was grumbling at the woman incessantly for having bought the watch. The black Vandyked man went over to them, and she saw him pay some money, and then he came back to June with the watch in his hand.

"Of course you won't permit me to present you with this?" he pleasantly observed. "If you care to send for it later, however, I will be very glad indeed to give you my card."

"Thank you," she accepted, and, taking the card, put it in her belt. "You are very kind."

It was not until they were nearing the station in New York that he spoke to her again.

"Pardon me," he said, bending over her. "If I can be of any service to you on your arrival I shall be very happy indeed."

"There is nothing, thank you," she replied, smiling up at him. "You are very kind."

At that particular moment the New York express overtook the local and slowly forged ahead, and Ned Warner, peering feverishly into every passing window, say the suave, black Vandyked stranger bending gracefully over his wife, and June was smiling up at him. Then Ned, against his will, passed on.

The express, however, was delayed a moment, and the local pulled in ahead of it. Ned was the first passenger out of the express, and he landed on the platform just in time to see the Vandyked man and June going through the gate side by side. Ned rushed after them, but it was not until he reached the Vanderbilt avenue stairway that he saw them again. June was darting through the door and just behind her was the man. He was smiling. With a rush Ned rounded the balustrade and went up three steps at a spring. He arrived only in time to see June speeding away in a taxicab and to see the black Vandyked man starting after her in another. He jumped into a third one and shouted.

"Chase them!"

"Hold on there!" gasped a breathless voice, and a panting porter piled Ned's white ribboned luggage on top of him.

Away through the tangled traffic, across Forty-fourth street and up Fifth avenue rushed the three taxis at breakneck speed.

FLEMINGTON FAIR PLANS OUT.

Flemington, Jan. 18.—The Flemington Fair Association will hold its Memorial Day races Saturday, May 29, and the July races on Saturday, July 3. The annual fair this year will be held August 10, 13, inclusive. The exhibit of farm products, which has heretofore been displayed by the granges, will be open to the agriculturalists of the county. Egbert T. Bush, of Stockton, will be the superintendent of the department. A woman's department will be an added feature this year. Fancy and other articles will be exhibited in the main building. Edward H. Wilson, of Ringoes, has been appointed superintendent of the show. D. C. R. Hoff, of Neshanic Station, and James E. Farmer, of Flemington, will have the poultry department under their supervision. The show is also to be enlarged upon this year. The better babies' contest will be under the auspices of the health department of the Flemington Woman's Club and the local physicians.

FUNERAL OF THE CITY'S OLDEST COLORED RESIDENT

The funeral of Nelson Peterson, who was probably Plainfield's oldest colored citizen, who passed away at his home on South Second street, last Thursday, was held Saturday afternoon at 200 West Second street, Rev. E. W. Roberts officiating. The burial was in Evergreen cemetery.

Mr. Peterson was born in Perth Amboy ninety-four years ago and one of his delights was in telling of Plainfield and its growth from a small town to its present size. He was of a happy, sunny disposition and was well-known and respected by those who knew him.

Mr. Peterson is survived by one son, Albert Peterson, and one brother, Lewis Peterson, of Fillmore avenue, this city, and a number of nephews and nieces. His eldest brother, Thomas, who died a number of years ago, was the first colored man to vote here after the passage of the Fifteenth Amendment.

GUS WILLIAM, STAGE STAR, COMMITS SUICIDE IN DEPOT

Gus Williams, known throughout the country a generation ago as an actor and who has recently been a vaudeville idol, shot himself in the head at the Getty square railroad station in Yonkers, N. Y., Saturday afternoon. He died shortly afterwards in a hospital. He was seventy years old.

Within the last year Williams appeared at Proctor's Theatre in this city and was a favorite with local theatre-goers years ago. He was a personal friend of Harry Sanderson, manager of Proctor's Theatre, who knew him when he began his career on the stage of Tony Pastor's in 1866.

Mrs. Williams, who as Emma Middlebrook, an actress, married Williams twenty-eight years ago, said her husband had gone to New York early in the day to consult with his manager. He had been in good spirits despite a long illness from a stomach disorder, she said. She had never known him to be morbid and was at a loss to account for his act. He had just left a train from New York when he shot himself.

Gus Williams' real name was Leweck. For a time he headed companies of his own, but for a number of years had been on the vaudeville stage. Recently he returned from a southern tour.

Williams, when still in his 'teens, enlisted in the volunteers and served through the Civil War, receiving an honorable discharge in 1865.

CITY COURT BRIEFS

Charged with fighting and acting disorderly on Richmond street, Antonio Parbenisky, an old offender, was arraigned before City Judge DeMeza, this morning, and sentenced to serve ninety days in the county jail.

The local police yesterday were asked to notify relatives of Gustav Schuback, of 222 Prescott place, this city, that he had been injured and was in the Lebanon Hospital, New York. Schuback is employed in the United States mail service, and although it was said that his chief injury was a broken nose, no details as to how the accident occurred were given in the message.

Joseph Green, an old offender, was arraigned before Judge DeMeza this morning, charged with disorderly conduct. He was taken to the county jail this afternoon to begin a sixty-day term.

CHRISTIAN FIELD.

The trustees of the First Presbyterian church will meet this evening.

The women of the First Presbyterian church have been invited to attend a home mission rally to be held this afternoon in the First Presbyterian church of Cranford.

The sewing meeting of the First Presbyterian church will be held Thursday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock in the church parlors. All the women are urged to attend. The work now in hand is for the Easter apron sale.

The Dutch Arms, of Trinity Reformed church, will meet tonight and enjoy a special program of entertainment, after which refreshments will be served.

The Home Mission Study Class, of the Crescent Avenue church, will meet in the church parlors tomorrow morning at 11:30 o'clock.

In place of the regular mid-week meeting at the Crescent Avenue church, Wednesday night, there will be the annual gathering of fathers and mothers whose children are in the primary department. William D. Murray will speak on "The Cornerstone of Religious Education—the Home."

The women of Hope chapel will hold a sale of cakes, pies, etc., in the store at 180 East Front street, morning and afternoon, Saturday, January 23.

The shot rang out, and the mallets fell. Cyrus Johnson's right to the million had expired.

Smoke drove in his stake and was away with the leading dozen. Fires had been lighted at the corners, and by each fire stood a policeman, list in hand, checking off the names of the runners.

A contestant was supposed to call out his name and show his face. There was to be no staking by proxy while the real racer was off and away down the creek.

At the first corner beside Smoke's stake Von Schroeder placed his. As they hammered more arrived from behind and with such impetuosity as to get in one another's way and cause jostling and shoving. Squirming through the press and calling his name to the policeman, Smoke saw the baron, struck in collision by one of the rushers, hurled clean off his feet into the snow. But Smoke did not wait. Others were still ahead of him. By the light of the vanishing fire he was certain that he saw the back, hugely looming, of Big Olaf, and at the southwestern corner Big Olaf and he drove their stakes side by side.

It was no light work, this preliminary obstacle race. The boundaries of the claim totaled nearly a mile, and most of it was over the uneven surface of a snow covered, nigger head flat. All about Smoke men tripped and fell, and several times he pitched forward himself jarringly on hands and knees.

The upper center stake was driven by the edge of the bank, and down the bank the racers plunged, across the frozen creek bed and up the other side. Here, as Smoke clambered, a hand gripped his ankle and jerked him back. Arizona Bill, who had been treated similarly, rose to his feet and drove his fist with a crunch into the offender's face.

Smoke saw and heard as he was scrambling to his feet, but before he could make another lunge for the bank a fist dropped him half stunned into the snow. He staggered up, located the man, half swung a hook for his jaw, then remembered Shorty's warning and refrained.

It was a foretaste of what would happen when the men reached their sleds. Men were pouring over the other bank and piling into the jam. They swarmed up the bank in bunches and in bunches were dragged back by their impatient fellows. More blows were struck, curses rose from the panting chests of those who still had wind to spare, and Smoke hoped that the mallets would not be brought into play. Overthrown, trod upon, groping in the snow for his lost stakes, he at last crawled out of the crush and attacked the bank farther along.

A Fist Dropped Him Half Stunned Into the Snow.

Down to the fourth corner he tripped midway and in the long, sprawling fall lost his remaining stake. For five minutes he groped in the darkness before he found it, and all the time the panting runners were passing him. From the last corner to the creek he began overtaking men for whom the mile run had been too much. In the creek itself bedlam had broken loose. A dozen sleds were piled up and overturned, and nearly a hundred dogs were locked in combat. Among them men struggled, tearing the tangled animals apart or beating them apart with clubs.

Leaping down the bank beyond the glutted passage, he gained the hard footing of the sled trail and made better time. Here, in packed harbors, beside the narrow trail, sleds and men waited for runners that were still behind. From the rear came the whine and rush of dogs, and Smoke had barely time to leap aside into the deep snow. A sled tore past, and he made out the man kneeling and shouting madly. Scarcely was it by when it stopped with a crash of battle. The excited dogs of a harbored sled, resenting the passing animals, had got out of hand and sprung upon them.

Smoke could see the green lantern of Von Schroeder and, just below it, the red flare that marked his own team. Two men were guarding Von Schroeder's dogs, with short clubs interposed between them and the trail.

"Come on, you Smoke! Come on, you Smoke!" he could hear Shorty calling anxiously.

By the red flare he could see the snow torn up and trampled, and from the way his partner breathed he knew a battle had been fought. He staggered to the sled, and in the moment he was falling on it Shorty's whip snapped as he yelled:

"Mush, you devils! Mush!"

The dogs sprang into the breastbands, and the sled jerked abruptly ahead. They were big animals—Hanson's prize team of Hudson bays—and Smoke had selected them for the first stage, which included the ten miles of Mono, the heavy going of the cutoff across the flat at the mouth and the first ten miles of the Yukon stretch.

"How many are ahead?" he asked.

"You shut up an' save your wind," Shorty answered. "Hi, you brutes, hit her up! Hit her up!"

He was running behind the sled towing on a short rope. The fires had been left in the rear, and they were tearing through a wall of blackness as fast as the dogs could spring into it.

CHAPTER XII.

"Hi! You! Mush on! Chook! Chook!"

SMOKE felt the sled heel up on one runner as it rounded an invisible curve, and from ahead came the snarls of beasts and the oaths of men. This was known afterward as the Barnes-Slocum jam. It was the teams of these two men which first collided, and into it at full career piled Smoke's seven big fighters. Scarcely more than semi-domesticated wolves, the excitement of that night on Mono creek had sent every dog fighting mad. From behind sled after sled hurled into the turmoil. Men who had their teams nearly extricated were overwhelmed by fresh avalanches of dogs—each animal well fed, well rested and ripe for battle.

What happened in the next half hour Smoke never distinctly remembered. At the end he emerged exhausted, sobbing for breath, his jaw sore from a fist blow, his shoulder aching from the bruise of a club, the blood running warmly down one leg from the rip of a dog's fangs, and both sleeves of his parka torn to shreds. As in a dream, while the battle still raged behind, he helped Shorty reharness the dogs. One, dying, they cut from the traces, and in the darkness they felt their way to the repair of the disrupted harnesses.

"Now you lie down an' get your wind back," Shorty commanded.

And through the darkness the dogs sped with unabated strength down Mono creek, across the long cutoff and to the Yukon. Here, at the junction with the main river trail, somebody had lighted a fire, and here Shorty said goodby. By the light of the fire, as the sled leaped behind the flying dogs, Smoke caught another of the unforgettable pictures of the northland. It was of Shorty, swaying and sinking down limply in the snow, yelling his parting encouragement, one eye blackened and closed, knuckles bruised and broken, and one arm, ripped and fang torn, gushing forth a steady stream of blood.

"How many ahead?" Smoke asked as he dropped his tired Hudson bays and sprang on to the waiting sled at the first relay station.

"I counted eleven," the man called after him, for he was already away behind the leaping dogs.

Fifteen miles they were to carry him on the next stage, which would fetch him to the mouth of White river. There were nine of them, but they composed his weakest team. The twenty-five miles between White river and Sixty Mile he had broken into two stages because of ice jams, and here two of his heaviest, toughest teams were stationed.

He lay on the sled at full length, face down, holding on with both hands. Whenever the dogs slacked from topmost speed he rose to his knees and, yelling and urging, clinging precariously with one hand, threw his whip into them. Poor team that it was, he passed two sleds before White river was reached. Here at the freezeup a jam had piled a barrier, allowing the open water that formed for half a mile below to freeze smoothly. This smooth stretch enabled the racers to make flying exchanges of sleds, and down all the course they had placed their relays below the jams.

Dora Duck
(Who Had a Bad Temper.)

Miss Dora Duck lived in a field and swam upon a pond;
She was a lovely thing to see, a most decided blond.
She had a nice, flat, yellow beak and pretty eyes of black,
And everybody said she had a most melodious quack.

But Dora Duck, I grieve to say, one dreadful failing had.
Her temper, so her family said, was most amazing bad.
Whenever she went on the pond with other ducks to play,
She'd scold and make an awful fuss unless she had her way.

Her elders sighed and said, "Oh, dear, she'll come to some bad end
Unless she makes an effort her dreadful fault to mend."
But Dora went right on her way and did not try at all,
Until she had a lesson which cured her once for all.

She went out with her sisters to swim one pleasant day.
At first they all enjoyed themselves and had a splendid play.
Then Dora said: "I'll tell you what I think would be some fun;
Let's go and swim on Joneses' pond, it's such a lovely one."

But all the ducklings said, "Oh, no, we will not go away,
For Joneses' dog is big and fierce, you've heard our Mother say."
So Dora Duck went off alone, as angry as could be.
A nice young duck in such a rage is pitiful to see.

But when she got to Joneses' pond the dog ran down the hill.
He barked: "How dare you come in here? I'll eat you up, I will!"
He stood upon the bank and barked: "I'll eat you, I declare!
You're such an ugly tempered duck, I'm sure no one would care."

Then Dora Duck began to cry as loudly as she could:
"Please, Joneses' dog, don't eat me up; I'll promise to be good.
I'll try to keep my temper and always will be kind.
If you will let me go I'll be a better duck, you'll find."

At last the dog said, "Very well, but just remember this:
The very first time you are cross I'll eat you up, young miss."
So Dora went back to the farm, a great deal wiser bird,
And from that day to this she's kept her temper, so I've heard.

Temper is an ugly thing, no one would really choose it;
But this is strange, the worse it is, the worse you hate to lose it

The Wife's Money
BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

"Jim Kessel has been promoted to conductor on the main line," said Mr. Oswald, as he seated himself at the table, tucked his napkin into the top of his vest and began to carve the roast.

"That's quite a rise," said his wife. "I wonder if Clara will be more liberal with his pocket-money now."

Mr. Oswald laughed. "She doesn't approve of smoking, the boys say. Jim takes all his orders home uncashed; she gets the money, and if he asks for an extra quarter for cigars she seems to think there is a terrible secret to be unearthed."

"Well, Jim has so much pride in his position that the addition of a few brass buttons would compensate for much discomfort," said Mrs. Oswald, passing a cup of coffee.

"Jim doesn't keep his discomfort to himself," remarked her husband, settling himself to eat his dinner, all being served. "The neighbors say winter will be a relief, for windows and doors can be closed, and the family oratory will not be quite so audible.

"The boys got a joke on him last week and he thought the only way to get a respite was to buy them off with a box of cigars. It took him three days to work up enough eloquence to make Clara give him the needed money. It was what William Allen White calls a 'lung-testing event.'"

"Poor fellow. It's a shame," commented Mrs. Oswald.

"John Alcott lives next door," continued her husband, "and the dining room of one house is just across the driveway from the dining room of the other. As the weather was warm they had to have the windows up, and the Kesseis seemed utterly unconscious of the fact that neighbors lived within earshot. Jim would begin asking for money the minute he got inside the house. First, she said she had a big bill and had to get it changed, and then she was too busy to get it done. The last day he asked her if she had the change, and when she said 'No,' he said, 'I want that $2. I have stood all the chaffing I care to from those boys.' She told him he'd get no $2 from her and they could hear her bang the chairs around; she called him a fool to show them he cared what they said and asked him why he did not fight them and not be so meek.

"That made him furious. He said, 'I guess you're right about my being meek, when I have to scrap for three days to get $2.'

"'To burn up,' she interrupted. 'I work too hard and have too little to see money burned.'

"Finally he told her that if she did not get the $2 he would get the box of cigars charged and would get his own orders cashed in the future and give her what he chose, so that she could see how it was to beg for every cent she wanted. That brought her to time and he treated the boys. John Alcott told them he deserved a Victoria cross for bravery in the face of the enemy."

"I hope he will cash his own orders and take out his share of the money. Such tyranny should never be endured," said Mrs. Oswald, removing the plates.

"Clara has no use for the boys in the office," continued her husband. "She wants to move to the city to get Jim away from their influence. It's too bad for two decent people to make such a mess of their lives just because they made the mistake of getting together."

Household Hints

GOOD CORN MEAL DISHES

Corn Muffins With Dates—One cup white corn meal, two teaspoons brown sugar, one teaspoon salt, two tablespoons butter, a little less lard, 1¼ cups milk, one cup wheat flour, four teaspoons baking powder, one egg, one-half cup dates cut up small. Cook together the first five ingredients for 10 minutes in a small double boiler. When cool add eggs, dates and flour sifted with baking powder, beat thoroughly and bake in muffin pans or loaf in a quick oven.

Ash Cake—One quart corn meal, two teaspoons salt, one tablespoon shortening, boiling water. Add salt and shortening, scald meal; when mixture is cool, form it into oblong cakes, adding more water if necessary. Wrap cakes in cabbage leaves or place one cabbage leaf under the cake and one over them; cover with hot ashes.

Boston Brown Bread—One cup corn meal, one cup rye meal, one cup graham flour, 2½ teaspoons soda, one teaspoon salt, three-fourths cup molasses, two cups sour milk. Mix and sift dry ingredients, add the molasses and milk, beat thoroughly and steam 3½ hours in well buttered covered molds. Remove covers and bake bread long enough to dry the top. This may be made also with 1½ cups corn meal and rye meal and no graham flour.

Corn Meal Muffins—Half cup corn meal, one cup flour, three teaspoons baking powder, two tablespoons sugar, one tablespoon melted butter, one teaspoon salt, three-fourths cup milk, one egg. Mix all together, bake in hot oven.

Fried Corn Meal Mush—One cup corn meal, one-half cup white flour, four cups boiling water, two teaspoons salt. Make the mush and mold. Fry it when cold.

Virginia Waffles—One cup white corn meal, two cups boiling water, one cup milk, 2½ cups flour, two eggs, one teaspoon salt, one-fourth cup melted butter, one-fourth cup sugar, three teaspoons baking powder. Cook meal 20 minutes. Mix and sift dry ingredients, add alternately with milk, add eggs well beaten, and melted butter; cook as waffles.

Indian Pudding—Five cups milk, one-third cup corn meal, one-half cup molasses, one teaspoon salt, one teaspoon ginger. Cook milk and meal in double boiler two minutes, add molasses, salt and ginger, pour in buttered pudding dish, bake two hours in slow oven; serve with cream.

THE TABLE

Apple Sauce Cake—Cream together one cup sugar and one-half cup shortening; add a little salt, one-half teaspoon cloves, one teaspoon cinnamon, a little nutmeg, one cup raisins dredged in flour. Dissolve one teaspoon soda in a little hot water, then stir into a cup of sour apple sauce, letting it foam over the other ingredients. Beat all together, add 1¾ cups flour and one cup chopped nuts. Bake 50 or 60 minutes in slow oven. This is as good as fruit cake and keeps as well.

Salad — Equal parts of white grapes and Boston head lettuce. This is a little trouble, but will pay you as it is delicious when made right. Take one pound of white grapes, remove skins, cut in half and remove seeds. Break or tear with your fingers pieces of lettuce the size of the half grapes, the heart of the lettuce is best to use for this. Take the head of lettuce apart and wash and put into a cheese cloth bag and put right in ice, this makes it crisp and fluffy. Use equal parts of lettuce and grapes and mix with a cooked salad dressing just before serving.

THE WOMAN'S COLUMN

Chicago, Ill., Jan. 18.—Mrs. Potter Palmer heads the list of patronesses for the coming fashion show, in which prominent society women are much interested. Garments representing an outlay of $150,000 will be shown, and the styles of ten historical fashion periods, as well as the latest vogues of the hour, will be set forth by motion pictures.

Cleveland, O., Jan. 18.—Mrs. Myron T. Herrick, wife of the former ambassador to France, will be presented the first proof struck of a bronze medal cast by the French Artists' Fraternity to commemorate the generous assistance given French artists by Americans during the war troubles in Paris.

San Francisco, Cal., Jan. 18—Fencing for women, with a championship tournament set for April, has been added to the Panama-Pacific Exposition program of sports. The University of California is renowned for its number of high class girl fencers, and the events will excite great interest among experts with the foils.

Washington, Jan. 18.—Miss Margaret Vale, a niece of President Wilson, who will soon make her first appearance as a film actress, has received from her illustrious uncle a letter expressing his best wishes for her happiness and success in her new venture, thus setting in a measure presidential approval on the "movies."

Bloomington, Ind., Jan. 18.—Miss Elizabeth Harrison, daughter and great-granddaughter of two presidents of the United States, is to enroll as a law student at Indiana University in this city. Miss Harrison, who is a resident of Indianapolis, is now at a finishing school in New York.

Philadelphia, Pa., Jan. 18.—Lady Allan-Johnstone, wife of the British minister to the Hague, and sister of Messrs. Gifford and Amos Pinchot, is preparing to open a hospital in northern France for refugees and wounded soldiers. Mr. and Mrs. Gifford Pinchot sailed this week for France to aid Lady Johnstone in her work.

Minneapolis, Minn., Jan. 18.—Miss Freda Boss, until recently assistant general secretary of the Minneapolis Y. W. C. A., is on her way to Shanghai, China, to take charge of a Chinese children's playground.

Meriden, Conn., Jan. 18—Miss Forne Rogers, the charming young American actress, who was recently forced, because of too frank expressions of pro-German sympathies, to cancel her engagement with the London production of the "Sleeping Beauty," is expected home soon by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur G. Rogers, of this city.

San Antonio, Tex., Jan. 18—After a two years' search through the foundling institutions and nurseries of the country for an "ideal" child, Dr. and Mrs. Ralph Shedden, wealthy ranch owners of this city, are coming home with a beautiful little girl, Amelia Foust, 10 years old, found in a Camden (N. J.) orphanage.

New York, Jan. 18—Mrs. Charles S. Whitman, wife of the Governor, heads the list of patronesses at a banquet to be given next Wednesday to several widely known Suffragists from different parts of the State. This is the first time in the history of the State that the wife of a Governor participates in a suffrage demonstration.

San Francisco, Cal., Jan. 18—A benefit horse show, to be managed wholly by women, is engaging the hearty attention of a large committee of prominent San Francisco ladies. The show will be for the benefit of the People's Palace, a social settlement.

Salem, Ore., Jan. 18—Miss Marion B. Towne, Oregon's only woman Senator, holds the original theory that "speeches do nothing but please the supporters you have already," and therefore never resorts to campaign oratory.

New York, Jan. 18—The co-operation of 1,500,000 women has been enlisted, through the National Federation of Women's Clubs, for beautifying the proposed Lincoln Highway by the planting of trees. Each State plans to plant a special tree. New York, which starts the highway, will plant the white oak, and New Jersey, coming next, the laurel.

HAVE MEMORIAL FOR DR. SWAIN

Allentown, Pa., Jan. 18—A memorial service for Rev. George Swain, brother of Philip Swain, of Plainfield N. J., and for thirty-seven years pastor of the Presbyterian church, was held last Friday in the church. Dr. Swain died November 7. Those who took part were Mrs. H. M. Anderson, Rev. James A. Matheson, State Senator Barton B. Hutchinson, of Trenton; Professor William P. Finney, of Lincoln University, Pennsylvania, and Rev. Thomas Tyack, of Hightstown. A memorial tablet was unveiled by Dr. Swain's son, George B. Swain, of Newark.

ZUDORA

Episode Seventh Shown at Proctor's January 20, 1915.
"THE MYSTERY OF THE LOST SHIPS."

The seventh case, which Zudora was called upon to solve, proved to be the most difficult problem of all that she had yet encountered, and it was also destined to have an important influence on her future. It will be shown on the screen at Proctor's on Wednesday. A mysterious personage, one James Baird, makes his appearance, but just who he is and whence he has come are not revealed. That his identity causes John Storm some anxiety, however, is evident. As to Hassam Ali, he remains the same mystical, phinx-like figure, which he has been from the beginning.

It happens that the J. B. Starr Company, a great shipping concern, whose vessels ply in all parts of the world, keep losing ships without apparent reason, when no rough weather or collisions have been reported. They gain an apparent clue to these strange disappearances, when a series of mysterious explosions occur on some of their ships lying at their docks. Obviously it is the work of some enemy and after placing the case in the hands of a detective agency, who gain little information for them, the head of the company appeals to Hassam Ali. The mystic, in accordance with his agreement, turns the case over to his ward, Zudora.

Just at this time John Storm, her sweetheart, has asked her for her photograph, and she has promised to have one taken. Not realizing the fell designs of her uncle, Zudora asks him where she may have her likeness taken, and he directs her to a certain photographer, one Fal Green, above whose studio there lives an inventor-confederate of the mystic. Hassam plans there to gain the ends for which he had been striving.

Zudora goes to the photographer's, and while she is there her uncle calls on the inventor and to his surprise learns from him, that he has discovered a wonderful, but terribly destructive power in a certain ray of light, which he is able to throw for immense distances, or which, by a clock mechanism, he can release at a given time. From him Hassam also learns that the ships were destroyed merely as a means of proving the power of his discovery. By a liberal use of money the mystic persuades the inventor to agree to follow his instructions. Then the two men, through an opening in the floor watch Zudora pose for her photograph in the studio below. Later Hassam plans to make use of his friend's mysterious invention to destroy his niece. Meanwhile Zudora has learned many things from Fal Green, the photographer. He is aware of the remarkable invention of Hassam's ally, although he does not know of the evil uses to which it has been put, and he tells Zudora about it. Also he tells her of an invention of his own, a certain chemical mixture, which he has discovered, which records and develops a picture instantaneously. Aided by John Storm, Zudora concludes that there is some connection between the lost ships and the inventor above the photographer's studio, but she keeps her own counsel, awaiting developments.

When she returns to the studio for her finished pictures, her uncle follows her again, determined to wreak his will. While the photographer is absent for a moment, she examines a bottle of the curious mixture he had told her about, and by accident drops it, shattering it to pieces. As she stoops to clean up the mess, she is astounded to see the pictured face of her uncle appear on the floor, and looking upward sees him hurriedly withdrawing his face from the aperture in the ceiling. Certain that all is not right she hastens from the studio and informs Storm of her strange experience, while Fal Green goes to accuse the inventor of spying on him. Storm returns with her after notifying a detective agency to send two operatives to the photographer's studio. Arrived there they force their way into the inventor's rooms, when suddenly there is an explosion and the house is in flames.

And then a strange thing happens. In the general stampede for safety Storm and the others in the house reach the street unharmed, while Zudora, alone, is trapped in the doomed building. Storm seems dazed by the danger to his sweetheart and wrings his hands helplessly. Then out of the crowd dashes a solitary figure. It is James Baird. He fights his way through the flame and smoke of the burning house to Zudora's side and carries her safely to the street.

He puts her down tenderly and when, a moment later, she recovers her senses and turns to thank him, he is gone.

Elks' Senior League—Elizabeth at Plainfield.
Eagles' League—Plainfield vs. Progress, at Newark.
Park Club—Handicap five-back tournament.
Masonic League—Washington at Jerusalem.

Friday Night.
Park Club—Handicap ten pin tournament.

Bowling leagues will have another busy week starting tomorrow, when both the Senior and Junior Elk circuits get into action. There are five matches scheduled to be played in the Senior League and the usual three for the Juniors. Wednesday will be the first of three matches for the Eagles and several will be played in the Masonic League.

ELKS' SENIOR LEAGUE.

The usual three games will be played this week, Plainfield and Newark starting off the week at Newark. Nothing will then be doing until Friday, when Jersey City plays at Paterson and New Brunswick goes to Elizabeth.

F. O. E. LEAGUE.

Newark will meet Elizabeth on her home alleys Wednesday night and try to regain lost laurels. The outcome of this game will decide the leadership. Thursday, Plainfield will play Progress at Newark and Somerville goes to Rahway.

MASONIC LEAGUE.

Washington and Orient play in Elizabeth tonight and the Anchor team, of Plainfield, will play the Lafayette five at Rahway, Wednesday night, while Azure is rolling Herrmann. Jerusalem will entertain Washington on the Second street alleys Thursday night for the last game of the week.

PARK CLUB.

The regular tournaments will be played this week, the handicap five-back Thursday night and the handicap ten-pin Friday night.

LEAL FIVE BEATEN AT MORRISTOWN

Team Conquered by North Plainfield Came Back With a Vengeance.

Although Morristowne School basketball representatives were treated to a walloping by the North Plainfield schoolboys, Friday night, they retaliated Saturday afternoon by administering a somewhat similar dose to another quintet from this end of Union county. This time the Leal School aggregation was the victim, the tables being turned by a count of 31 to 23. This was the annual game between these private school rivals and it was not unlike the preceding meetings, inasmuch as Morristown copped the verdict.

William Devitalis was once more the nemesis of the Plainfield private school youngsters, his shooting ability playing a big part in the ultimate decision. Captain Chauncey Stewart was the shining light in the Leal ranks, garnering four field and the same number of foul goals for a total of twelve counters. Dickerson also played a good game for the Plainfielders.

The large court at the Morristown School and the stature of some of the rival players when stacked up alongside of the local youngsters had a great deal to do with the reverse. Leal players put up a strong argument, but were plainly outclassed.

The lineup:

Morristown School	Leal School
Keck	Dickerson
right forward
Wm. Devatilis	Stewart (Capt.)
left forward
Walter Devatilis	Snyder centre
Clemont (Capt.)	Dale right guard
Swan	Harrington

Final score, Morristown, 31; Leal School, 23; field goals, William Devatilis 7, Stewart 4, Keck 3, Dickerson 3, Harrington, Walter Devatilis 3; goals from foul, Stewart 4, Keck 2, Devatalis 2.

Although it comes on the last afternoon of the week, the basketball tilt between Plainfield and North Plainfield High Schools tops the menu for this week, the engagement being the first of the Interscholastic League series. The contest will be decided on the Saengerbund Hall court, Saturday afternoon, complete arrangements for the officials, etc., not having been made as yet.

Second to this tilt comes the Y. M C. A. trip to Asbury Park. At the seaside resort the locals will meet one of the fastest aggregations in the State and the trip is one that has been looked forward to by the Plainfielders with interest for a long time past. An overnight stay will be made at the resort and the athletes will return to their homes in this city Saturday morning.

This afternoon the Leal School five is entertaining the Upsala College quintet, of Kenilworth, on the local Y. M. C. A. floor. The "Oopsalo" boys have not been phenomenally successful on the court this season and it is not unlikely that Leals will have a walkaway.

Tomorrow afternoon the Cranford girlies appear on the North Plainfield High School court and the Plainfield High School boys entertain the Westfield High School clan here. The latter struggle is one that is annually looked forward to as a spicy bill on the Plainfield court and the Mt. Ararat youngsters are coming here instilled with all kinds of confidence following the excellent showing they made against the speedy North Plainfield basketeers a week ago.

Wednesday afternoon the Leal five will engage in its second tilt of the week with the Morristown School as its opponent. Friday afternoon the Plainfield High School girls go to Westfield for their annual tilt on that team's court and the Y. M. C. A game at Asbury Park is played that night. Saturday night the Y. M. C. A. five will entertain the St. John's quintet, of New Brunswick, on the association court.

ELKS AND PARK CLUB MEN TO INAUGURATE NEW SERIES

Now that the Elks' and Park Club bowling teams have tied up matters in their annual three-match bowling series, it has been decided that instead of playing off a rubber match on neutral alleys, to start a new series on the alleys of the two teams.

The Park Club team agreed to hold the third match on its opponents' alleys, but Captain Nash thought this would not be fair to the Washington avenue pinners and suggested a new series. No definite dates have been set but the teams will meet again in the near future.

NO GAME FOR Y. M. C. A.

The failure of the Hasbrouck Heights Field Club basketball team to appear at the Y. M. C. A., Saturday night, disappointed a large number of faithful fans of the association team. The Hasbrouck team started out in an auto bus with a large crowd of supporters and had trouble at Irvington. Next Saturday night the association team will meet the St. John's five, of New Brunswick, which defeated the locals last week at New Brunswick.

LOCALS AT ELIZABETH.

The T. A. B. bowlers will meet the Elizabeth T. A. B.'s on the latter's alleys next Monday night. The Plainfield five is composed of Harry Pasch, M. F. Moynihan, George Howe, James P. O'Keefe and John Duffy. The game will be the first of a series.

HOPE CHAPEL LOSES ON ITS HOME COURT

Bloomfield M. E. Five Takes Game By Score of 37 to 26.

The Hope Chapel basketball team met its second reverse of the season on its home court, Saturday night, when the strong Bloomfield M. E. aggregation won its second decision over the locals on the Fourth street court. Hope was completely outclassed and their opponents put up one of the fastest games ever played on the Hope court. The final score was 37 to 26. Tommy Heron and Walls, the Hope forwards, were closely guarded by the opposing guards, but the former made three field goals, while Walls accounted for two.

At the fifteen foot mark, Heron did some great work, dropping in fourteen during the game. Haywood and Openshaw proved to be fine shots and made twelve baskets between them.

The scores follow:

RED AND BLUE HAD IT EASY AT EASTON

Pennsylvania Quintet Was No Match for the Plainfielders.

The boys' basketball team of the Plainfield High School returned from Easton, Saturday night, with its first out-of-town victory of the season. They returned after a comparatively easy game with a 31 to 16 victory tucked under their belt. The Easton gym had a very low ceiling, and the baskets were fastened on brick-walls. Captain McNamee got his eye on the basket in the second half and dropped in five pretty baskets.

The first half of the game was played under college rules, which proved rather difficult for the local five at first. McNamee scored the first basket of the game, giving his team the lead which it maintained throughout the entire contest.

The second half was easy sailing for Plainfield under the A. A. U. rules. Their passing had Easton bewildered. The Easton boys played a hard fast game, but their shooting was poor. The team had a fine guard in Captain McCarthy, but the ceiling was so low that a shot could not be attempted much behind the foul line.

CRANFORD GIRLS TOMORROW.

Manager Lillian Spencer, of the North Plainfield High School basketball team, has signed up the Cranford sextet for a return game to be played in Saengerbund Hall tomorrow afternoon. The first meeting between these two teams took place on the Cranford court and resulted in a victory for the borough. Having the advantage of their home court the North Plainfield girls should annex an easy win.

COLUMBUS CLUB BOWLING.

The Sparrows and Parrots will meet tonight in a three-game match and Thursday night the Peacocks and Hawks will play. The game tonight will undoubtedly prove interesting, as the Sparrows are now second in the standing of the teams and are being hard pressed by the Parrots.

SECOND OVERTIME VERDICT FOR P. H. S.

Local Girls Scored Three Points in an Extra Session.

The Plainfield High School girls annexed another victory Saturday afternoon, when they defeated the Roselle team by a score of 10 to 7. The Roselle girls completely outplayed the locals in the first half, the score being 6 to 2 in their favor. In this period, Miss Bender, centre for Roselle, made two sensational shots from the middle of the floor. In the second half the Plainfield girls kept their opponents to one foul goal and when the whistle blew the score stood 7 to 7. In the extra period Roselle had several chances at the basket, but failed to make the shots count. A foul goal by Helen Peacock and a goal by "Dot" Crane won the game for the locals.

Miss Bender and Miss Meyers played the best games for Roselle, while the Misses Peacock, Simons and Crane divided the honors for Plainfield.

ALL STAR QUINTET BEAT VALLEY BOYS

Peapack Aggregation Had No Chance to Win on Home Court Saturday Night.

The Plainfield All-Star basketball team went to Peapack, Saturday night, and took a fall out of the Valley Boys of that place, the final score being 35 to 21. In the first half the local team made 27 points to their opponents' 8 and they merely fooled away the last period.

The home players did not break up the teamwork of the Stars and during the initial period Plainfield scored at will. When the second half started the locals were continually called for fouling and Ricketts and Moulton were penalized twenty-two times. Marston secured seven baskets and Ricketts counted for six field goals and five fouls.

P. H. S. ATHLETES GUESTS OF A FORMER LOCAL BOY

Raymond "Spike" Kenyon, who formerly attended the Stillman School and who was prominent in the work of the Holy Cross Club several years ago, was the host for members of the Plainfield High School basketball team at Lafayette College, following the Plainfield-Easton High School contest Saturday afternoon. "Spike" is now a student at the Pennsylvania college and attended the P. H. S. contest at Easton.

Following the contest the players enjoyed a reception in the Easton High School Auditorium, and Captain Dan McNamee and Bill Peacock, of the P. H. S. quintet, were Kenyon's guests at dinner in the Phi Delta Theta Fraternity house of the college.

P. H. S. FIVE ROUNDING INTO SHAPE.

It was a big week for Plainfield High School basketball interests. Opening last Tuesday with a victory over the much touted Woodbridge aggregation the Plainfield boys came back again Saturday afternoon and playing on the Easton (Pa.) High School's court administered a decisive beating to the coal State quintet. The verdict Saturday was clean-cut and of the same order as that administered to the Middlesex County combination Tuesday. The Plainfielders played under college rules with a collegiate player as a referee but came through the fray on top.

GIRLS ALSO RAISE THE RED AND BLUE STOCK.

Topping the boys' double performance is the victory of the Plainfield High School feminine contingent in the initial Interscholastic League match with the North Plainfield fair sex. Although the boys lost their initial contest of the season on the new court the girls in a measure made up for this feat by annexing a decision in the inaugural league combat on the Ninth street floor. Now we're waiting to see if the boys can do as much when they entertain a league opponent at that rendezvous.

RUNYON AGAIN "AMONG THOSE PRESENT."

Ralph Runyon's record breaking performance at Brooklyn Saturday night reminds us that the Plainfield High School athletic forces are ably represented on the track and field by this one individual. His work Saturday night attracted pronounced attention and several collegiate institutions have already began angling for his John Hancock at the completion of the high school course. Runyon is keeping the Queen City High School's name before the athletic world in these days of strife.

We've been led to wonder why North Plainfield and Leal School basketball forces take such a keen delight in visiting the Morristown School and have just been apprised of the true reason. They tell us the fair sex from Morristown's "400" serve tea and crackers after the contests.

Indications now point to a complete vindication for Platt Adams, who is being tried on a charge of alleged professionalism by the A. A. U., in selling certain trophies won at big meets. Platt is well known in Plainfield, having been a member of the Y. M. C. A. baseball team in 1910, and all of his friends hope that a conclusive exoneration will be made. He is a sportsman of the highest ideas and those who know him vouch for the groundlessness of the charges.

Heading the basketball menu for the week is the interscholastic tilt between Plainfield and North Plainfield forces. This will probably mean the usual week of slim attendance figures prior to the grand finale.

Plainfield basketball forces were pretty widely scattered Saturday. P. H. S. spent the afternoon and evening at Easton (Pa.); the Marathon Club "trained" it to Elizabeth; Leal representatives sojourned at Morristown; and an All-Star quintet with Harry Moulton as foreman, autoed it to Peapack, b'gosh. Can you beat that list for variety of environment?

Upsala College basketeers, a combination that is trying for the winless championship, lines up against Leals this afternoon. "Oopsala" bane a weak foe so the locals will probably clean up on another scalp.

Because they didn't get a sufficiency of the social stuff out of the initial two series, the Elks and Park Club pin artists have crossed their fingers and decided to do the trick all over again. Three more series will be in order with a little "feed" fest after each. It's hard enough to write a bowling story but heaven help the poor sport scribe who tries to hand out an eating decision when the ten pinners gather 'round the festive board.

Hockey as a sport is finding very little encouragement among the members of the New Jersey Interscholastic League, only one school, Stevens Prep, having placed a team in the field. This situation is rather surprising in view of the former popularity of the sport among the school boys of New Jersey and the many unusual opportunities this winter to conduct the game on the many ponds in the open air in all sections. Plainfield High, East Orange High, Montclair High and Barringer High Schools have placed a temporary ban on the sport and directed all their energies toward basketball.

CHICAGO FIVE DEFEATS PHILADELPHIA QUINTET

Chicago basketeers defeated the Philadelphia aggregation in the regular weekly game of the Y. M. C. A. Employed Boys' Class, Saturday night. The final count was 20 to 16. The game was close throughout, the score at the end of the first half being 11 to 10 in favor of the final winners. Velard and Day starred for their respective teams.

TRYING FOR A BERTH.

Jack Wilson, who has been employed by a construction company in the South for several months, intends to await the opening of the baseball season in the Southern clime. Jack's friends in this city recently received postal cards from him in which he was optimistic of his chances of signing with some minor league organization in the South. The Philadelphia Nationals train at the same place where Wilson is now located and Jack Martin will visit his fellow townsman while at that place with the Phillies.

NOT THE RIGHT CONSHAY?

Several weeks ago the management of the Rochester International League team announced that it had signed Willie and Eddie Conshay, of this city, to play with the Hustlers during the coming season. Although the information came straight from the leaguers the local boys claim that they had seen no contracts and know nothing about the deal.

to convert the temporary advantage gained in the vicinity of Soissons into a great victory.

"The German naval staff at Zeebrugge apparently has succeeded in concentrating there several light draught warships which are believed to be refitted Belgian vessels abandoned at the evacuation of the port. Every day, when the weather permits, two submarines put to sea from the shelter of the breakwater, accompanied by from two to four vessels which an eye-witness describes as noni[illegible] these vessels sit low in the water and appear to have only one large gun.

"The submarines, as well as these range craft, are painted a tint corresponding with that of the sand dunes for the purpose of making the vessels more difficult to discover when off the coast."

A "Chronicle" dispatch says: "News which is just publisned with regard of the British offensive at La Bassee only confirms that which has been current for some time in circles well informed as to the course of operations to the southwest of Lille.

"I can affirm on reliable authority that the allies have won considerable advantages by artillery work at Loos, southwest of Lille, and at Haubourdin. The two places, which may be described as suburbs of Lille, have been violently bombarded, and the Germans losses must have been enormous. Two days ago the allies silenced the German guns in the Seclin region.

"Lille has been transformed into a formidable German fortress. Not only have the invaders repaired completely the forts, which formed stars around the city, but all the streets are cut up to trenches."

Berlin, Jan. 18 (By wireless via Sayville).—The following statement was given out at German headquarters today:

"In the western theatre of war there were only artillery duels in the neighborhood of Nieuport yesterday. The enemy has made no attacking movements in the last few days. English mines have been washed to ashes in several places.

"At La Boiselle, northeast of Albert, we reoccupied the churchyard of the hamlet and drove the French out of their position after a bayonet attack. We took three officers and 100 men.

"In the Argonne we took several French trenches. Their occupants were almost annihilated. In an attack northwest of Pont A Mousson, on a hill two kilometres south of Vilcey, the French advanced as far as our trenches. The battle is still raging there.

"In the Vosges and upper Alsace a heavy snowstorm and drifts are interfering with the fighting.

"In the eastern theatre the situation in East Prussia is unchanged. In northern Poland the Russians attempted to cross the Skraw near Radimow, but were repulsed. In the region along the Vistula in Poland nothing of importance has happened."

Amsterdam, Jan. 18.—The newspapers of Budapest report fighting between the advance guards of the Russian army in southern Bukowina, between Poszonika and Jakobena, in the Kimpolung district, and an Austro-Hungarian force, which they declare are holding the mountain pass. Yesterday afternoon a Russian official statement declared that the Russians captured the above pass.

Cairo, Jan. 18.—Fugitives from Syria report that the Turkish soldiers there are without sufficient food and that the army is in a state of disorganization. They are clothed in summer uniforms, which have been reduced to rags.

Rome, Jan. 18.—A despatch to the "Secolo" states that Lieutenant Von Bunstein, a nephew of General Von Hindenburg, has been dangerously wounded in the fighting in Poland and has been taken to the hospital at Weisbaden.

WIFE, IN SUIT FOR SUPPORT, BLAMES HUSBAND'S BROTHER

Trenton, Jan. 18—Suit for separate maintenance was begun in Chancery Court here, Friday, by Mrs. Ida H. Garrett, of Bound Brook, through John J. Fallon. Mrs. Garrett charges that her husband, Garet Garrett, although earning from $200 to $300 a week by writing for New York publications, has not contributed to her support since August 15. The trouble began, according to the petition, when Thomas Garrett, a brother of the defendant, took up his residence in the home.

Mrs. Garrett says that on returning from a journey she found her servants dismissed and a Japanese substituted. When she remonstrated, her brother-in-law threatened her, the petition asserts and her husband declined to dismiss him. The couple were married in 1909.

NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS.

Notice is hereby given that the Board of Education will meet on Monday, February 5, 1915, at 8 p. m., at the Board room in the High School building, corner Ninth Street and Arlington Avenue, in the City of Plainfield, at which time and place the said Board of Education will receive sealed proposals for furnishing 200 tons, more or less, of the best anthracite Buckwheat coal for steaming and hot-air purposes.

Parties bidding will be required to specify in their bids the name of the coal and shippers of same.

The coal to be non-clinking, thoroughly screened over a sieve fine enough to take out all dust and small particles of coal, and to be of quality acceptable to the Board of Education or their agent.

All coal to be placed in the coal bins in the High School without any extra expense to the Board for handling or trimming the coal in the bins, and to be delivered at such time as the Board may direct.

Bids to specify whether long or short tons are to be delivered.

All proposals to be sealed and endorsed "Proposals for Coal," and addressed to the Secretary of the Board.

No proposals will be opened prior to 8 p. m. Monday, February 1, 1915, and none will be received later than that hour.

Bidders may attend the meeting of the Board on February 1, 1915, and submit their bids in person, but in writing, if desired.

The Board of Education reserves the right to reject any or all bids.

For the Board of Education,
B. VanD. HEDGES,
Secretary.

STRANGE AS IT MAY SEEM

One of the most common contradictions in the average man is to thoughtfully provide an estate to sustain his family after he is gone, and then leave the estate unprotected, in the hands of inexperienced heirs or under the control of a friend who may not be equipped to handle or invest the property.

And even if an individual is competent to act as executor—trustee, he cannot be depended on to serve. He may not survive you; he may become disabled or move away; he may want to travel and not be tied down. No such uncertainties attend the appointment of this responsible Company. Its service is efficient and unfailing.

GRAND OFFICERS HONORED GUESTS

Attend Annual Inspection of Trinity Commandery, No. 17, K. T.

A BANQUET FOLLOWS

Grand Commander Nelson Y. Dungan and Staff Together With 150 Visiting Sir Knights Enjoy Hospitality of Local Commandery.

Sir Knights, representing the twenty commanderies from all part of New Jersey, were guests of Trinity Commandery, No. 17, Knights Templar, at the annual inspection of the local organization in Masonic Hall, last night. With the grand commandery officers and other delegations, the largest of which came from Damascus Commandery of Newark, there were about 150 visitors, it being the largest gathering on a similar occasion in the history of Trinity Commandery.

The fact that Judge Nelson Y. Dungan, of Trinity Commandery, is the grand commander of the State, served to arouse an unusual interest and all of the grand commandery officers except William Carman, of Metuchen, who is the grand treasurer, were present. He is detained at home by illness.

Trinity Commandery, under the able direction of R. F. R. Huntsman, the captain general, and Charles S. Lee, commander, went through the inspection in a highly commendable manner, its work being pronounced perfect. The various evolutions were executed in a way that called forth the loudest praise from the grand commandery as well as other visitors. The inspecting officer was Dr. Joseph MacDonald, Jr., of South Orange, who is the grand captain general. The work throughout was most impressive.

Headed by Louis C. Tinker, eminent commander of Damascus Commandery, of Newark, a very large delegation from that organization came here in a special car. The visiting Sir Knights made a fine showing.

The grand commandery officers present were: Grand commander, Nelson Y. Dungan; grand deputy commander, William P. Hayes; grand generalisimo, Robert H. Ingersoll; grand captain general, Dr. Joseph MacDonald, Jr.; grand senior warden, Gilbert W. Blanchard; grand junior warden, Henry F. Barth; grand recorder, John M. Wright; grand standard bearer, Archibald G. Smith; grand sword bearer, James A. Cortright; grand warder, Thomas H. Riddle. These past commanders were also present: Warren Dobbs, Josiah S. Davidson, John P. Contrell, Daniel Demarest, Otto O. Stillman, Edward Mills and Dr. Daniel C. Adams, the last named a member of Trinity Commandery.

Following the inspection all adjourned to the large banquet room of Masonic Hall where there was a fine "spread," for which Trinity Commandery is famous among the Sir Knights of the State. This was followed with speech-making by members of the grand commandery and other Sir Knights. The visitors last night came from Newark, Atlantic City, Trenton, New Brunswick, Somerville, Jersey City, Camden and other cities of the State.

INSTALL OFFICERS OF PLAINFIELD LODGE, I. O. O. F.

Before a large gathering of members the officers of Plainfield Lodge, No. 44, I. O. O. F., were installed last night, by District Deputy Grand Master Phelps, of Franklin Lodge, and staff, Elizabeth. The new officers are: Past grand, Fred H. Becker; noble grand, Charles Doeringer; vice grand, Louis Kraus; recording secretary, John F. Williams; financial secretary, Elias H. Bird; treasurer, William E. Day; warden, J. F. Kettenring; conductor, John Johansen; inside guard, Walter Perry; outside guard, Michael Kollar, chaplain, Nimrod Horton; right supporter to noble grand, Andrew Stiglitz; left supporter to noble grand, William Cubberley; right supporter to vice grand, Henry Madsen; left supporter to vice grand, Felix Warbach; right scene supporter, George Ahrnet, and left scene supporter, Simon Mantz.

Following the installation a collation was served in the banquet hall.

PRESIDENT'S GRANDSON IS ELECTED TO CLUB

Local Democrats First in the Country to Make Sayre Baby a Member.

One new member was elected at the meeting of the Plainfield Democratic Club, last night. He has not accepted the honor, but it is expected that at some time in the future he will, or his grand-daddy will do it for him. Not to be outdone by clubs elsewhere in the United States, and probably the first organization in the country to take the action, the local organization named the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Francis B. Sayre, son-in-law and daughter of President Woodrow Wilson, to membership in the Plainfield club. The young man having been born day before yesterday, and being busy with other things, is not expected to personally acknowledge the election at the present time, but his father and grandfather will be notified of the election.

Plans were completed at the meeting for the gathering which is to be held tonight at the Y. M. C. A., at which protest will be made against the passage of the Burnett Immigration bill. In addition to the speakers already announced, Dr. Maximillian P. Groszmann has consented to make an address, and the following names have been added to the list of vice presidents which have previously been announced: Howard G. Fleming, R. B. Corey, Herman Schwed, Dr. Kohn, Jacob Sachar, former Senator Ernest R. Ackerman and S. S. Carvalho.

REDUCED TELEPHONE RATES ANNOUNCED

Affects Individual Lines and Private Branch Exchange Service.

The New York Telephone Company today announced reductions in rates for private branch exchange and individual line message rate telephone service, to become effective on February 1. The new rates will apply in Plainfield and other large cities in its New Jersey division, and will result in very considerable savings to subscribers in these places.

Commenting on this announcement today, Mr. Wilson, local manager of the telephone company, said, "The new schedule of rates affecting private branch exchange and individual line measured service is the result of a very careful study of telephone conditions made with the assistance and co-operation of the Public Utility Commission. The exchange districts in which both these class of service are reduced are Market, Waverley, Mulberry, Branch Brook, Harrison and Arlington, Jersey City, Webster, Bergen, Hoboken, Bayonne, Union. The exchange districts in which the individual line measured service only is reduced are South Orange, Orange, Bloomfield, Glen Ridge, Montclair, and Verona, Paterson, Passaic, Elizabeth, Plainfield, New Brunswick, Milltown, Perth Amboy, South Amboy.

"In these exchanges there are 13,320 subscribers who have individual line measured service, and the new schedule will effect reduction of $3 per year in the rates for this class of service, and a number of the subscribers will also be benefitted by the lower cost of additional messages. Approximately 1,200 subscribers to private branch exchange service will also receive the benefit of the lower rate for additional messages. It is estimated that the total reduction will mean a saving to telephone users of some $73,000 annually. In Plainfield, the reduction will affect 280 subscribers having individual line telephone service.

"Since February 1, 1913, as a result of the study of the Public Utility Commission and the company, general reductions in toll rates and exchange rates have been made voluntarily by the telephone company in New Jersey. The saving to telephone users by reductions made since February 1, 1913, is more than $620,000 annually.

"The present reduction in rates is but a part of the policy and general plan of the New York Telephone Company to make reductions whenever and wherever such reductions can be equitably made in the interests of subscribers and for the good of the service.

"The subscribers affected by these reductions will be notified when they receive their February bills, which will be made out in accordance with the new rates."

Harry Christianson, of Woodland avenue, has returned from Bordentown, where he spent a week's vacation.

Y. W. C. A. HAD A SUCCESSFUL YEAR

Reports Presented at Annual Meeting Last Night Are Encouraging.

DIRECTORS ELECTED

Mrs. E. T. Barrows, Treasurer, Reports Balance of $2,107.96—Mrs. F. G. Mead Gives Interesting Talk on Trip to China.

The annual meeting of the Y. W. C. A. was held last night, in the association parlors and was attended by a large number of members. Mrs. Frederick G. Mead, president of the association, presided. The reports of the chairmen of the various committees showed the wonderful work done by the association during the past year, along social, educational and religious lines. There was an exhibition of the work of the different classes in dressmaking, basketry and flower making, and the results showed the exceptional ability of the pupils and the careful training they had received. Much interest was manifested in the report of Mrs. Elliott T. Barrows, who is the treasurer, her receipts for the year being $14,277.88, with expenses of $12,160.92, leaving a balance on hand of $2,107.96, or an increase of $1,947.62 over last year. There remains about $400 to be redeemed of the amount pledged during the campaign last year, with no outstanding bills except the balance of the mortgage due on the building, $2,000 of which was paid last year, leaving a balance of $3,250 to be paid. A note of $3,700 was

RURAL SKETCH PLOT A TRUE HAPPENING

Pleasing Playlet at Proctor's Portrays Episode in Performer's Life.

Although but few people in the audiences are aware of the fact, one of the acts of the present bill at Proctor's Theatre is a chapter out of the life of those who present it. The offering is that of Wilbur LaVine and Grace Inman, and is entitled "A True to Nature Rural Sketch." Miss Inman, who, in private life is Mrs. LaVine, interprets the character of a country girl who returns to the old home town five years after she ran away to travel with a circus. She comes back as a slack wire performer, meets her school days sweetheart, and after they have exchange reminiscences, agree to travel through life together. The circumstance of the sketch really happened as described and the novel farmyard setting which stages the act is an exact reproduction of a relative's farm at Calafornia, Missouri, from which the young woman took a clandestine departure to travel with a carnival company. She became an expert wire walker and displays her talent in the course of the playlet. She was absent from her former home only two years, but when she met Mr. LaVine he convinced her that she had better remain a while and since then they have always traveled together. Mr. LaVine injects wholesome comedy into the act by his clever characterization of a country boy, singing original "rube" tunes and cracking jokes that cause roars of laughter. Even without the human interest relative to the actual romance, the offering is one of the best that has been seen at Proctor's for a long time.

GAVE INTERESTING TALK TO MEN'S CLUB MEMBERS

C. W. Spicer, of the Spicer Manufacturing Company, addressed the Men's Club, of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, Sunday night, giving an interesting description of his trip through the Pennsylvania Steel Plant at Steelton, Pa. He showed eighty stereopticon views in giving the talk and the lecture was thoroughly enjoyed by those present.

Mr. Spicer's talk was of an instructive nature and he took the audience through the mills and other departments.

PLANNING FOR CONFERENCE.

The Young People's Branch of the W. C. T. U. will hold an important business meeting at the home of Miss Clara Karner, 112 Plainfield avenue, tonight at 8 o'clock. A full attendance is desired as arrangements will be completed at that time for the State conference to be held in this city, February 22.

CONSOLIDATION IDEA IS STRONGLY OPPOSED

Plan to Unite Business Men's Organizations Given Body Blow Last Night.

Plans proposed at a meeting of the Business Men's Association for consolidation with the Business Men's Credit Association, were rudely jarred last night, when the members of the latter organization voted decisively, and with some show of resentment, against any consolidation whatsoever. The Credit members could not see how they were going to gain anything by joining with the organization of the larger merchants, and as a result the matter was voted down, not once, but twice. All the persuasive arguments of members of the Business Men's Association who were present by invitation, had no effect on those of the Credit body, and after two hours and a half of talk, the effort was given up.

President J. L. Bennett, of the Credit Association, favored the consolidation, as did Treasurer Isaac Schwed, and others who are members of both organizations. President A. E. Force, of the Business Men's Association; M. C. VánArsdale, its treasurer, and Samuel Rothberg used every argument they could think of to extol the advantages of consolidation, but it was all of no avail. The members of the Credit Association knew what they wanted, and there was no one present who could change their minds. One man arrived at the meeting a minute before the vote was taken, voted no, and left a minute afterward, and his attitude expressed the feeling of the majority. They wanted to get it over and decided once and for all.

Prior to the settling of the consolidation question, the Credit Association held a short business meeting, at which time it was shown that the treasury is in satisfactory condition, and Secretary Martin B. Stutsman reported that he had collected $922.16 during the months of November and December.

Discussion of the plan which has been started by the Business Men's Association to stop fake sales in this city was participated in by all present, and unanimous approval given to the report that an ordinance is to be introduced at the February meeting of the City Council by Councilman Blatz, to correct the evil.

The merchants were invited to attend the meeting of the Board of Trade tonight, and to participate in the Dollar Day, which is to be held under the auspices of the Business Men's Association, on February 24.

BRITAIN REFUSES TO WAIVE ITS RIGHTS

Will Seize the Steamer Dacia Even Though Transferred to U. S. Registry.

Washington, Jan. 19—Great Britain today notified the State Department that it would refuse to waive its right to seize the steamer Dacia, recently transferred from German to American registry, even though the ship sailed for Rotterdam instead of Bremen.

The decision of the British foreign office was contained in a lengthy cablegram from Ambassador Page, in London, in regards to the Dacia decision. The State Department appeared distinctly disappointed by the unequivocal phraseology of the communication. However, it was made clear at the department that the negotiations were not ended by any means and that the question still was open for consideration by Great Britain.

SCOUT EXAMINATIONS TONIGHT.

The court of honor of the Boy Scout Council sits tonight in the chapel of the First Presbyterian church to hear examinations of boys who have made applications for merit badge tests. Scouts from Troops 9, 10 and 11 will have right of way. It is expected that all applicants will be cleared at tonight's sitting. Court meets from 7:30 sharp to 9 o'clock. Scouts must bring their books and fifteen cents if they desire merit badges. Merit certificates require no fee.

LINCOLN ENTERTAINMENT.

Members of the Lincoln Hose Company, of Lincoln, are planning to hold an oyster supper and dance at the hose house Friday night, February 12.

POULTRY ASS'N MEETING.

The monthly meeting of the Poultry Association will be held tomorrow night in the Coward building, on Park avenue. Officers will be elected.

GOOD WORK BY ANTI T-B LEAGUE

Reports of Various Departments Read at Annual Meeting.

CLINIC WAS POPULAR

292 Patients Made a Total of 1,097 Visits, and Nurse Saw 3,688 in 1,737 Visits—School Success Described—Cost $5,356.

Encouraging reports of the year's work of the Anti-Tuberculosis League of Plainfield and North Plainfield were received at the annual meeting of the organization, which was held last night, in the Babcock building. Officers were elected for the ensuing year, and the treasury was reported to be in a very satisfactory condition.

The report of the nurse showed that during the year Miss Lahey made 1,737 visits, seeing 3,688 patients, and Dr. Frederick J. Hughes, reporting for the clinic, reported some interesting figures about the work that has been accomplished, there being an average daily attendance of eight, the highest number at one time being twenty-one. The total for the year was 1,097, these visits being made by 292 patients. Sixty-four were found to have tuberculosis.

For the open air school it was reported that through the efforts of Mrs. Bulkley, a volunteer helper has been present for two hours each day to assist with the care of the children, doing away with the necessity of another paid assistant. Miss Sarah VanBoskerck has taken charge of the

$1,500,000 BLAZE IN ROEBLING PLANT

Fire, Thought to Have Had an Incendiary Origin, Destroys Buckhorn Plant.

One of the most destructive fires that has occurred in this State in years, last night destroyed the insulated wire department of the John A. Roebling's Sons Co., in Trenton, at an estimated loss of $1,500,000, insurance to the amount of $750,000 covering part of the loss. Charles G. Roebling, president of the concern, believes the blaze was of an incendiary origin.

It was the first time in the history of the State capital that assistance had to be asked from outside cities, Camden and Princeton sending two engines. The plant destroyed was known as the Buckhorn branch and was more than a mile from the main factory.

The destroyed building occupied a tract of eight acres. The main building was U-shaped and ran 1,200 feet from the end of Tremont street to Jersey street and Smith avenue. It was five stories in heighth, with a basement, and there were eight towers on the three corners.

ELKS' ENTERTAINMENT WILL BE HELD ON TUESDAY NIGHT

The fifth reception and dance of the winter series being conducted under the auspices of the local lodge of Elks will be held in the Watchung avenue clubhouse Tuesday night, January 26, instead of Thursday, January 28, as was previously announced.

The previous entertainments have been held on Thursday evenings, but for certain reasons the club committee has seen fit to change this one to Tuesday night. A special program for the occasion is now in the course of preparation and several novel features are being planned.

MOTHER OF LOCAL NURSE PASSED AWAY SUDDENLY

Mrs. Thomas K. Williams, mother of Miss Elizabeth G. Williams, a trained nurse, living on Pearl street, the borough, died at her home in Lansford, Pa., January 9. Mrs. Williams' death came as a shock to her relatives and friends as she retired the night before in apparently the best of health and passed away shortly after midnight.

Miss Williams has recently returned from Lansford, where she attended her mother's funeral. She is a graduate of Muhlenberg Hospital in the class of 1911 and is well known in this city.

LOCAL WOMAN SUED FOR BACK ALIMONY

Miss Lucy Wooley, Bondsman for Albert Lederer, is Made Defendant.

Elizabeth, Jan. 19.—Florence Lederer, of Jersey City, divorced wife of Albert Lederer, of Craig place, Plainfield, was plaintiff in the Elizabeth District Court yesterday, against Lucy Wooley, of 539 West Front street, Plainfield, who went surety on Lederer's bond for the payment of back alimony to the plaintiff. Miss Wooley did not appear to defend the action and Judge David ruled that he would enter judgment against her when the proper affidavits are presented to him.

Lederer was ordered to pay his wife $7.50 a week alimony at the culmination of a trial in the Court of Chancery several months ago, and according to Mrs. Lederer, the money has not been paid. The trial gained considerable interest while in progress owing to the apparent friendliness of the contesting parties. Mrs. Lederer asked for $8 a week alimony and Lederer's counsel would give but $7. It was finally agreed to split the difference and this led to an exclamation from the wife in which she declared her divorced husband a "good sport." They left the court chambers together, apparently on the best of terms, according to stories published after the hearing. She is a hair dresser with parlors in Jersey City and is well known for her beauty. She formerly lived on Madison avenue, Plainfield.

SOCIAL EVENING FOR DUTCH ARMS CLUB

Enjoyable Affair Held Last Night in Trinity Church Parlors.

The monthly meeting of the Dutch Arms Club, of Trinity Reformed church, which was held last night, was one of the most successful in the history of the organization. The meeting took the form of a "get-together" affair to bring the members into closer touch with one another. A large number of games were provided and they were thoroughly enjoyed by all present. The attendance numbered about 125.

Music was furnished for the occasion by members of the Sunday-school orchestra and the Dutch Arms Band. After the good and welfare committee had served refreshments the members all voted that it had been a success in every way and hoped that they would soon be able to spend another evening as enjoyable.

FUNERAL OF P. W. MUNDY TO BE HELD TOMORROW

The funeral of Peter W. Mundy will be held at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon at the Springdale M. E. church and the burial will be at that place. Mr. Mundy died on Saturday at his home on Troop avenue, Brooklyn, in his fifty-eighth year. He was a native of Springdale and lived there most of his life, going to Brooklyn a few years ago, where he was employed by William McCullough & Sons, contractors.

Previous to leaving here he worked with his brother, Israel P. Mundy, at Springdale. He leaves a wife and two sons, Clarence W. Mundy, of this city, and George W. Mundy, of Corona, L. I., and two brothers, Israel P. Mundy, of Springdale, and George H. Mundy, of Somerville.

FATHER JOHN J. BUTSCHER UNDERGOES AN OPERATION

Rev. John J. Butscher, the assistant rector of the Church of Our Lady of Good Council, Paterson, who was operated upon yesterday at St. Joseph's Hospital, that place, for appendicitis, is reported to be doing well with excellent prospects for an early recovery. He passed through the operation satisfactorily the surgeons reported and last night was said to be resting easily.

Father Butscher was born in Plainfield and lived here until he began his studies in preparation for the priesthood. He has many friends in this city. Special prayers were said for Father Butscher at the masses in his church on Sunday for a successful operation and speedy recovery.

Clark Martin, of Sycamore avenue, was removed to Muhlenberg Hospital, yesterday, for a possible operation.

LA BOISSELLE IS TAKEN BY FRENCH

Reign of Terror is Now Said to Be Going on in Turkish Capital.

REVOLT IS EXPECTED

Germans Repulse Russians in Northern Poland With Heavy Losses—New Attack at Soissons' Trenches is Expected.

Paris, Jan. 19.—The French war office gave out the following statement this afternoon:

"In Belgium there is a severe snow storm. There has been intermittent cannonading. There is also a snow storm in the region of Arras, where our heavy artillery silenced in several combats the enemy's batteries. As was reported yesterday, a very sharp engagement is developing at La Boisselle, where, following a fire, we were compelled to evacuate our positions on the nights of January 17 and 18. We retook these on January 18 at daybreak. The enemy has not renewed his attacks on that part of the front. In the sector of Soissons the bombardment of St. Paul during nights of January 17 and 18 was not followed by any infantry attacks and the day of January 18 was absolutely calm in the valley of the Aisne to the east of Soissons and in the sector of Rheims there are artillery combats. In the Vosges there is a severe snow storm."

Berlin, Jan. 19 (By wireless).—The following statement was given out today: "In the western theatre of war, except for few and unimportant skirmishes. Only artillery duels occurred along the entire front yesterday.

"In the eastern theatre of war the weather is very unfavorable. At Radzonow, Cjeshun and Sierpez, all in northern Poland, we repulsed the Russians with heavy losses. We took several hundred prisoners. West of the Vistula and east of the Pilica the situation is unchanged."

Petrograd, Jan. 19.—A telegram from Aiflon reports that two trains bearing 2,363 Turkish prisoners have arrived there from Sarynnisn. Four hundred and eighty prisoners and 1,250 wounded Turks with 40 captured guns arrived at Sarynnish from Kara Urgan on last Friday.

Salonica, Jan. 19.—It is declared here by arrivals from Turkey that a reign of terror now prevails in Constantinople, compared to which the worst days, under the rule of Sultan Abdul Hamid, were mild. The city is now ruled by Enver Pasha, the former minister of war. Any one attempting to spread the news of the latest defeats of the Turkish army is summarily hanged on Galata Bridge. The truth of the setbacks in Calcasus and the abandonment of the designs upon Egypt are becoming gradually known to a large part of the population, however. The people, it is said, are ripe for revolt against the rule of the young Turk party and the domination of the Germans.

London, Jan. 19—Military activity has apparently ceased for the moment at Soissons, although there are signs of a renewal of the struggle.

But up to the northwest at the village of Boisselle, near Albert, a conflict of extreme violence has been going on for two days, following up the heavy fighting in that region last week.

Both Germans and French have a hold in this village as in many other hotly contested places on the long battle line. Sunday the Kaiser's forces, who had established themselves in the churchyard and in a hamlet southwest, advanced and drove out the French with the bayonet, according to the Berlin official bulletins.

Yesterday morning the French forces delivered a strong counter attack, according to Paris, and recaptured the evacuated territory.

The French bulletin insists that their loss of ground here was primarily due to the blowing up of their ammunition depot by a shell.

Another scene of important operations is in the forest of La Pretre, northwest of Pon-a-Mousson, nearest point to Metz, where the French are pushing a wedge into the German line of communication leading to St. Mihiel. Berlin admits severe fighting in this region, but gives no result; but Paris asserts the French forces have captured several field works.

Despite the relative quiet on the Soissons front, British observers look for a new offensive by the Germans. An attempt by them to gain the southern bank of the Aisne is regarded as a development to be expected.

At the present time, however, the French artillery on the hills, south of the Aisne, commands all the ap-

DUNELLEN

All the Happenings of the Day In Plainfield's Hustling Suburb.

BOY SCOUTS TAKE A LONG MOUNTAIN HIKE

DeWitt Swackhamer, Morton Althoen, William Victorson, William Mundy and Harold Seal, all of whom with the exception of Victorson are members of the local organization of Boy Scouts, took a long all day hike on Saturday. They left the borough at 8 o'clock and climbed up the slope of the neighboring mountain and thence down to Warrenville in the valley below. They followed the Valley road to Millington. From Millington they went to Stirling, where the squad separated, Swackhamer, Mundy and Seals going to Bernardsville by the way of Basking Ridge and Liberty Corner, and Victorson and Althoen striking out by themselves for New Vernon in Morris county. The larger squad had no exciting experiences and arrived back in the borough after a very enjoyable hike at quarter to six.

Victorson and Althoen had a thrilling and most unpleasant time. As they stood on the summit of the third mountain on their way to New Vernon they glanced down upon a section of lowlands known as the Great Swamp. This swamp was formerly the basin of the Passaic Lake, which history teaches was made during the great glacier period.

The swamp covers a section ten miles long and one mile wide. To the athletic and enthusiastic youths, as they viewed the stretch from the summit of the mountain, its area did not look anywhere near as great and they foolishly decided to cross it.

The swamp is covered with every type of growth and is filled with treacherous holes, quicksands and mires. As the young men slowly and cautiously pressed onward they more than once lost all sense of direction and but for the scoutcraft of Althoen would have been hopelessly lost. Their escapes from becoming ensnared in the numerous traps of the dismal land were hair raising. Once Althoen, who was the "Daniel Boone" of the expedition, stepped on quicksand, and but for the fact that Victorson, who was directly in back of him, at once took in the situation and grabbing him under the arm pits yanked him out, the foolhardy venture would have had a sad ending. Althoen stuck his long walking stick in the place where he had stepped to see how long it would take for it to disappear and it was completely covered in five minutes. Somehow, the young men hardly know how, after three long hours, each one of which seemed a year, the end of the swamp and good old terra firma was reached and the young men breathed prayers of thanksgiving.

The young men reached New Vernon without any new experiences and after partaking of their lunch and resting for an hour or so started on their homeward journey, but this time sticking to the broad highway. They were overtaken with dusk on their way and at a crossroad became confused and took the wrong road. They were not aware that they had been walking away from instead of towards Dunellen until the village of Watchung had been reached. They then followed the Valley road to Warrenville and thence over the mountain and home, arriving about 10 o'clock, tired, besmeared and wiser young men.

'Plains & Fanwood.

The first meeting of the Ladies' Sewing Circle, of the Willow Grove chapel, this year, will be held at the home of Mrs. William Sisserson, the president of the circle, tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock.

A regular meeting of the Boy Scouts will be held this evening, in the Sunday-school room of the Baptist church. Although the Scouts' basketball team lost their first game of the season at the hands of the Dunellen Scouts last Friday, they expect to do better. They have no court to practice on and are rather handicapped.

Notwithstanding the weather of last night, the All Saints' Episcopal church was filled at the open meeting of the Fanwood Township Sunday-school Association, with large delegations from all of the Sunday-schools. Isaac B. Burges, of Newark, superintendent of the State Sunday-school Association, made the principal address of the evening, giving an able talk, and was followed by William D. Murray, who spoke on "Teacher Training." Several hymns were sung by the Baptist church choir and the superintendents of all of the Sunday-schools in the township read reports that drew favorable comment from Mr. Burges, as all showed an improvement over last year. The Rev. Oscar S. Michaels, pastor of the Episcopal church, led the reading of the Scripture, and the Rev. J. Madison Hare, pastor of the Baptist church, offered the invocation. The meeting was closed by Dr. H. K. Carroll, pastor of the Methodist church, leading the prayer.

At yesterday afternoon's meeting of the Junior League Society it was voted to hold all future meetings at the home of Miss Grace Thompson, on Martine avenue, as it is midway between Scotch Plains and the borough, and considerably nearer for all of the members. The greater part of the time was spent sewing for the missions.

Owing to the very serious illness of Mrs. E. J. Reeder, the Ladies' Aid Society, of the Methodist church, has decided to postpone the social, set for January 28, to sometime in February.

A large box of articles of clothing, including that which was donated at the Christmas cantata, will be sent to a New York mission house from the All Saints' Episcopal church in a very short time.

Stylish Reliable

THE BIGGEST CONSIDERATION.

What are the things that count in a suit of clothes or an overcoat?

Style is the biggest consideration. Style lurks in the roll of the lapel, in the drape of a coat, in the shape of a pair of trousers; in the "unseen" mannerisms and style twists that dent the impression of the clothes-lover.

Materials were formerly the big yelling-point of the clothier. But today it is true that the fabrics used by the big clothing makers are about equal as far as wearing qualities are concerned.

The difference is in the style—and style make a big difference.

Rothberg's suits and overcoats have a style that speaks for itself.

Suits and overcoats $10 to $25.

Don't forget Rothberg's is the only clothing and furnishing store giving votes in Library Contest.

FOUR STRIKERS ARE REPORTED TO BE DYING

Roosevelt, Jan. 19—In an encounter between strikers of the Libig Chemical Works and deputy sheriffs on guard to protect the plant, thirteen strikers were shot and four are reported dying.

PRIEST TELLS HEARERS NOT TO THROW RICE IN CHURCH

Elizabeth, Jan. 19.—"Don't throw rice in the church," was the warning of Rev. Florian Widman, rector of Sacred Heart church, in the course of a sermon on marriage Sunday. He also urged spectators at marriage ceremonies to refrain from talking in the church and to leave quietly after the exit of the bridal party, and not before.

Most of the unhappy marriages, Father Widman said, proved unhappy because the couples entered the marital relation in an irreligious spirit, the ceremony being the last thing they thought of.

WAR NEWS

proaches to the river, and it will have to be reckoned with.

Sebasopol (via Petrograd), Jan. 19—A detachment of Russian torpedo boats have entered the Bay of Sinope, a Turkish port on the Black Sea in Asia Minor, and have sent to the bottom a Turkish steamer and three sailing vessels.

The crews of all four ships were saved. The name of the steamer appears to have been the Meorges.

No date of this engagement is given. The news is trustworthy.

London, Jan. 19—The "Chronicle's" Petrograd correspondent wires: "There is excellent news from the Russian fighting line from Transylvania. The occupation of Kirlibaba pass, on the boundary of Transylvania and Bukowina, opens the way for an advance into Hungary either on Maramaros-Sziget, north of Transylvania, or on the Bistritza River, in Transylvania and Dees. The distance of the Russian advanced position from these towns is abolt forty miles.

"The Austrians had evidently made preparations to check the advance of the main Russian column from Kimpolung, on the Dorna Watra, and Jacobeny, and, according to reports from Roumania, fierce battles are now proceeding at both these points."

NEW PENNSYLVANIA GOVERNOR

Harrisburg, Pa., Jan. 19—Governor John K. Tener, of Pennsylvania, retires from office today, and is removing to Philadelphia, where he will have his headquarters as president of the National League. The new Governor inaugurated today is Hon. Martin Grove Brumbaugh, another "schoolmaster" to assume executive duties. The retiring Governor has had a notable career, and is popular throughout the State. The new chief executive was superintendent of schools in Philadelphia, and a national leader in education.

STOGIE ROLLERS MEET.

Wheeling, W. Va., Jan. 19—A meeting of labor leaders from the cigar and stogie makers' unions is being held here today, in an effort to adjust the long standing differences which are said to exist in the cigar-makers and stogie-makers' unions. The trouble has long vexed the Ohio Valley Trades and Labor Unions, and today's meeting will try to solve the problems and bring the cigar and stogie rollers into better accord. So important are the issues involved that delegates have come from many parts of the country.

BIG HEBREW GATHERING.

Chicago, Jan. 19—A three-day convention of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations opened here today. President Walter Freiberg, of Cincinnati, was in the chair, and delivered the annual address on the year's work.

Queer Happenings In the War News

"Mosquito bite" is the official cause of death given for a member of the eight infantry, Sergeant Cross, at Oxford, who was bitten on the lip.

Ten American students in Oxford, eight of them Rhodes scholars, have gone to Belgium with the American relief commission to distribute food.

One of the most famous aviators to die in the war were Marc Pourpre, son of Princess Ghika, who was the first to fly the length of the Nile, from Cairo to Khartum.

To show how uncertain soldiers of the allies are of their destination, dispatches tell of the landing for the defense of Egypt of troops from Canada, Australia and New Zealand.

By his dying, overridden horses, General De Wet was traced and captured by a motorcar brigade in British Bechuanaland. He then zigzagged and doubled over his course through the sandy, thickly, wooded country, but could not shake off the autos.

Lieutenant General Kikman, commander of the German Guards division, is military correspondent of the Taeglische Rundschau, but he has found time from his duties as a war reporter to win from the kaiser a medal of honor for distinguished fighting at Lodz.

The London newspapers are denouncing the British censorship because it allowed them to get "scooped" on the Audacious disaster, and the German newspapers are denouncing it because, it is alleged, a telegram of condolence sent by the kaiser to the queen of Spain after the death of her brother was held up by the same censors.

GUS WILLIAMS' BROTHER FOUND DEAD IN BED

New York, Jan. 19—Following the suicide of his brother, Gus Williams, well known comedian, on Saturday last, James Williams, 64 years old, and also an actor, was found dead in bed today by the widow of his brother. He left St. Vincent's Hospital on Friday, after a five weeks' illness and the shock of his brother's tragic end on the next day greatly weakened him.

BABY SAVING IN JERSEY.

Newark, Jan. 19—A convention of officials, doctors and social workers from all parts of New Jersey gathered here today in the interest of reducing the infant mortality of the State. The figures on infant mortality show that of every 1,000 babies born in New Jersey 14 died before reaching their first birthday anniversary. The result of measures taken in Newark to reduce the toll are cited to show the improvement that can be made throughout the State. For, as a result of the local campaign, the Newark deaths of infants fell to 93 in each 1,000 births. Such a reduction throughout the State, it was asserted, would have saved 1,270 babies in the last year. Specialists in the field of hygiene are attending the convention. Among the speakers expected is Miss Julia C. Lathrop, of the National Children's Bureau. Other speakers are Dr. S. Josephine Baker and Dr. Henry L. K. Shaw, of New York.

TO SAVE MILLIONS.

Washington, Jan. 19—The Department of Agriculture and the Parcel Post ocfficials are making a proctical demonstration of their means of saving to farmers of the United States the millions of dollars lost each year by failure to sort and pack eggs for the market. The National Capital Poultry and Pigeon Association today, opened its annual show, and the government joined hands to show the methods its experts have discovered to save the wasted millions. The Maryland and Virginia farmers are visiting the exhibit in great numbers and it will be open until Saturday. The benefit of the demonstration will be available for farmers all over the country, for the Department of Agriculture is co-operating with all poultry associations that request its aid.

SIXTEENTH RECITAL.

The Aeolian Choir will give a sixteenth recital of Russian Choral music, Acappella with English text in the Central Congregation church, Hancock street, Brooklyn, on Wednesday evening, February 3, at 8:15 p. m. The Rev. Dr. S. Parks Cadman, will speak on the subject of church music. The recital as heretofore is open to the public without cost. The chorus numbers over fifty voices and is under the direction of N. Lindsay Norden.

TO SUBSCRIBERS

Subscribers to the Daily Press who are served by the route boys will confer a favor by promptly reporting to the Press office, either in person, by telephone or by mail, any negligence on the part of the route boys. Phone 1300.

SOUTHERN ITALY STRICKEN BY QUAKE

Reported That Severe Shocks Have Also Been Felt in Calabria.

Rome, Jan. 19.—News reached here early today that a strong earthquake has occurred in Calabria, especially around Cosenza, capital of the province.

It is not yet known whether there has been loss of life or serious damage to property.

Calabria is in the southwestern extremity of Italy, commonly called the "toe" of the mainland. It is a mountainous region and disastrous earthquakes have been frequent there.

Avezzano, Jan. 19.—Grave news reached here today from the town of Ortucchio, southeast of this place, where earthquake victims are reported to number over 2,000.

A thousand dead are buried under the ruins of the cathderal. The entire population of Ortucchio numbered about 2,500.

The village of Almort, in the same region, is also reported as completely destroyed.

Tagliacozzo (via Rome), Jan. 19.—Not less acute than the misery of the people of Avezzano is that of the inhabitants of the entire district to the south, in Descnia, San Benedetto, Gioji-de-Marsi and other towns.

Loss of life and damage to property in these places is equally as great and the needs of sufferers have received far less attention.

REFUGEES CROSS. U. S.

San Francisco, Cal., Jan. 19.—Fifty women and children, German refugees from Japan, will begin another long lap of their journey homeward today. Uncle Sam has removed all restrictions to their landing and crossing the country, so that they may reach relatives in Germany. Their husbands and fathers were held by the Japanese. This is one of the few cases on record in which the United States has permitted refugees to pass through the country.

TWO LUMBER CONVENTIONS.

Minneapolis, Minn., Jan. 19.—The Northwestern Lumbermen's Association opens today its annual convention in Minneapolis. Sessions will cover four days, and many members are present. The government's suit against the lumber trust is a topic of discussion.

New Orleans, Pa., Jan. 19.—Several hundred lumber men from the yellow pine belt met here today to complete the organization recently formed.

REDFIELD AT LOUISVILLE.

Lousville, Ky., Jan. 19.—Secretary William L. Redfield, of the Department of Commerce, will be the guest of honor at the annual banquet of the Transportation Club of Louisville, which takes place tomorrow night. Secretary Redfield and his party will be entertained tomorrow. Following the banquet, the Redfield party will journey to St. Louis to attend the International Trade Conference.

AD WOLGAST IS HOPEFUL.

Denver, Colo., Jan. 19.—"I'll give that Mexican the walloping of his career," declared Ad Wolgast, who meets Joe Azevedo here tonight. "When I fought him I had about as much business going into the ring as an old woman. I was hog fat and in no condition. I am happy to get a chance to show people that Joe's victory was nothing but a big fluke."

MISS WILSON JUDGES BABIES.

Washington, Jan. 19.—Miss Margaret Wilson has promised to award the prizes in a baby contest to be held held tomorrow. She has been deeply interested in the better baby movement. Over 300 babies have been entered. The examination of the judges will be complicated. The champion youngsters will be decorated by Miss Wilson herself.

CLOSE UNIQUE CONTEST.

Paris, Jan. 19—One of the most unique geographical contests ever held is that which closes here today, under the auspices of La Vie Parisienne, a noted French magazine. $2,000 in cash is offered for the best map of Europe showing the frontiers when the war is over. Of course the decision will be postponed until the treaties have been adjusted.

"WHERE THE TRAIL DIVIDES."

The feature at the Plainfield Theatre, today, is "Where the Trail Divides," with Robert Edeson in the leading role. This picture was also shown yesterday and there was a large attendance at all the performances. There will be two shows tonight.

CONDITION IS CRITICAL.

J. P. Laire, of the borough, who underwent an operation in Muhlenberg Hospital, last week, is reported today as being in a critical condition.

OPEN BIDS FOR CONVICT LABOR.

Frankfort, Ky., Jan. 19.—Bids were opened here today for the labor of 500 Kentucky convicts, for one, two, three and four years.

EARTHQUAKES.

In expressing sympathy for Italy in the terrible earthquake disaster, the American people show a warmth which is wanting when the troubles in the war ridden countries abroad are under discussion. The disaster to the Italians has come as a result of no effort of theirs, and could not have been prevented by any possible act on the part of the stricken nation. Even had it been possible to forsee the earthquake it is obvious that it could not be forestalled or held back, even long enough for the people to find safe havens.

Man has guarded and protected himself against almost every form of disaster, even from those that spring out of nature's moods of anger, lashed to furious heights, but against the earthquake he is as helpless today as the hour the first tremors ran over the planet, shook open death-dealing seams, and swept terror into the souls of the race.

The war is a social disaster that in its final workings brings the men of earth together even while it seems to tear them further apart. The earthquake is a natural disaster that brings men even closer together because of that very fact. The social cataclysm can be prevented, the natural cataclysm cannot. In the social cataclysm the victims are victims voluntarily. They go to their death smilingly, eyes wide open, because they want to. In the cataclsym which nature thrusts upon us, the victims yield to violence only because they cannot do other wise. They surrender only to a power nothing can stay or affect—a fragment of that universal unknowable power which we give the name nature.

It is somewhat surprising that there are not more thefts of automobiles in Plainfield, similar to the one on Saturday night, when a new car was stolen from in front of a local theatre. Owners of machines are careless about leaving them standing for long periods in the streets, at all hours of the day and night, and the temptation is great to men who understand their operation. The police do all they can to watch the cars, but it is impossible for them to identify the owner of every car that is standing along the curb, and if a stranger should get away with one under the very eyes of an officer, that officer could not be blamed. So careless have many owners become that they do not even take the plugs out of their machines when leaving them, or otherwise make it impossible for them to run. The lesson of Saturday night should be heeded by every automobilist in the city.

It will be good news to the consumer to learn that the Attorney General of the United States, acting under instruction from President Wilson, is going to investigate the rapidly increasing price of wheat. It is the intention of the government to prosecute where it can get the evidence of conspiracy, as it did soon after the war broke out, in the case of certain necessities of life that were artificially boosted at that time. The mere fact that foreign governments are buying more wheat than before in this country is no excuse for raising the price, for there has been no crop shortage which must be made up for by increased prices.

In spite of the assurance of the postoffice authorities the kicks continue to come in with astonishing regularity about the service which is being given. There's trouble somewhere, and its serious trouble. The sooner it is straightened out the better it will be. Letters are delivered to addresses which do not even look like those on their faces, they are delayed in transmission for hours, and one case has been brought to our atention where it took thirty-six hours for a letter which had been mailed in this city to be delivered within the city limits.

The time for fussing over the United States Senatorship from New Jersey is somewhat over a year hence, and there are bound to be so many changes in conditions meanwhile that it is hardly worth while guessing. We should imagine that the Hon. James E. Martine would not succeed himself in any event, yet there have been queerer things; for instance the fact that he is now a Senator.—Exchange.

Just wait until "Our Jim" gets into the campaign for re-election. He'll show his opponents more "queer things" than they ever imagined were possible.

Few people realize the excellent work that is being done in Plainfield by the Boy Scout activities. Future men are being developed who will be a credit to the citizenship of the country. The aid given by the Boy Scouts in the war abroad has already proven that their training was a splendid thing for the nations involved.

Four negroes were lynched by a mob in Georgia the other day because they assaulted a policeman. It's too bad the law cannot be invoked so that the men who did the work can be given the same treatment by the authorities.

The new Evergreen avenue school will soon be under way. The construction work should give employment to a lot of the laborers who are without jobs in this city, and ease the work of the committee on the unemployed.

All this discussion over patronage that is being carried on in the papers is tiresome. What the people of the United States want is men in public office who are capable of performing the duties entrusted to them.

THE FORUM

Editor, Plainfield Daily Press:

Referring to my communication to you of the 15th relative to fire whistle and to a statement in the Daily Press later to the effect that my estimate was low, I wish only to say that the maximum cost of $750 was not a guess, but was based on figures for moving the whistle and taking it from its present location and re-erecting it in a new location given me by the head of one of the most reputable local concerns who do that work. The other figures were based on recent actual purchases of similar equipment.

I shall be glad to give these figures in as much detail as desired to the proper authorities.

Great Semi-Annual Shoe Sale

January 18 we begin the clearance of Women's Fine Shoes to make room for Spring Goods.

Three Reasons Why You Should Be Interested:—

First—the shoes offered in this sale are this season's models from many of the best factories in existence.

Second—the prices are irresistable in that you can save, in many cases, as much as two dollars on a single pair.

Third—because the department is in charge of salespersons who exhaust every means to see that you are comfortably fitted and perfectly satisfied.

WORLD HOPE OF LASTING PEACE

W. Morgan Shuster Declares General Disarmament Impossible.

AND GIVES REASONS

Article on "Peace and Disarmament" in the February Century by Recent Official of Persia Says Each Nation Must Continue Forces.

No one can know when this war will end, yet every one in the whole world is yearning in his heart for the day of peace to arrive. So we ask ourselves! Of what nature will that peace be? And how shall it be permanently secured? And this self-questioning leads to many fond delusions.

Because of the normal yearning for an end to dangerous conditions, and while the whole world is still stunned by the spectacle of five hundred million people at war, a few super-optimists find breath to say that there will never be another great war, and that the one silver lining to the clouds is the probability of disarmament, partial or complete, after the nations of Europe and Asia shall have fought themselves to satiety, victory, or defeat, as the case may be.

But this hope is so misleading, its indulgence so vain, and yet so natural, that it seems proper, even at this indecisive stage of the conflict, to point out some of the reasons why anything approaching general disarmament cannot take place.

The term "disarmament" is apt to be used vaguely to represent anything from the mere cessation of naval construction and army-increase programs to that purely idealistic condition when banners would be furled, standing armies be dispersed to their homes, and war vessels be transformed into commercial craft, or remain, dismantled, as interesting relics of a benighted past.

The latter state is manifestly so impossible to expect, at least within many decades, that it may be promptly dismissed from consideration. To mention only a few of the material objections: There are millions of men who are substantially unfitted by education, experience, or temperament for any other profession than that of arms, on land or at sea. Society, industry and commerce have long since adjusted themselves to their existence as a major police force, and to attempt to thrust them suddenly into peaceful pursuits would create no little disturbance. Professional fighters could not be expected to take quietly to mere idleness, even on pay, nor would they be content to be regarded as mere pensioned-off appendages of a baser social state.

Then the preparation of all nations for war, even during periods of peace, has created vast industries, official and private, largely dependent upon the existing armies and navies being maintained and even increased. Enormous amounts of capital are invested in such plants, and hundreds of thousands of workmen would be thrown out of employment, should general disarmament be suddenly attempted. The expression "general disarmament" is used because, manifestly, no nation or nations will begin it unless all do.

In a hundred ways, of which only one or two examples have just been cited, the constant possibility of war and its consequence, preparations for war have become so interwoven with the world's entire social and economic fabrics as to render any radical departure from present conditions highly improbable.

Enough has been said, then, to indicate that by "disarmament," among serious advocates of the plan, must be meant a state more nearly approaching the one first mentioned; that is, virtually a limitation of armaments on some basis acceptable at least to the leading nations of the world. But if this be what is contemplated, the plan is already doomed to failure, for the simple reason that such a thing as any binding agreement in such matters as national safety and advantage has been conclusively shown to be farcial. Even if the nations could, by some divine chastening process, agree on the relative strengths at which their armies and navies were to be maintained, it must be remembered that standing armies and warships are only the first line of offense, the quick-firing force, and that there are a dozen ways in which a nation can successfully prepare for war without actually calling a single additional man to the colors or adding a unit to the navy until hostilities had been actually declared.

Why do so many mothers take Wood Brook milk? Perhaps they have noticed the difference in the doctor's bills, if they are wise economists. But a mother's first thought is the children, and it does not take her long to discover that Wood Brook milk is health insurance for the children.

SPLENDID WORK BY ANTI T.-B.

housekeeping, and succeeded in bringing the cost of feeding the children down to 12½ cents per child per day, through the assistance given in the form of generous contributions of vegetables and Thanksgiving and Christmas dinners, and the furnishing of milk at cost by Woodbrook Farms. Mrs. Hedges and Mrs. Bulkley took charge of a donation tea in October, which also assisted the work materially. As the Board of Education has taken over the expense of paying the teacher, the problem of accepting pupils from North Plainfield has come up. This was later settled at the meeting of the trustees, when it was voted that if the North Plainfield Board of Education would not pay for these children, the league would foot the bill for the two who are now attending, and future cases are to be referred to the school committee.

The medical and teachers' reports of the open air school showed that the children have gained untold benefits from this work. The average gain in weight of each child for nine months was nearly eight pounds, although the normal for the same ages would be from four to five pounds. One child gained 10¾ pounds. There were thirty children in the school.

The report of the tuberculosis nurse from June, 1908, to December, 1914, showed that there were 382 patients under her care, of whom 155 died; 80 left town, and 147 remained.

The report of Treasurer James P. Murray showed total receipts of $6,492.17, and total disbursements of $5,356.01.

There has been no falling off in membership this year, $443 being collected in $1 subscriptions, two more than the previous year. Twenty well known women have taken charge of the collections.

The Charity Organization Society, through Miss M. C. Phillips, reported that the monthly average of persons afflicted with tuberculosis who were aided was 43.01, with a minimum of 37 and a maximum of 55. Money was used as follows: Milk, $366.14; coal, $18.42; cash, $58; board, $344.50; clothing, $185.92; groceries, $91.62, a total of $1,064.60. Twenty-nine free prescriptions were given.

President William S. Tyler was re-elected for another year, as were the other officers, as follows: B. Van D. Hedges, first vice president; George M. Holstein, second vice president; James P. Murray, treasurer; F. W. Iredell, secretary; Dr. Frederick J. Hughes, medical director; Dr. Edward S. Krans, assistant medical director. The honorary vice presidents are Ernest R. Ackerman, Rev. B. M. Bogan, Mayor Leighton Calkins, Frank L. Clark, Mayor Robert Clark, Jr., Alexander Gilbert, Senator James E. Martine, Charles W. McCutchen, Percy H. Stewart, Mrs. Dexter Tiffany and Dr. John Sheridan Zelie.

The executive committee will consist of Dr. F. E. DuBois, C. T. Elliott, Leslie R. Fort, George M. Holstein, Dr. F. J. Hughes, F. W. Iredell, Mrs. Sherman B. Joost, Dr. E. S. Krans, James P. Murray, Miss M. C. Phillips, Samuel Rothberg, C. B. Tyler, William S. Tyler, Stephen H. Voorhees, William M. Wherry, Jr.

The trustees are George L. Babcock, C. Ames Brooks, Mrs. E. W. Bulkley, Samuel T. Carter, Jr., Richard A. Claybrook, Dr. H. D. Corbusier, John H. Cose, Mrs. Allan Cowperthwait, J. Hervey Doane, E. F. The following members were re-elected to serve for the three ensuing years:

Mrs. Frederick G. Mead, Mrs. Percy H. Stewart, Mrs. Lewis A. Williams, Jr., Mrs. Walter M. McGee, Mrs. William C. O'Connell, Jr., Mrs. Harry L. McGee, Miss Ethel Colton and Mrs. Frederick H. Andrews.

After the reports and election of the board, Mrs. Mead gave a very interesting and instructive talk on her trip to China last summer and of the growth and development of the Y. W. C. A. there. She told of the great work done by the missions of the various denominations from the United States and sacrifices of those who had consecrated their lives to educate the Chinese. She spoke of the loyalty of the Chinaman for his country and his longing for education and culture. In China the height of nobility and the only grade of aristocracy is education and learning. Mrs. Mead urged the local association to support the missions in that country this year instead of sending to India.

After the business meeting refreshments were served by the members of the social committee.

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

In addition to one of the most enjoyable vaudeville bills local patrons have been given this season, Proctor's Theatre offered a superb feature photo-play, yesterday, in William A. Brady's production, "As Ye Sow." It was vociferously applauded at frequent intervals and at the conclusion was voted the "last word" in photographic realism. "As Ye Sow" will be repeated this afternoon and tonight, and tomorrow afternoon and night, in addition to the seventh installment of "Zudora," Proctor's will offer another big feature film in the Chicago Tribune's series of Belgian war pictures. These are the only authentic "movies" now in the United States, having been taken with the permission of King Albert, and aided by his military authorities. Those who view them realize as they never did before what the terrible struggle in Europe has done to the chivalrous little country. Thursday at Proctor's will mark the opening of the latest serial film, George Randolph Chester's popular story, "Runaway June." Don't fail to see the initial presentation and then join the big audiences that will follow the heroine through the entire series.

N. P. H. S. NOTES.

The first contest in spelling will be held in the High School the last part of this month and prizes to the amount of ten dollars will be awarded to the best spellers.

A lot of work has been done lately in improving the cheering for the interscholastic games and the students are now getting the yells and songs down in fine shape.

A lot of interest has been taken by the students in the dancing classes of both the High School and grades. Twenty-nine students have joined the grade class and a large number have signified their intention of enrolling in the High School class, which starts tonight. The classes are held in the kindergarten room on Lincoln place.

The play committee, which was appointed by the Boys' A. A. to select the annual play to be given by the association, held a meeting yesterday afternoon and fixed the date for the play as March 19. A large number of sample plays have been sent for by the committee.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES.

The Commercial Club will hold a meeting tomorrow afternoon in the gymnasium. A. E. Hoagland, postmaster, will talk to the members upon the topic, "Business."

The dancing classes held their first meeting yesterday afternoon, under the instruction of Miss Bessie Alpaugh. Each class had an attendance of about twenty.

IMPORTANT MATCH IN EAGLES' LEAGUE

Scrap for First Place Keen—Date of Banquet is Decided.

At a recent meeting of the Fraternal Order of Eagles' Bowling League, it was decided that the championship trophy for the season of 1914-1915 should be presented at a banquet, to be held after the close of the season, February 5, in Newark, where the representative team taking the title is located.

Newark and Elizabeth teams are now tied for first place, with Plainfield, Rahway and Somerville fighting it out for third and fourth places. The Elizabeth team will meet the Newark quintet tomorrow night on the White Palace alleys, Newark, and the result of the match will probably settle which team will take first honors for the season. There is sure to be a big turnout and arrangements have been made to have a brass band on hand.

RIFLE CLUB PLANS FOR PERMANENT ORGANIZATION

The executive committee of the rifle club held a meeting in Plainfield High School, yesterday afternoon, and decided to close the charter list at the next meeting, which will be held tonight in the Co. K armory. Those who have any intention of joining the club should be at this meeting and hand their names to the secretary.

A small assessment will be collected at the coming meeting to defray the expenses.

WESTFIELD TEAM'S SCHEDULE.

The Knights of Columbus Bowling League schedule has been revised through March. This was done at a recent meeting of the delegates from the various clubs and it was also decided to hold the annual league banquet during the early part of April, with a dance following. The dates that the Westfield team will play are as follows:

Wednesday, January 20—Bayonne at Westfield.

Friday, January 29—Westfield at Paulus Hook.

Monday, February 1—Bayley at Westfield.

Wednesday, February 10—Westfield at Newark.

Friday, February 19—Star at Westfield.

Tuesday, February 23—Westfield at Ascension.

Monday, March 1—Jersey City at Westfield.

Thursday, March 11—Westfield at Bayonne.

JUNIOR ELKS TO PLAY.

Plainfield Junior Elk pinners will get into action tonight, when they go to Newark for a three-game match. The locals are now holding third place and may have a chance of getting higher if they take the odd or all three games.

SWEDISH BOYS BANE EASY FOR LOCALITIES

Leal Quintet Held Visitors Scoreless for Three-quarters of the Game.

In a rough and tumble assault on the A. A. U. code of basketball rules on the Y. M. C. A. court, yesterday afternoon, the Swedish basketball cohorts from Upsala College were put to rout by the Leal School aggregation by a score of 31 to 4. In the first half the localites piled up twenty points, while wielding the kalsomine brush over the heads of the visitors. Not until the latter part of the second half did the Swedish youths register a tally and when the field goal was scored by the visitors their fair co-eds in the gallery "went crazy." The solitary double-decker looked as big as a mountain to the beaten quintet and they followed it up by registering a total of four counters before the curtain was drawn over the slaughter.

Immediately upon the start of the encounter the Upsala youths sought to inject a degree of rough-house into the match that would soon tire their lighter opponents. When they were held strictly to the rule code the visitors became indignant and when the Leal team started to open a wide gap in the score column the Swedish boys completely lost their heads. Captain McCarthy (Swedish) retired from the fracas in the first half after he saw that his charges were hopelessly beaten and after he had been warned twice for slugging. It was McCarthy's rough work when the Leal team visited Kenilworth that caused the downfall of the locals.

N. P. H. S. GAME.

The North Plainfield High School and New Brunswick High School basketball teams will meet on Saengerbund Hall court, tomorrow afternoon, for the second time this season. The first game resulted in an easy victory for the boroughites, the score being 28 to 16, and they anticipate another win. The game will start at 3:30 o'clock.

MORRISTOWN AGAIN.

After receiving a walloping at Morristown last Saturday afternoon, the Leal School basketball five will see what it can do against this aggregation on the Y. M. C. A. court tomorrow afternoon. Morristown will be here with the same team that lost to North Plainfield for another game with the private school youths.

ONE-LEGGED BOY A LEADER IN Y. M. C. A. JUNIOR DEPARTMENT ATHLETIC EVENTS

Enrolled in the Y. M. C. A. boys' department is a youngster who has but one leg and yet takes an active part in all of the scheduled events. This little wonder is Wallace Wylau, twelve years old, who lives at 210 West Fourth street. Several years ago when the family lived in Haverstraw, N. Y., Wallace was run over by a coal train and had his right leg severed just below the knee.

Since coming to Plainfield he has become popular with all of the youngsters of his own age in the West End of the city and grown-ups have taken a noticeable interest in him because of his versatality despite the marked handicap. Yesterday afternoon in the Y. M. C. A. boys' department running high jump he cleared the bar at three feet seven inches, a creditable mark for a youth of his age in full possession of all of his natural faculties. Wallace says he can leap four feet in the running high jump, and this statement does not contain the least doubt, in view of the fact that his jumps yesterday afternoon were of a peculiarly clean-cut style, which indicated that he was above the ordinary youth in this event. He outclassed a majority of the other twelve and fourteen-year-old youngsters, all of whom took a particular interest in seeing him "make good."

Not only is Wallace an adept at high jumping, but he can broad jump and put the shot. He also plays basketball, football and baseball. He is one of the most regular attendants at the Y. M. C. A. junior department gym classes and indulges in the same calisthenics and recreative game work as his companions. After each class he takes a plunge in the tank and is one of the best divers and swimmers in the department.

The youngster is of a jovial disposition and when interviewed by a reporter he smiled and related the manner in which the affliction was brought upon him. He is not only good in athletics, but has attained honors in scholarship, being a student in the eighth grade of the Stillman School.

SULLIVAN LEADING FIVE-MAN TOURNEY

Official Averages in the Columbus Club Bowling Event.

Official averages of the Columbus Club Five-man Bowling Tournament, published by Secretary T. F. Carty, show Sullivan, of the 175 class, as high man in the tournament with an average of 194.3. The next highest men are Taylor and Strappe, of the same class, who have averages of 193.8 and 192 respectively.

In the 165 class John Duffy is the leader with a mark of 177.9, but is hard pressed for high honors by Kyle, who has 177.2. Joe Green and T. McInerney are tied for second place in the 155 class with averages of 172, while Doyle is the leader by four points. Gueterman, with 178.1, and Regan with 159.9, lead the 145 and 135 classes respectively.

BASKETBALL HEADS MEET TO DECIDE ON OFFICIALS

The managers of the Interscholastic Basketball League are holding a meeting in the Plainfield High School this afternoon, to make final arrangements for the game Saturday afternoon.

It will be played in Saengerbund Hall, between the North Plainfield and Plainfield High School teams.

INTRODUCED BOXING BILL.

Newark, Jan. 19.—Favorable discussion over the proposed bill to legalize boxing in New Jersey, introduced last night at Trenton by Assemblyman Jacob J. Singer, is general. The measure, according to Singer, is patterned after the New York law with a few novel differences. A one man commission can control the sport is the feature of the bill.

SPARROWS DROP PAIR TO PARROT PINNERS

Hot Race Now on for Second Place in Columbus Club Bowling Tournament.

COLUMBUS CLUB RECORDS.

Standing of the Teams.

	W.	L.	P.C.	H.S.
Robins	10	2	.833	941
Sparrows	10	5	.667	962
Parrots	9	6	.600	918

Doves	6	9	.400	885
Peacocks	4	8	.333	885
Crows	4	11	.267	953

The Sparrow team, of the Columbus Club bowling tournament, received a big setback last night, when it dropped the odd game of the match to the Parrots, who are working hard for second place, now occupied by the Sparrows. By dropping two the Sparrows lost ground in their run on the Robin leaders and are now two full games behind them.

All of the games of the match were close, the first being won by three pins, the scores being 834 to 832. Duffy's starter, a 202, helped greatly in winning the game for the Parrots, this being the only good score chalked up in this game. Strappe finished up with a 172 with the other scores credited to the winners were 161, 159 and 140. For the Sparrows, Howe pinned high, getting 188, while Shannon's average of 165 was second. Shannon did not appear to play the match and he was given this average in all three games.

Duffy and Strappe also did good work in the second game, which was won by 11 pins. Duffy scored 188 and Strappe went this mark two points better. Regan, of the Sparrow five, hit for 208, but scores of 122 and 148 that followed pulled down the total. Twenty-seven pins separated the scores of the last game, the Sparrows having the best of the argument, the scores being 788 and 761. Coffy's 183 and Shannon's average helped to annex this game as the Parrots scored 125 and 133. Thursday night the Peacocks and Hawks will meet.

The scores:

BASEBALL DATES WANTED.

The Heights Grays, a newly-formed baseball team, intend to start their season on Saturday, April 2. This team is composed of some of the best semi-professional players available and should prove to be a big drawing card. Only Saturday games, on opponent's grounds, will be played. They are willing to travel within fifty miles of New York city for suitable inducements. For further particulars address William A. Dunphy, 55 Cannonbury road, Jamaica, L. I.

MASONIC BOWLING.

Two matches will be rolled in the Masonic League tomorrow night, when the Anchor team, of this city, will play Lafayette at Rahway and Azure meets Hermann at Elizabeth.

HOLY CROSS MOVIES ON VIEW THURSDAY

Benefit Performance to Be Conducted in the Astor Theatre by Local Club.

Manager "Doc" Doyle and a corps of able assistants led by Joe Green, have completed arrangements for the motion picture benefit to be given in the Astor Theatre, on West Front street, Thursday afternoon and evening. This event is being conducted as a means of replenishing a depleted treasury caused by the lack of patronage at games played during the past season.

Special invitations have been extended to members of the Common Council and other city officials and 2,000 tickets have already been placed in the hands of club members for disposition. Although the Astor Theatre has been temporarily closed to the public the club management has obtained the right to conduct the proposed performance there on the advertised date and no further hitch in the plans is anticipated.

The feature film will be a screenic reproduction of the Holy Cross-Wyoming contest on Cricket Field last fall.

LINEUP FOR COLUMBUS FIVE'S INITIAL CONTEST

The Columbus Club basketball team, under the leadership of Temporary Captain Joe Carty, will play its first game of the season tonight on the new court in the club auditorium. The visiting aggregation will be composed of local players headed by Jack Ricketts and a good game will probably be played. Last night there were eleven out to practice and a short scrimmage was held. Manager John Kyle is booking games with teams in this vicinity and already has his next week's attraction settled. Eugene Lidgate, of Fanwood, is going to bring a team down either Tuesday or Thursday to meet the West Front street team.

If the season goes on well dancing will be started soon, which will undoubtedly be an added feature. Among those who will get into action for the Columbus Club team will be Eddie Taylor, Dan McAfee and Jack Coffey, forwards; George Linke, centre; Joe Carty, John Caulfield and Joe Sullivan, guards.

BOROUGH PINNERS GET AWAY WITH THREE WINS

The North Plainfield bowling team took three straight games from a Dunellen five on Gates' borough alleys, last night. The visitors were never dangerous and all games were won by large margins. In the first game Menzenbach scored a 210 and "Walt" Conover hit for 192. Connolly made high score of the night in the second game when he registered a 213, while Zink made a 208, which was high score for the opposing team.

The scores:

Scattered Sport Gleanings

That Upsala basketball quintet occupies the same position on interscholastic courts as a boxing kangaroo does before the footlights. Both are dismal failures in their chosen professions.

Giving certain basketball quintets in this city the double "o" we have been led to believe that in several instances the lack of team work may be diagnosed by the novelty song, "I wanna be captain or I won't play."

Jim Sinnott, in the Evening Mail, says: "Baseball men will make money." Now we'd like to know what the moguls have been doing since the pastime was weaned out of the old game of rounders? Never heard of any poor farm being stocked with ball players.

Clem Bechtel says that recent press boosts have led him to believe just how great a marathoner he is. In fact Clem says he won't waste his talent on the "Evening Mail Classic," but will wait for that trip to the war gridrion with the U. S. Olympic representatives in 1916.

One year ago today the Amateur Athletic Union barred women from athletics. And yet two overtime decisions won by the P. H. S. girls here last week top our city's athletic achievements for 1915 to date. What would they do if they were not barred?

News headline—"Leach Cross demands first crack at Shugrue ove the twenty round trail." And the fighting dentist could gain advantage in but three out of ten rounds one night last week. Now's the time for that Scotch Plains' ring artist to get in a little footwork.

There seems to be a difference in opinion these days about every little thing that slips into the sporting spotlight. That's the reason this interscholastic league argument on officials has failed to arouse any great amount of consternation.

We've known some sport scribes who have been fooled in scattering publicity to certain athletic factions who start controversies of this kind. If that's what the high schools are angling for this year they have struck mighty poor results to date.

If you want a swim tonight just take a trip up to the Plainfield High School. This happens to be one of the nights when the poor, forgotten public will get a share of what has been dubbed as "Plainfield's 1914 extravagance."

One local coach pronounces strict playing rules non-essentials in basketball. We used to think that the only non-essentials in the court pastime were the clothes the players wore. How times do change.

CHARLIE NEWHOUSE SAYS HE HAS A SCHOOLBOY STAR

Charley Newhouse, the veteran ballgamer of Bound Brook, who had a deal to do with the development of some of the classiest talent in this section, notably Albin Carlstrom, Frank Bruggy, George Ortlieb, Ralph Shaw and Fay Washburn, has discovered a phenom, "a real find," is the way he sizes up the youngster.

Ray Matthews, a 19-year-old pitcher, standing six feet two inches in grandma's handiwork, tipping a healthy 175 pounds and flipping with his starboard flipper, is the newcomer. Matthews is still a student in the Bound Brook High School, and Charley looks for his games in scholastic circles this spring to serve as a training period for the semi-pro work he will do during the summer.

"Then," says Newhouse, "if I can get a catcher of experience to handle him it will only require a short while to develop him so much that when we send him out into professional ball his seasoning period in the bushes will be a brief one."—Elizabeth Journal.

N. P. H. S. GETTING READY.

After the morning session of the North Plainfield High School, cheer leader Ted Chandler and his borough rooters practiced the school yells in the assembly room in an effort to get more volume. There were more than thirty present and they made noise enough to be heard for blocks. All of the old yells were run through and some new ones, including songs were practiced. Several practices will be held before the "big game" Saturday afternoon.

COOMBS WITH BROOKLYN.

Palestine, Tex., Jan. 19.—Jack Coombs, former star pitcher of the Philadelphia Athletics and World's Series hero of 1910 and 1911, announced here yesterday that he had signed a contract with the Brooklyn Nationals.

WESTFIELD COPS MADE RAID ON "COFFEE HOUSE"

Westfield, Jan. 19.—As the result of a raid on a "coffee house" at 117 North street, seven men and one woman were before Recorder Springsted yesterday and fined. The men gave their names as Thomas Dougel, Joe Bonetti, Mike Lans, Tom Britellio, Joseph Commella, Paul Lasso and Gastano Rotello. Russo was held in $200 bail for carrying a concealed weapon, the police having found a revolver in his pocket.

The woman gave her name as Mrs. Molly Derzelle, twenty-five years old, and said that she came to the North street house from New York. The raid was conducted by Chief of Police Thomas O'Neill, who found several decks of cards. Two jugs of whiskey were taken from the house.

SUED BY HUSBAND'S BROTHER ON ALLEGED LIBEL LETTERS

Trenton, Jan. 19.—As a sequel to the suit for maintenance brought by Mrs. Ida H. Barrett, of Bound Brook, against her husband, Garet Garrett, it came to light yesterday that a libel suit for $10,000 has been brought in the Supreme Court against Mrs. Garrett by her brother-in-law, Thomas Garrett, a member of the Art Students' League of New York.

The libel action is based upon two letters alleged to have been written by Mrs. Garrett to her husband last October, in which reference were made reflecting upon the character of Thomas.

In answer to these charges Mrs. Garrett, without admitting in so many words the authenticity of the letters, has set up the plea that anything she wrote to her husband pertained to subjects concerning which she thought he ought to be informed. She therefore claimed that such communications were privileged, and could not be used as the basis of an action against her. In this respect the proceedings present a novel point. In the Chancery suit Mrs. Garrett attributed the breaking up of their home to the appearance of her brother-in-law, who came to live with them. She declared that an attachment grown up between the two brothers which resulted in a growing coldness of her husband toward her.

BORO COURT NEWS.

William Sewell, colored, of Plainfield avenue, was arraigned in the borough court this morning, charged with carting without a license. The charge was preferred by John T. Smith, also colored, of 208 Plainfield avenue, who claimed that the license that Sewell was using had been stolen from him by the latter. The case was postponed until tomorrow morning.

John Bodenheimer, of Watchung, was arrested and arraigned before Recorder Fred Hand, this morning, charged with the non-payment of a fine. Bodenheimer was arrested the night before Christmas and fined $5 and was given a limited time in which to pay it. He failed to pay the money and was taken into custody yesterday. His father promised to see to the payment of the fine with a week's time.

Sir Thomas and a nursing staff will join the vessel at Marseilles and proceed to Salonika with it.

TO INTRODUCE RURAL CREDITS LEGISLATION

Washington, Jan. 19.—President Wilson told callers today that he purposed introducing rural credits legislation at the present session. The announcement came as a surprise because of the congestion of business. It was gathered from the President's admissions that he would not be surprised if an extra session of Congress after March 4 would be necessary.

WILL ILLUSTRATE CUSTOMS OF THE AMERICAN INDIAN

The American Indian has always been a very important part of the nation's history. At present they number 331,250, located on twenty-three reservations, and cost our government about $10,000,000 to care for them every year.

As an illustration of their customs and mode of life, the Woman's Missionary Circle, of the First Baptist church, is presenting this afternoon an interesting play entitled "Squaw-Want-to-Know." Some six or eight persons in Indian costume will form the representative characters. The play will be repeated tomorrow evening, after the close of the mid-week service.

BENCH APPOINTMENTS ARE MADE BY GOVERNOR

Trenton, Jan. 19—Governor Fielded sent the following appointments to the Senate last night:

Supreme Court Justice James F. Minturn, of Hoboken, reappointed. Minturn is a Democrat and his term would have expired on February 4.

William H. Speers, Jersey City, reappointed Circuit Court judge. He is a Republican and his term would have expired on February 3.

East Orange District Court, Charles B. Clancey, East Orange, to succeed Judge Woral F. Mountain.

Perth Amboy District Court, Charles C. Hommann, of Perth Amboy, to succeed John W. Beekman.

Cumberland County Tax Board, Daniel W. Moore, of Hopewell township, to succeed George Hampton, resigned. This appointment is for the unexpired term only.

Of the appointments made, those of Justice Minturn and of Mr. Moore were confirmed. The rest were laid over.

APPROPRIATIONS COMMITTEE CHOOSES SMALLEY CHAIRMAN

Trenton, Jan. 19—Confronted with demands on one hand that there shall be a material reduction in the expenditures of the State, and on the other with requests from various State departments and institutions for additions to their allowances, the joint appropriations committees of the Legislature were organized yesterday afternoon in the office of State Comptroller Edward I. Edwards. Senator William W. Smalley, chairman of the Senate committee, was elected chairman of the joint body.

The joint appropriations committee consists of the separate committees appointed in the Senate and the Assembly. Really they are district bodies, but for convenience to themselves and to the representatives of departments and institutions, they sit together. Assemblyman Thomas J. Smith, of Essex county, is chairman of the house committee. According to the custom of many years, the chairman of the Senate committee is chosen as presiding officer of the joint committees.

The special importance of the appropriations committee is recognized in the Senate by the fact that it consists of four Senators, while all the other committees have three members. Besides Senator Smalley the members are Senators George W. F. Gaunt, Charles A. Rathbun and Dr. William E. Ramsay. The Assembly members beside Mr. Smith are A. Dayton Oliphant, Arthur N. Pierson, Ogden H. Hammond and Henry T. Kays. Senator Ramsay and Mr. Kays are the only Democratic members.

One of the questions to be taken under consideration by the committee this year will be the matter of making an appropriation for the salary of Azariah Beekman, of Somerset county, who was recently appointed legal advisor to the Legislature. Mr. Beekman's office is a new one and upon its creation it was found that no provision had been made for his compensation.

The Most Inexperienced Buyer Can "See Values" in the

Fur Sale of the Season

When muffs and scarfs are taken right out of the famous Wanamaker true-to-name fur stocks and marked a third and a half less than their former prices, it doesn't take a fur expert to see values.

"It's remarkable, I don't see how you do it," a woman said to us on the first day.

Why We Can Make Such an Offering

Our aim is to have the Wanamaker Fur Market new each season.

We could store these furs we are offering now and put them on sale next fall, for they are staple furs which do not go out of style.

But we prefer to clear our stocks at the end of every season and we are willing to make price concessions in order to start next year with nothing but new furs.

The furs in this present offering were all bought for the present season.

NEW YORK AMUSEMENTS

The inimitable Marie Dressler has proven herself more buoyant and mirth provoking than ever, and her latest starring vehicle, "A Mix-Up," at the Thirty-ninth Street Theatre, justly deserves the phrase line as being constructed for "laughing purposes only." This three-act farce comedy is replete with a rapid panorama of ludicrous situations and dialogue, interspersed with plenty of Miss Dressler's own witticisms and screamingly funny facial contortions. "A Mix-Up" was written by Parker A. Hord. Supporting Miss Dressler in the cast are Bert Lytell, Robert Ober, Albert Reed, Julia Blanc, Evelyn Vaughan, Helen Beaumont, Sarah McVicker, John P. Dougherty and Nellie De Grasse. By means of a novel scenic illusion characters not involved in the actual setting are introduced with interesting effect. During the second act of "A Mix-Up," Miss Dressler sings some of her own new songs.

That jolly farce, "It Pays to Advertise," at the Geo. M. Cohan Theatre, is sweeping audiences off their feet with its healthy fun. The abundant humor of this highly delectable comedy contributes enjoyment with a certainty that is attested in a never ending succession of audiences that absolutely quake with laughter as this sparkling piece of farcial literateur is unfolded to their view. "It Pays to Advertise" is great fun and one of the solid successes of the season. The run will continue indefinitely.

Cohan and Collier and amusement are synonymous. The combination of these favorite comedians and their appearance as co-stars in Mr. Cohan's new musical revue, "Hello Broadway," at the Astor Theatre, is indeed a happy event which, if the unprecedented demand for seats covering a period of eight weeks ahead may be cited as evidence, is particularly agreeable to the myriad admirers of Geo. M. and Willie. As to "Hello Broadway," it is not too much to say that it is the last word in musical revues. It presents a galaxy of stellar entertainers in support and an alluring chorus ensemble of bewitching femininity, gorgeously gowned in a bewildering variety of modish costumes that delight the eye as their wearers whirl through the swift moving scenes of Cohan's musical crazy-quilt patched with 57 varieties of entertainment that fairly sizzle with wit, repartee, lilting melody and fascinating song numbers. "Hello Broadway" is a riot.

"On Trial," the melodramatic sensation at the Candler Theatre is holding audiences in a grip of steel. The realism of this surprising novelty in playwriting stamps it a triumph in dramatic art while the ingenuity of its scenic background is a never ending source of wonder and amazement. "On Trial" is a remarkable play and its splendid interpretation at the hands of a most efficient company is furnishing climax after climax of the most thrilling intensity.

With the presentation of Margaret Illington in Henry Arthur Jones' new play, "The Lie," att he Harris Theatre, Selwyn & Company began their second series of activities for the current season. "The Lie" scored an emphatic success and the Harris Theatre has sold out at every performance since the opening. On the same night a second company of the Field-Mayo farce, "Twin Beds," began a season on tour. And two companies of Bayard Veiller's "Within the Law," one touring the South and one touring the big cities of the East and West, have been added to the Selwyn attractions already on the road. Another company opened Christmas Eve in Roi Cooper Magrue's "Under Cover," successfully presented by Selwyn & Company, at the Cort Theatre, New York, with William Courtenay, and at Cohan's Grand Opera House, Chicago, with H. B. Warner. At the Hudson Theatre, Selwyn & Company present James Forbes' new comedy, "The Show Shop," with an All American cast headed by Douglas Fairbanks. And from all accounts Mr. Forbes' play is as attractive to playgoers as his previous successes, "The Chorus Lady" and "The Traveling Salesman."

AN UP-TO-DATE COUNTY.

Lexington, Ky., Jan. 19—Whether Greenup county, in Eastern Kentucky will appropriate $200,000 for the rebuilding of its principal roadways is being decided today at a special election. The citizens of the county have held many meetings, and it was decided to tackle the good roads question as the principal means of putting Greenup county in a thriving condition. Reports from the town of Greenup, which is the county seat, are to the effect that the bond issue will undoubtedly be carried in today's election.

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS

It was asserted during the contest over the passage of the Pierce Bank Stock Tax Act last winter, that if the measure became a law the banks, for the purpose of creating public sentiment for the repeal of the statute, would take pains to demonstrate emphatically to their stockholders the increased burden placed upon them by the law. But the statements as to how the first levy of the tax was satisfied proves that few of the banks and trust companies took special pains to arouse the antagonism of stockholders to the new law. A large proportion of the banks of the of the State paid the tax directly and charge it to profit and loss. A few had the tax directly paid by the stockholders, and some others, after paying the tax themselves, sent the receipted bill to the stockholders. Doubtless before another payment of the tax is due some uniform method will be devised by the bankers themselves for meeting it. No change is needed in the law to bring this about. And no matter whether the tax is paid through the bank or by the stockholders direct, sentiment sufficient for the repeal of the law will not be created so long as it can be demonstrated that the tax paid is an equitable one.—Newark Evening News.

Over the jam and out on to the smooth Smoke tore along, calling loudly: "Billy! Billy!"

Billy heard and answered, and by the light of the many fires on the ice Smoke saw a sled swing in from the side and come abreast. Its dogs were fresh and overhauled his. As the sleds swerved toward each other he leaped across, and Billy promptly rolled off. "Where's Big Olaf?" Smoke cried.

"Leading!" Billy's voice answered, and Smoke was again flying through the wall of blackness.

In the jams of that relay, where the way led across a chaos of upended ice cakes and where Smoke slipped off the forward end of the sled and with a haul rope toiled behind the wheel dog, he passed three sleds.

Among the jams of the next short relay into Sixty Mile he passed two more teams. And that he might know adequately what had happened to them one of his own dogs wrenched a shoulder, was unable to keep up and was dragged in the harness. As he cut the injured animal out he heard the whining cries of dogs behind him and the voice of a man that was familiar. It was Von Schroeder. Smoke called a warning to prevent a rear end collision, and the baron, hawing his animals and swinging on the gee pole, went by a dozen feet to the side.

On the smooth stretch of ice beside the trading post at Sixty Mile Smoke overtook two more sleds. All had just changed teams, and for five minutes they ran abreast, each man on his knees and pouring whip and voice into the maddened dogs. But Smoke had studied out that portion of the trail, and now marked the tall pine on the bank that showed faintly in the light of the many fires. Below that pine was not merely darkness, but an abrupt cessation of the smooth stretch. There the trail, he knew, narrowed to a single sled width. Leaning out ahead, he caught the haul rope and drew his leaping sled up to the wheel dog. He caught the animal by the hind legs and threw it. With a snarl of rage, it tried to slash him with its fangs, but was dragged on by the rest of the team. Its body proved an efficient brake, and the other teams, still abreast, dashed ahead into the darkness for the narrow way.

Smoke heard the crash and uproar of their collision, released his wheeler, sprang to the gee pole and urged his team to the right into the soft snow, where the straining animals wallowed to their necks. It was exhausting work, but he won by the tangled teams and gained the hard packed trail beyond.

On the relay out of Sixty Mile Smoke had next to his poorest team, and, though the going was good, he had set it a short fifteen miles. Two more teams would bring him into Dawson and to the gold recorder's office, and Smoke had selected his best animals for the last two stretches. Sitka Charley himself waited with the eight Malemutes that would jerk Smoke along for twenty miles, and for the finish, with a fifteen mile run, was his own team.

The gray twilight of morning was breaking as he exchanged his weary dogs for the eight fresh Malemutes. Sitka Charley called out the order of the teams ahead. Big Olaf led, Arizona Bill was second, and Von Schroeder third. These were the three best men in the country. In fact, ere Smoke had left Dawson, the popular betting had placed them in that order.

As daylight strengthened Smoke caught sight of a sled ahead, and in half an hour his own lead dog was leaping at its tail. Not until the man turned his head to exchange greetings did Smoke recognize him as Arizona Bill. Von Schroeder had evidently passed him. The trail, hard packed, ran too narrowly through the soft snow, and for another half hour Smoke was forced to stay in the rear. Then they topped an ice jam and struck a smooth stretch below, where were a number of relay camps and where the snow was packed widely. On his knees, swinging his whip and yelling, Smoke drew abreast of Arizona Bill, then pulled ahead.

Bill dropped behind very slowly, though when the last relay station was in sight he was fully half a mile in the rear. Ahead, bunched together, Smoke could see Big Olaf and Von Schroeder. Again Smoke arose to his knees, and he lifted his jaded dogs into a burst of speed such as a man only can who has the proper instinct for dog driving. He drew up close to the tail of Von Schroeder's sled, and in this order the three sleds dashed out on the smooth going below a jam, where many men and many dogs waited. Dawson was fifteen miles away.

Von Schroeder, with his ten mile relays, had changed five miles back and would change five miles ahead. So he held on, keeping his dogs at full leap. Big Olaf and Smoke made flying changes, and their fresh teams immediately regained what had been lost to the baron. Big Olaf led past, and Smoke followed into the narrow trail beyond.

Of Von Schroeder, now behind, he had no fear, but ahead was the greatest dog driver in the country. To pass him seemed impossible. Again and again, many times, Smoke forced his leader to the other's sled tail, and each time Big Olaf let out another link and drew away. Smoke hung on grimly. The race was not lost until one or the other won, and in fifteen miles many things could happen.

Three miles from Dawson something did happen. To Smoke's surprise Big Olaf rose up and with oaths and leather proceeded to fetch out the last ounce of effort in his animals. It was a spurt that should have been reserved for the last hundred yards instead of being begun three miles from the finish. Sheer dog killing that it was, Smoke followed.

They topped a small jam and struck the smooth going below. A sled shot out from the side and drew in toward him, and Smoke understood Big Olaf's terrific spurt. He had tried to gain a lead for the change. This fresh team that waited to jerk him down the home stretch had been a private surprise of his.

Smoke strove desperately to pass during the exchange of sleds. With urging and pouring of leather he went to the side and on until his lead dog was jumping abreast of Big Olaf's wheeler. On the other side, abreast, was the relay sled. At the speed they were going Big Olaf did not dare try the flying leap. If he missed and fell off Smoke would be in the lead, and the race would be lost.

For half a mile the three sleds tore and bounced along side by side. The smooth stretch was nearing its end when Big Olaf took the chance. As the flying sleds swerved toward each other he leaped, and the instant he struck he was on his knees, with whip and voice spurting the fresh team. The smooth stretch pinched out into the narrow trail, and he jumped his dogs ahead and into it with a lead of barely a yard.

A man was not beaten until he was beaten, was Smoke's conclusion, and, drive no matter how, Big Olaf failed to shake him off. No team Smoke had driven that night could have stood such a killing pace and kept up with fresh dogs—no team save this one. Nevertheless the pace was killing it, and as they began to round the bluff at Klondike City he could feel the pitch of strength going out of his animals. Almost imperceptibly they lagged, and foot by foot Big Olaf drew away until he led by a score of yards.

A great cheer went up from the population of Klondike City assembled on the ice. Here the Klondike entered the Yukon, and half a mile away, across the Klondike, on the north bank, stood Dawson. An outburst of madder cheering arose, and Smoke caught a glimpse of a sled shooting out to him. He recognized the splendid animals that drew it. They were Joy Gastell's, and Joy Gastell drove them. Mittens had been discarded, and with bare hands she clung to whip and sled.

"Jump!" she cried as her leader snarled at Smoke's.

Smoke struck the sled behind her. It rocked violently from the impact of his body, but she was full up on her knees and swinging the whip.

"Hi! You! Mush on! Chook! Chook!" she was crying, and the dogs whined and yelped in eagerness of desire and effort to overtake Big Olaf.

And then as the lead dog caught the tail of Big Olaf's sled and yard by yard drew up abreast the great crowd on the Dawson bank went mad.

"When you're in the lead I'm going to drop off!" Joy cried out over her shoulder. "And watch out for the dip curve halfway up the bank," she warned.

Dog by dog, separated by half a dozen feet, the two teams were running abreast. Big Olaf, with whip and voice, held his own for a minute. Then slowly, an inch at a time, Joy's leader began to forge past.

"Get ready!" she cried to Smoke. "I'm going to leave you in a minute. Get the whip."

And as he shifted his hand to clutch the whip they heard Big Olaf roar a warning, but too late. His lead dog, incensed at being passed, swerved in to the attack. His fangs struck Joy's leader on the flank. The rival teams flew at one another's throats. The sleds overran the fighting brutes and capsized. Smoke struggled to his feet and tried to lift Joy up. But she thrust him from her, crying:

"Go!"

On foot, already fifty feet in advance, was Big Olaf, still intent on finishing the race. Smoke obeyed, and when the two men reached the foot of the Dawson bank he was at the other's heels. But up the bank Big Olaf lifted his body hugely, regaining a dozen feet.

Five blocks down the main street was the gold recorder's office. Not so easily this time did Smoke gain to his giant rival, and when he did he was unable to pass. Side by side they ran along the narrow aisle between the solid walls of cheering men. Now one, now the other, with great convulsive jerks, gained an inch or so, only to lose it immediately after.

If the pace had been a killing one for their dogs, the one they now set themselves was no less so. But they were racing for $1,000,000 and the greatest honor in the Yukon country.

Smoke felt himself involuntarily lag, and Big Olaf sprang a full stride in the lead. To Smoke it seemed that his heart would burst, while he had lost all consciousness of his legs. He knew they were flying under him, but he did not know how he continued to make them fly, nor how he put even greater pressure of will upon them and compelled them again to carry him to his giant competitor's side.

The open door of the recorder's office appeared ahead of them. Both men made a final, futile spurt. Neither could draw away from the other, and side by side they hit the doorway, collided violently, and fell headlong on the office floor.

They sat up, but were too exhausted to rise. Big Olaf, the sweat pouring from him, breathing with tremendous, painful gasps, pawed the air and vainly tried to speak. Then he reached out his hand with unmistakable meaning: Smoke extended his, and they shook.

"It's a dead heat," Smoke could hear the recorder saying, but it was as if in a dream. "And all I can say is that you both win. You'll have to divide the claim between you. You're partners."

Big Olaf nodded his head with great emphasis and spluttered. At last he got it out.

"You d——n chekako," was what he said, but in the saying of it was admiration; "I don't know how you done it, but you did!"

Smoke and Big Olaf essayed to rise, and each helped the other to his feet. Smoke found his legs weak under him and staggered drunkenly. Big Olaf tottered toward him.

"I'm sorry my dogs jumped yours."

"It couldn't be helped," Smoke panted back. "I heard you yell."

"Say," Big Olaf went on, with shining eyes, "that girl—one d——d fine girl, eh?"

"One d——d fine girl!" Smoke agreed.

FOR LITTLE FOLKS
BY ALICE CRIEW GALL

Frederick Mouse
(Who Was Greedy and Didn't Mind.)

I'll tell you a story of Frederick Mouse,
If you'll cuddle right down and be good;
He lived at the top of a very old house
And ate just whatever he could.

He had little black eyes and a love of a tail
And his whiskers, oh, my, they were sweet;
But his parents declared that it made them turn pale
At the quantity Frederick could eat.

He'd nibble on paper, he'd nibble on cheese;
He'd gobble his meals, and before
His father and mother were through he'd say, "Please,
I wish you would give me some more."

His parents said: "Frederick, we really are grieved
At the way you eat paper and such;
If we hadn't seen we would not have believed
That a little mouse could eat so much."

But Frederick, he paid no attention at all
To the things that his kind parents said.
He flirted his whiskers and ran down the hall
In search of some meat or some bread.

At the end of the hall sat a small wooden trap
That some Human Being had brought;
With a small piece of cheese and a wire that went "S-."
Whenever a mousie was caught.

Now Frederick he wanted that cheese, so he thought:
"My parents will not care at all
If I just take a bite," which he did, and was caught
Before he could cry out or call.

Now I don't want to have a sad end to this tale
(A tail of a mouse, so to speak),
So I'll tell you, his parents rushed up very pale
And his life was saved by a S-q-u-e-a-k!

The moral of this little tale I'll hasten to unfold:
You never must be greedy and must mind what you are told.

Adventures in Matrimony
BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

"Well, Carl, if you insist on performing in melodrama you must get another leading lady. I can't star in that sort of a play." Clara Farley was disposed to tease the gloomy-looking young man who was sitting by her on the porch.

"Oh, I know it's nothing to you," he said bitterly. "Here I've driven ten miles to spend the evening with you and you have an engagement with Dan Carrothers. Dan, of all people!"

"Dan is a nice boy, and as I knew nothing of your plans I cannot now be expected to arrange mine to suit. If you think that because you have to be away I am to put on mourning or take the veil you are mightily mistaken. Understand, young man, I have promised you nothing but an answer one year from last New Year's. You have no strings to me," and Clara rose to go into the house.

"Oh, is that the way you feel about it," he blazed. "Perhaps you have promised this Dan something."

"I surely have: My company for this evening," she replied, her head in the air, "and my advice to you as a friend and well-wisher is to go into seclusion until your temper is improved." And she swept into the house.

Carl pulled his hat over his eyes and strode down the walk and up the street. He did not want to go home.

"Why not call on Ethel Mayfield?" he thought. "There is no use nursing my misery. It will live without coddling." He took a few turns up and down the park to get his company face on.

"Well, my evening went very well," he reflected as he spun over the road at eleven o'clock, "and I have an engagement with Edith for a week from Saturday. She knows Clara, and she is not the kind of girl who 'repeats nothing but the multiplication table,'" and he smiled grimly.

He continued to pay attention to Edith and bow with profound politeness to Clara all that fall.

About Christmas his company told him that it wished to send him to South America in the spring on business that would require a two years' absence. This he also confided to Ethel, and then waited.

On New Year's eve he visited Eaton. Just a year ago he had asked Clara to be his wife, and she had promised to give him his answer on this evening. Should he go to see her? She cared nothing for him, of that he was sure. He looked up to see her coming down the street. She stopped and held out her hand, saying brightly: "I hear you are to leave us. Congratulations are in order, I suppose. Drop in and say goodby before you go."

"I shall be glad to," he replied. "I am in town this evening. Have you an engagement?"

"Yes, with you," she answered, smiling. "The date was made a year ago."

His heart gave a great bound. "You mean——" he began.

"You will get your answer tonight," and she dropped her eyes while a lovely color flooded her cheeks.

NEW TEXAS GOVERNOR.

Austin, Tex., Jan. 19—Governor Oscar B. Colquitt, of Texas, who recently flayed the administration of President Roosevelt, retires from office today. He is succeeded by Governor James E. Ferguson. Governor Colquitt is a candidate to succeed Senator Culberson, whose term expires March 3, 1917.

NEWS AND VIEWS
Conducted by THE W. C. T. U.

When the Senate of the United States appeared about to place itself on record as favoring prohibition last week, it was decided to postpone the vote until the next day, and one of the most illuminating debates upon the prohibition question that has ever taken place came to an end.

The discussion was again upon the proposal to add as a rider to the District of Columbia appropriation bill an amendment offered by Senator Shepard, of Texas, prohibiting the sale of intoxicants in the District of Columbia.

When the Senate adjourned it seemed that a large majority of the body was opposed to the liquor traffic. This does not mean that the amendment will be adopted, because it is offered under a proposition to suspend the rules, and the Senate has decided that a two-thirds vote is necessary to effect such suspension.

Only two Senators, Stone, of Missouri, and Martine, of New Jersey, opposed the amendment in the discussion.

Of the two, Martine was the more effective. He made no pretense of any higher purpose than to preserve to himself and all other persons the right to get drunk if they wish to. He made his appeal upon the ground of personal liberty.

Senator Stone, chairman of the foreign relations committee, who insists that the Senate should ratify the indefensible Colombian treaty, the Senator who is demanding the passage of the President's ship purchase bill, and is regarded as the spokesman of the administration upon all occasions, presented the extraordinary plea that the saloon is productive of good and that an effort to abolish it makes for disorder, immorality and human suffering.

To persons throughout the United States who want to view the mental processes of this administration leader in the Senate, and who wish to judge his sincerity, his intellectuality and his regard for public welfare, his speech is commended as a most illuminating effort.

The striking speech of the day was delivered by Senator Williams, of Mississippi. It was made striking because the Senator gave his own personal testimony respecting the evil effects of liquor, both upon individuals and upon State and communities.

He frankly admitted that he had fought prohibition in his own State and that he had believed all the arguments advanced in behalf of the liquor cause, but he had seen the results of prohibition in Mississippi and he had been compelled to acknowledge that he was wrong in the position he had taken.

Prohibition in Mississippi had not produced a millennium, it had not proved a panacea for all evils, but it had produced a great deal of good, he said.

Discussing the effect of liquor upon the individual, he told the Senate frankly that he spoke as one who has always used liquor. His conclusion was that liquor had never done him any good and that it had never done any one else any good.

On the other hand, he declared the evidence was overwhelming that it does most people a great deal of harm.

Compared with the harm that can be traced to intoxicants, the right of the man who thinks it does him no harm, to continue it was hardly worthy of consideration. Further than this, he said, no man could be absolutely sure that liquor does him no harm, and even if he could be sure that it had done him no harm to the present time, he could not be sure it would not do him harm in the immediate future.

Martine had stirred up considerable feeling by declaring that the law in the prohibition States had proved a failure. The Senators insisted upon proving by their own testimony that this statement was untrue.

Martine declared the Creator must have planned that man should use alcohol when he made all the most nutritious fruits and grains rich in that "stimulant." He read statistics which, he said, showed that crime, lunacy and other evils were more prevalent in Kansas, a State-wide prohibition commonwealth, than in Nebraska, where local option prevailed. This drew a vigorous reply from Senator Bristow.

"It is to be regretted that any State should have a Senator who would stand on this floor and defend this hated traffic," said the Kansas Senator. "In my State of Kansas there are young women and young men who have grown up without having seen a saloon. It is a disgrace to the nation that when they come to visit their capital these sources of pestilence to society should be open to them to enter."

Senator Smith, of Georgia, admitted that there have been many violations of the law in Georgia, but these had not prevented splendid results. He declared that in the city of Atlanta prohibition had checked the waste of human energy, it had diminished human suffering, added increased comforts to the homes and had increased the receipts of all legitimate business enterprises.

Senator Stone, in his remarkable defense of the liquor traffic, denied that he was speaking for the saloon, but he insisted upon defending himself against the charge of evil motive, which he knew would be made against him.

PHONE INDEPENDENTS CONVENE

Mineapolis, Minn., Jan. 19—One of the biggest conventions ever held by the independent telephone interests of America opened here today. Some 500 representatives of independent lines were present, from all parts of the country. Reports of the Independent Telephone Association of America officials indicated a prosperous condition and constant growth of their lines. The attitude of the government toward the eventual purchase of the telephone and telegraph lines for incorporation with the Postoffice Department was one of the principal points of discussion.

Household Hints

THINGS WORTH KNOWING

An article which is very handy is a pin cushion with needles threaded with different colored thread; saves time when in a hurry if you rip or tear a glove or anything just when your are ready to go out. The little oblong cushions that hang up are best; can purchase at 5c and 10c stores.

The ouside of milk bottles, especially the top which includes the cap, should be washed very thoroughly before using the cream or milk.

The bottles are always carried by the top and the milkman's hands are none to clean. He handles the harness and the horse, and often blows his nose without a handkerchief. If he wears gloves they have an accumulation of dirt and germs on them.

Supposing it were possible for the milkman to keep himself scrupulously clean, the milk bottles get full of dust and germs that are always flying in the air, as the bottles are being hauled about the city.

When you get the bottle that has been left, don't you, too, grab it by the top? Just carry it to the sink and hold it under the hot water faucet and wash it off thoroughly before using the milk or putting the bottle into the refrigerator. If the cap is in tight, as it should be, no water gets into the milk. Either let it drain or wipe it dry with a clean cloth. Don't pick up a dirty dishrag, as some people do, and wipe off the clean water, thereby putting germs and filth back on the bottle.

It is really surprising to see how many intelligent and educated people neglect this very important task of washing off milk bottle before using the milk. Are you, reader, taking this precaution to safeguard your health and the health of those under your care?

Powdered Gelatin will answer the purpose as well as eggs.

FOR THE HOME SEAMSTRESS

When sewing, instead of making "French seam," use your foot-hemmer; saves time and thread, as you only sew the seam once in this way, and it is much better.

After using sewing machine, put a piece of cotton cloth under the foot; keeps oil from dropping into shuttle.

To sew on buttons, place buttonhole directly over place where you want button, then push needle down through opening of buttonhole from right side of goods (instead of up from under side of goods). This leaves knot in thread between button and the goods. After button is sewed on, wind thread several times around stitches between button and goods; also fasten thread with needle in same place where the thread was wound, between button and goods. By so doing, you have a neat finish on under side of goods holding buttons, also a roomy place for buttonhole side when garment is buttoned. It isn't advisable to sew buttons so closely to the goods as to leave no room for buttonhole side.

THE TABLE

Veal and Oyster Patties—Take one pint oysters and one pound veal; run through food grinder, add one egg, one-half cup bread or cracker crumbs, salt and pepper; form into patties. Dip in cracker crumbs, fry in hot skillet.

Ham Pats—Moisten a pint of bread crumbs with boiling water, season with sage and salt. Add one 5-cent can potted ham, mix well together, form into pats and fry.

Veal Cutlets—Cut veal steak into small pieces two inches square; beat an egg light and add about the same quantity of milk. Prepare a cup of cracker crumbs. Fry in deep fat. Serve with green peas.

Stuffing for Fowls—One and one-half slices stale bread crumbs, one-half teaspoon sage, one onion size of egg, butter and lard size of egg, pepper and salt to suit taste. Mix thoroughly.

Orange Pancakes—Three eggs, three ounces flour, grated rind of one orange, pinch of salt, enough milk to make a thick, smooth batter. Mix with flour and salt to a paste with some of the milk, add eggs and beat till smooth, then add grated rind of the orange and remainder of milk. Fry in clarified beef fat.

SALTS FINE FOR ACHING KIDNEYS
We Eat too Much Meat Which Clogs Kidneys, Then the Back Hurts.

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally, else we have backache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness and all sorts of bladder disorders.

You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean, and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good drug store here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is harmless to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity. It also neutralizes the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is harmless; inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everybody should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean, thus avoiding serious complications.

A well-known local druggist says he sells lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble.

TO TRY ARCHITECT FOR OCEAN MURDER

Postponed Trial of George B. Perkins Set for Today at Charleston.

Charleston, S. C., Jan. 19.—The postponed trial of George Batchelor Perkins, wealthy Boston architect, for the murder of F. W. R. Hinman, manager of a Florida newspaper, is set for today in the United States District Court. It is believed by the Boston friends of Perkins that his defense will be insanity. When Perkins was arraigned shortly after the murder, his condition was such that Judge Smith postponed the trial.

Perkins is also under indictment for assault and battery with intent to kill Captain A. D. Ingram, of the steamship Mohawk, and B. H. Wright, of Utica, N. Y., a fellow-passenger.

The prominence of Perkins and his family in Boston added to the sensation when, on arrival of the Mohawk here on November 13th, Perkins was taken in irons from the ship, on which he had gone amuck two days previously. Hinman, who was a passenger, was instantly killed, and Wright and Captain Inman were seriously wounded. Perkins is one of Boston's wealthiest architects, and widely known as a designer of the ceilings in the Congressional library in Washington and the New York public library.

Perkins, who boarded the Mohawk in New York, was turned over to the federal authorities immediately on the arrival of the Mohawk at Charleston, and was arraigned for murder. Evidence was introduced at that time to show that Perkins was not mentally responsible for his acts.

The murder was one of the most blood-curdling acts in the annals of the coastwise ships. According to those who were aboard the Mohawk, Perkins appeared like a madman, clad in his pajamas, in the companionway where Hinman and his wife, with Captain Ingram, and Wright were talking. The intruder was a picture of terror, and the four instinctively shrank from him. His eyes bulged with frenzy, his mouth was twitching convulsively, and he was swinging his arms wildly. Captain Ingram caught Perkins by the arm, and told him he must not leave his stateroom in pajamas.

The enraged man then showed a revolver, and began shooting. The first two bullets took effect on Hinman. They entered his abdomen and resulted in his death. Perkins turned his gun on Wright and felled him. Another bullet sped toward Mrs. Hinman, who was kneeling beside her husband, but it went wild. The fifth shot was for Captain Inman, and it took effect. Meantime the firing had aroused the passengers and crew, and a dozen men rushed on Perkins, who held the gun to his head. He pulled the trigger, but the chambers were empty, and he was taken below and ironed.

Medical aid was summoned by wireless, and the U. S. Torpedo Boat Destroyer Flusher rushed to meet the Mohawk. Aid arrived too late to save Hinman. On arrival of the vessel here Captain Ingram and Wright were rushed to the hospital.

N. K. Wentworth, who occupied a stateroom with Perkins, testified that Perkins acted strangely soon after boarding the Mohawk, and that he had seen him take some drug. Perkins said it was for a headache, and Wentworth thought nothing of it until after the shooting.

The shooting created a sensation in Boston, where Perkins is prominent. No reason could be assigned for his rash act except that he had gone insane, or had been drugged. He left Boston to go to Florida on a fishing trip, and his relatives noticed nothing unusual about him, they say.

Perkins is a graduate of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and early gained fame as a designer of unusual merit. His works are admired by thousands. He spent much of his time in travel. Just before his fatal trip on the Mohawk he returned from Europe, where he travelled with his sister and her husband. Perkins is forty-four years old and unmarried.

DISTRICT SUNDAY SCHOOL ASSOCIATION MEETS HERE

OBSERVE FORTY-THIRD WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Whitford, of Lenox avenue, celebrated the forty-third anniversary of their wedding on Saturday, and in the evening a number of their relatives and friends gave them a surprise party. The affair was arranged by George M. Clarke. The guests enjoyed a program of vocal and instrumental music and refreshments were served later.

Mr. and Mrs. Whitford were married in the Seventh-Day Baptist church, Leonardsville, N. Y., by the Rev. L. C. Rogers. Mrs. Whitford was before her marriage Miss Ella Edwards, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Edwards. The couple lived at Leonardsville about thirty years and then spent ten years at Westerly, R. I., and two years ago came to this city, where Mr. Whitford has been manager for the grocery at West Second street and Madison avenue, conducted by a stock company.

SAGE TEA KEEPS YOUR HAIR DARK

When Mixed With Sulphur It Brings Back Its Lustre and Abundance.

Gray hair, however handsome, denotes advancing age. We all know the advantages of a youthful appearance. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray and looks dry, wispy and scraggly, just a few applications of Sage Tea and Sulphur enhances its apppearance a hundred-fold.

Don't stay gray! Look young! Either prepare the tonic at home or get from any drug store a 50 cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy." Thousands of folks recommend this ready-to-use preparation, because it darkens the hair beautifully and removes dandruff, stops scalp itching and falling hair; besides, no one can possibly tell, as it darkens so naturally and evenly. You moisten a sponge or soft brush with it, drawing this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, its natural color is restored and it becomes thick, glossy and lustrous, and you appear years younger.—Adv.

of providing for the future comfort of one's family is to make a will, appointing an executor who will be competent to carry out its provisions.

The Plainfield Trust Company can fulfill this requirement. Unlike an individual executor, it is not subject to death or sickness; it will not err through lack of experience. Come in and talk with our Officers about this matter. They have a proposition which may interest you.

STRANGE AS IT MAY SEEM

One of the most common contradictions in the average man is to thoughtfully provide an estate to sustain his family after he is gone, and then leave the estate unprotected, in the hands of inexperienced heirs or under the control of a friend who may not be equipped to handle or invest the property.

And even if an individual is competent to act as executor—trustee, he cannot be depended on to serve. He may not survive you; he may become disabled or move away; he may want to travel and not be tied down. No such uncertainties attend the appointment of this responsible Company. Its service is efficient and unfailing.

LODGE VIGOROUS BILL OBJECTION

Burnett Literacy Test Discussed by Speakers at Big Meeting in Y. M. C. A.

OPPOSITION DEVELOPES

Percy Brown's Stand in Favor of Bill Aroused a Volley of Hisses and Jeers—Resolutions to Be Sent to President.

An audience, inspired by a patriotic interest in a question of national magnitude, was present in the Y. M. C. A. auditorium, last night, when the Burnett immigration bill was brought up for discussion at a mass meeting. A cosmopolitan assemblage, representative of every political platform, religious denomination and nationality listened with interest to a group of finished speakers who gave eloquent, intelligent and instructive views on a topic that has aroused nation-wide discussion.

The essence of protestation was a predominant factor in the meeting until the last moment when a sudden wave of individual championship for the Burnett law asserted itself as an exciting finale. Following the presentation of a resolution agvocating a decided stand against the endorsement of the bill by President Wilson, objection to the move was entered by Percy Brown, of this city, president of the Union County Federation of Patriotic Societies. In a short argument against certain phases of protest introduced by foregoing speakers, Mr. Brown sought to divide the noticeably one-sided opinion on the topic. In his speech he suggested that every foreigner entering this country be forced by law to educate his children in the public schools. This point was the signal for an outburst of hisses and laudable jeering from the remainder of the gathering and he took his seat amidst a rumbling of angered voices. When a vote on the subject was taken Mr. Brown was one of those who stood out against the endorsement of Mr. Claybrook's resolution to petition the President to veto the measure and was greeted with further hissing.

WILSON MEMORIAL CHAPEL ANNIVERSARY

Watchung's Only Worship House in Existence a Quarter of a Century.

The Mary E. Wilson Memorial chapel, Watchung's only house of worship, will be twenty-five years old on February 22 next and in celebration of the event an appropriate silver anniversary program is being arranged. A committee composed of Mrs. William Demler, William H. Rogers, John Mobus and Ephriam S. Ackor has been appointed to arrange the details and it has already proceeded with a tentative program, worthy of the occasion. The Plainfield clergy and other local people will assist in making the observance a memorable one.

The Wilson chapel was erected through the generosity of the late Colonel John F. Wilson, who gave $5,000 of the $6,500 required to build it. The chapel was dedicated to the memory of Colonel Wilson's wife, Mary E. Wilson, and a clear-toned bronze bell weighing 450 pounds, was cast as an evidence of the fact. It hangs in the belfry of the structure, its outer side bearing a suitable inscription. The opening service took place on Washington's Birthday night, 1889, the edifice being dedicated to non-sectarian worship. Sunday-school sessions alone were held at first, but now there are regular church services with a congregational membership of eighty. The church attendance, however, averages more than 100. E. L. Bonny, of the borough, was the first superintendent. He was untiring in his work and no small amount of credit is due him for the prosperous growth the chapel has enjoyed. His mantle now rests upon the shoulders of Ephriam S. Ackor, who continues the energetic leadership displayed by his predecessor.

When the dedication took place a quarter of a century ago, twelve Plainfield clergymen were present. Of these, only two are now in the city, Rev. C. L. Goodrich, and Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck. The others have either died or removed to other places. Mr. Goodrich and Mr. Schenck are to be invited to participate in the coming observance and also as many of those who took part in the initial gathering as can be secured.

LOCAL SOLDIER DIES AT SCHOFIELD FORT

Disease Contracted in U. S. Army Service Proves Fatal.

The War Department at Washington has just notified Mrs. Sarah Dickerson, of West Fourth street, that her son, Stonewall J. Coles, died December 21 last at Schofield Barracks, Hawaii, of toxemia, contracted in the service.

Coles joined the army November last at Fort Slocum, N. Y., and was assigned to Company C, Twenty-fifth Infantry. He was born in Chatham, Va., and had resided in Plainfield eighteen years. He was a member of Stone Square Lodge, No. 38, F. and A. M., of this city.

Coles had long cherished the ambition to become a soldier in the regular army, and at the early age of fourteen he applied to the recruiting officers for enlistment.

The remains will reach Plainfield during the week. The deceased is survived by a mother, two sisters and other relatives. Funeral services will be held at Mt. Olive Baptist church, Sunday afternoon, January 24, at 3 o'clock. Burial will be in Hillside cemetery.

RESIGNS AS CLERK OF EDUCATION BOARD

H. R. Conger Will Be Succeeded by Benjamin W. Evans on July 1.

The final meeting of the present Board of Education was held at the High School building last night, at which, in addition to the usual routine business, a resolution was passed requesting the Common Council to place at the disposal of the School Board, the money appropriated by the Board of School Estimate for the Evergreen Avenue School. With the contracts signed for the building and work about to start, prospects for the early completion of the school are bright. John Lowry, the general contractor, is already on the job, and expects to be well started by the first of next week.

The resignation of H. R. Conger as clerk was received, to take effect at the pleasure of the Board. After considering this resignation, the Board accepted the same to take effect July 1, 1915, and has appointed B. W. Evans as clerk to succeed Mr. Conger, his appointment to date from the first day of July. The first meeting of the new Board will be held on February 1.

FEAR OUTBREAK FROM ENRAGED FOREIGNERS

Feeling Runs High Among Strike Breakers at Roosevelt Following Attack.

Roosevelt, Jan. 20.—One man was shot to death and at least fifty fell, some with their legs almost shot away, when a band of supposed hired gunmen from New York swooped down on a group of 400 strikers at the Williams & Clark plant here yesterday morning. The attack was made at the signal of a revolver shot fired by a tall, slim man and it is thought that not a single one of the group attacked was armed. A dozen or more are in an Elizabeth hospital in a serious condition.

Futher violence is feared today and every attempt is being made by the police to restrain the enraged foreigners from going on a rampage. Feeling runs high throughout the town and a fresh cause of disturbance came last night when two lighters bearing some 300 strikebearers tied up the Liebig Manufacturing Company's plant. Three powerful searchlights were kept blazing all of last night, one on a patch of woods a few hundred yards from the factory, and from which it is feared an attack will be made. An appeal will probably be made to Governor Fielder for State troops. It is said that the shooting was unprovoked and had evidently been carefully planned. Although no arrests have been made as yet, Prosecutor Florence, of Middlesex county, is making an investigation with a view to placing the blame.

ALL DAY SEWING MEETING.

Mrs. Corra Ryre, of 9 Codington avenue, the borough, will entertain the Young Women's Mission Band, of Trinity Reformed church, at an all-day sewing meeting at her home, tomorrow.

ALL IN READINESS FOR CLUB BENEFIT

Big Motion Picture Treat in the Astor Theatre Opens Tomorrow Afternoon.

Arrangements have been completed for the benefit motion picture performance to be given in the Astor Theatre on West Front street, tomorrow afternoon and evening, the proceeds of which will be used to replenish the treasury of the Holy Cross football team and to again establish the organization on a solid financial rock. In the afternoon the performance will start at 2 o'clock and in the evening two shows will be given, one at 7:15 and the other at 9 o'clock.

One of the features of the occasion will be an exhibit of men's dress models, members of the football team being garbed in full dress regalia to act as ushers and money takers. Although athletes have the peculiar tendency to feel about as big as a dwarf centipede when draped out in glad rags, those who are acquainted with the local players in their natural state of existence maintain that they are in a class by themselves as dress suit wearers and the spotlight stuff bears no terrors for them. There will be an important dress rehearsal in the Doyle and McCormack studio tonight at 8 o'clock.

A six reel film of the Holy Cross-Wyoming football game played on Cricket Field last November will be the feature number on the program tomorrow, and other films follows: "The Mysterious Hand," a thrilling detective drama in three parts in "My Lady Raffles" series; "The Baseball Fans of Fanville," and the latest war pictures.

J. P. LAIRE DIES, AGED 62 YEARS

Well Known Citizen Succumbs to Illness at Muhlenberg Hospital.

John P. Laire, aged 62 years, one of the best known citizens of Plainfield and one of its oldest merchants, died at Muhlenberg Hospital last night following an operation for complications. He was taken ill two weeks ago at his home on Fairview avenue, the borough, and a few days later was removed to the hospital for treatment. He rallied from the operation and his general condition was reported good. Other complications developed which caused his death.

Mr. Laire was born at Annandale, Hunterdon county, where he spent his early life and for a time was engaged in traveling for a hardware house. He removed to this city about thirty-five years ago at which time he purchased the hardware business at Park avenue and West Front street, conducted for many years by Alfred Berry. He continued this business until about fifteen years ago when he formed a partnedship with H. E. Gayle and since then it has been known as the Gayle Hardware Company. During his residence in Plainfield Mr. Laire held the respect and esteem of his fellow citizens. He was a devout Christian and for many years an active member and elder of Trinity Reformed church. He had a genial disposition and had a faculty for making friends. He was also a member of Jerusalem Lodge, No. 26, F. & A. M., of this city.

There survives one daughter, Mrs. C. S. MacIlroy, with whom he lived on Fairview avenue, the borough; a brother, W. R. Laire, of Belvidere, and a sister, Mrs. G. L. Smith, of Annandale. The funeral will be held Friday afternoon at 12:30 o'clock at the late home. Rev. J. Y. Broek, of Trinity Reformed church, will officiate, assisted by Rev. Dr. Philip B. Strong, of the First Baptist church. The burial will be in Riverside cemetery, Clinton.

WILL OF DAVID W. KING IS OFFERED FOR PROBATE

Somerville, Jan. 20—City Judge W. G. DeMeza, of Plainfield, today, offered for probate in the surrogate's office the will of David W. King, who died at him home on Craig place, North Plainfield, about three weeks ago. Mrs. Amanda King, wife of the deceased, is made the sole legatee and executrix.

While the value of the estate has not been made public it is known to consist chiefly of property estimated to be worth between $8,000 and $10,000.

W. A. CODDINGTON ANSWERS CHARGE

Makes Complete Denial of Alleged Promises to Wed Vera M. DeVine.

FOUR DEFENSES SET UP

It is Claimed That Plaintiff Was Married at the Time the Promises Were Alleged to Have Been Made and That She is not Divorced.

In the answer which was filed yesterday afternoon in the United States District Court at Newark by former Judge William A. Coddington to the suit brought against him by Vera Meyer De Vine for alleged breach of promise of marriage a complete denial of the alleged promises is made. There are four defenses set up in the answer, any one of which would appear to be sufficient to defeat the claim.

In the first defense a full and unequivocal denial is made of the claims put up by the plaintiff in her complaint. In addition to this denial three other defenses which, in the opinion of those who have seen the answer, exonerate him completely.

The answer shows in the second defense interposed that the plaintiff was a married woman at the time the promises were alleged to have been made, and that she still is a married woman and has not been divorced. The plaintiff in her complaint alleged that she was single. The facts of the plaintiff's marriage are set forth, from which it appears that she was married, under her maiden name of M. Veronica Meyer, on March 30, 1902, to one Peter De Vine at St. Patrick's Cathedral, Fifth avenue, New York city, by Rev. Thomas F. Murphy. The present residence of the plaintiff's husband is shown to be at Long Beach, New York, where he has been living for the past six months, prior to which time he had, since his marriage to the plaintiff, been living in New York city.

It is further shown in the answer under the third defense interposed that the defendant was a married man at the time the first and second promises were alleged to have been made, and that he was so known to be by the plaintiff. The time of the first promises is alleged in the complaint generally as in September, 1911, but the plaintiff failed to specify the day or the time of the month; and the time of the second promise is alleged in the complaint generally as in February, 1912, also without giving the day or the time of the month. The third promise is alleged in the complaint generally as having been made in December, 1912, also without setting forth any specific day or time of the month. The answer shows that following the death of the defendant's first wife on November 7, 1912, he was for a long time afterward and covering the period when the third promise is alleged to have been made confined to his bed and his life despaired of. It is well known here that at that time Judge Coddington was for many weeks under the constant care of physicians and nurses.

The answer further sets forth under the fourth defense interposed a release under seal made and executed on May 2, 1914, by the plaintiff, under the name of Vera M. Meyer, the name she then used, and delivered to the defendant for a valuable consideration. This release is set forth in detail in the answer.

The fact that the plaintiff was a married woman at the time the promises were alleged to have been made disposes of the case, in the minds of those who have seen the answer. They also point out that Judge Coddington was also married and ill at the time, and they say that these facts, independently of his emphatic denial, is sufficient refutation of the claims made. Harrison P. Lindabury, of Newark, and Assemblyman William N. Runyon, of this city, represent Mr. Coddington.

ANNOUNCE FIRST CONCERT.

The Recreation Committee announces the first concert to be given by the Plainfield Symphony Orchestra, which will be held in the Plainfield High School auditorium, Monday night, February 8. The Grace church choir, under the direction of S. Frederick Smith, will assist. There will be a small charge of admission to cover the expenses of the affair. All seats will be reserved and can be exchanged at Armstrong's drug store.

HOUR OF PRAYER.

A meeting of the Federation of Women's Missionary Societies will be held for an hour of prayer for foreign missions in the parish house of the Church of Holy Cross, on Washington avenue, tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock.

ANNOUNCE TERMS OF THE SETTLEMENT

Henry V. A. Parsell Wins a Victory in Suit to Recover Securities.

Trenton, Jan. 20—An order of discontinuance was entered here today as the result of a settlement out of court of the suit of Henry V. A. Parsell, of Plainfield, against Col. J. M. Hardy, also of Plainfield, involving the ownership of securities valued at $300,000, which are being held by The Plainfield Trust Company as custodians under a joint tenancy between the late Mrs. Hanah H. Hardy and her husband, John M. Hardy. Mrs. Hardy died on December 7, 1913, prior to which time the couple lived apart for a year or more.

Under the agreement each was to receive half the dividends which is said to have continued until the time of Mrs. Hardy's death, when the latter willed her interests to her son, Mr. Parsell. Most of the securities came to Mrs. Hardy through her brother, Morris Peters.

According to the terms of the settlement, Mr. Parsell is to receive half of the securities outright and upon the death of Mr. Harvey he is to receive half of the remainder. Mr. Hardy is to receive the other half of the income for life and upon his death final disposition of one-quarter of his share, the other going to Mr. Parsell.

The settlement was effected after many hearings covering a period of nearly a year. Mr. Hardy was represented by Charles A. Reed and William A. Coddington and Alton B. Parker, while Ralph E. Lum was counsel for Mr. Parsell. The termination of the suit is a great victory for Mr. Parsell as he practically gets all that he sought through the suit.

SUDDEN DEATH OF ABRAHAM VAN CLEEF

Acute Attack of Heart Trouble Fatal to Well Known Citizen.

Abraham VanCleef, aged 76 years, a well known resident of this city for the past fifteen years, died suddenly at his home, 20 Elm place, last night, the cause being an acute attack of heart trouble. Previous to the attack Mr. VanCleef had been in good health and only a short time before passing away had visited his son, Peter M. VanCleef, of the coal firm of VanCleef & Hopewell, at the firm's office on South avenue.

Upon returning home he told his wife that he was going to feed the chickens. He had just stepped out of the back door when he was stricken and died before his wife could render any assistance.

Mr. VanCleef was born near Somerville and lived in that vicinity up to the time he came to Plainfield about fifteen years ago. He was engaged in farming and other pursuits, but retired a number of years ago. He was a member of Trinity Reformed church of which he was a regular attendant.

There survives a wife, who was Miss Laura Brokaw, of this city; two daughters, Mrs. Adaline Vannaman and Mrs. Gertrude Rink, and two sons, Peter M. VanCleef, of this city, and Isaac A. VanCleef, of Roselle. The funeral will be held at the late home Friday morning at 10:45 o'clock. Rev. J. Y. Broek will officiate and the burial will be in Somerville.

PLANS ARE COMPLETE FOR DEDICATORY EXERCISES

Plans are practically completed for the dedicatory exercises for the new High School, which, as previously announced in the Daily Press, will be held in the auditorium on Monday, January 25.

If applications for tickets are any indication, even the large capacity of the new auditorium will be taxed. Admission will be by ticket only, and they may be obtained by application to either Lindsy Best, principal of the High School, or H. R. Conger, clerk of the Board.

No seats will be reserved, but will be held for the ticket holders until five minutes before the exercises begin, at which time those without tickets will be admitted to any seats remaining unfilled. For an hour before the exercises begin, visitors will be shown over the building by a corps of pupil guides.

SESAME CLUB.

The Sesame Club will meet at the home of Mrs. LeRoy H. Gates, 826 First place, tomorrow morning at 10:30 o'clock.

COLLECTS DAMAGES AFTER FOUR YEARS

Counsel for Marcus Hoyt and C. R. of N. J. Reach Settlement.

Litigation in a suit that has been before the New Jersey courts nearly four years was terminated yesterday when a settlement was reached between Robert Newton Crane of this city, counsel for Marcus Hoyt, and the legal department of the New Jersey Central. Mr. Hoyt, who is a local tailor, was one of the 200 persons injured in a $1,000,000 explosion at the Jersey City terminal February 1, 1911, and is also one of the ten individuals who managed to obtain remuneration for injuries sustained. He sued for $500, but the amount of settlement could not be ascertained this morning. Counsel for the plaintiff filed papers for damages soon after the accident occurred, thus enabling his client to keep within the statute of limitations which makes legal proceedings void after a lapse of two years from the time of the accident. It is probable that none of the others injured in the explosion will get compensation for resultant loss of time and suffering.

The happening in the Jersey City terminal will be well remembered by a number of Plainfielders who were injured and others who were in New York when the incident occurred. It was alleged at the time that the preliminary eruption took place on board a lighter owned by the Du-Pont Powder Company and the explosion shook the buildings in New York city as far up as the Singer building, shattering the glass in the windows of structures all over the lower section of Manhattan and in Bayonne and Jersey City. The force of the explosion was felt as far north in New York city as 125th street and even on Governor's Island people were thrown to their knees in the attitude of prayer, many thinking that the day of judgment had arrived.

Mr. Hoyt, who was aboard the "Somerville" ferryboat, had his wrist badly cut by glass and a large piece of flying glass sliced through the crown of a new derby hat he was wearing at the time. He was driven to the office of a physician in a taxi-cab.

Other Plainfielders hurt were: Hiram A. Woodruff, of Westervelt avenue, ear and face cut; George Wigginton, who conducted a news stand at the Central Livery stable, was sitting in a barber's chair at West and Liberty streets when the explosion occurred and jumped up so quickly that the razor inflicted a severe gash in his face; Mrs. Samuel Townsend, of North Plainfield, suffered from shock; Howard A. Satterfield, of East Second street, sustained several cuts; Mrs. Franklin L. Groff, of Prospect avenue, suffered from shock; E. A. Overton, of Rockview avenue, suffered a severe shock; Edmund Rushmore, of the borough, sustained slight cuts; John K. Large, of East Front street, Howard George, of Duer street, and John Beckman, of Fairview avenue, were also slightly hurt.

SEVEN KILLED IN GERMAN AIR RAID

King and Queen Had Left Sandringham Only a Few Hours Before the Attack.

NO DAMAGE TO RAIDERS

First Report That Zeppelin Was Brought Down is Denied—Dutch Naval Sloop Sunk by Mine—Australian Capital Shifted.

London, Jan. 20 (Central News Cable).—Seven persons dead and at least four injured is the total of the result of last night's air raid by the Germans airships over the east coast. Four were killed at Yarmouth, which was the first bombarded, and two at Kings Lynn, while another died this morning as a result of his injuries. Bombs were dropped at Yarmouth, Sandingham, Sheringham, Kings Lynn, Cromer, Dersingham and Beeston. There is some doubt as to whether the raid was by Zeppelins or aeroplanes.

The long-promised raid was carried out with a certain degree of success. Dispatches coming in hourly from towns in Norfolk, within 110 miles of London, which were visited by the aerial fleet, say in addition that a few were injured and much property damage done.

Many of the bombs were aimed at the royal country seat at Sandringham and the dowager queen Alexandra's cottage at Smettisham. Neither of the royal residences proper were hit, but outbuildings were. The raiders missed the possibility of harming either the king or queen by a margin of several hours only, as has been revealed by the announcement that the royal couple left Sandringham for Buckingham palace in the morning. Queen Alexandra was not at Smettisham when the bombs were dropped there.

The time of the raid, however, indicates that the Germans must have received advance information that King George and Queen Mary were at their country place yesterday. In fact, the whole performance is taken as an indication that Germany still has efficient secret sources of information in England. So far the only details of deaths have come from Kings Lynn and Yarmouth. In Kings Lynn a seventeen-year-old youth named Goat lost his life while in bed. His father, mother and baby brother were injured. The house was wrecked.

A man who was later identified as Samuel Smith, a shoemaker, was found dead outside of his shop in Yarmouth. A woman, said to have been the widow of a soldier recently killed at the front, was found dead in a Yarmouth street.

Three missiles fell close to the Kings Lynn station and wrecked the sheds in which the royal railroad coaches were housed. Damage also was inflicted on the hydraulic engine house at the docks.

The dense darkness and the slight mist, which prevented effective pursuit of or successful shooting of the raiders, also hindered them in their efforts to reach some of their apparent objectives.

DUNELLEN

All the Happenings of the Day In Plainfield's Hustling Suburb.

YEAR'S REPORTS FOR DUNELLEN'S BOARD

Many Suggestions Offered for Improvement During Year of 1915.

Prior to the monthly meeting of the Board of Trade, in Dunellen, last night, Joseph G. Walton, the new president, was presented with a gavel and marble slab by J. E. Dix, of Prospect avenue. After authorizing payment of bills aggregating $18, the annual reports of the various officers were received. The report of Mr. Fedderman, the retiring treasurer, showed a balance on hand of $11.45.

The report of Secretary Deering follows in part:

"The annual celebration of Independence Day was carried forward to excellent success and once again Dunellen assumed not only a prominent, but the leading part in the circle of our nearby municipalities in observing the anniversary of the nation's birth.

"I beg you to recall also, that in county affairs we have continued to be a working and active factor. At a time when many Boards of Trade have suffered a decline, we have been able to achieve still greater growth and interest in county civic affairs.

"We have been alby represented at various State gatherings during the year by our president and others and I think I make a conservative statement when I say that the Board of Trade, of Dunellen, is better known throughout the State than any similar body from any municipality having twice our estimated population.

"At this time as we look at the final movement to install a sanitary sewerage system and also a system of surface drainage we cannot but agree that those are further evidence of the usefulness of this body for both those important works had the inception in the agitation of this body.

"The splendid new Lincoln School on its desirable site was largely made possible by the keen sighted business policy of this organization.

"We have been ably represented at active members for several years, Frank Bennett, has not been with us now for over a year, having removed from the borough. We also miss the activity and good leadership of Gerome S. Dumont and the never failing labors of Thomas J. Hogan, Mr. Dumont having removed from the borough and Dr. Hogan being incapacitated on account of ill health.

"The splendid record of the past reminds us that there is a vast world of work for future years to see accomplished and it is to the interest of the borough of Dunellen that this organization continue to increase its membership and activity."

The Fourth of July finance committee reported total receipts, $558.-24; total disbursements, $468.29, and a balance of $89.95. The banquet financial report showed total receipts of $269; total disbursements, $241.45, and a balance of $27.55.

President J. G. Walton suggested that this coming Labor Day be celebrated by holding a fair in Washington Park. His idea was to have everybody bring their chickens, pet dogs, kittens, garden stuff, etc., and that there be blue ribbons for the winners. This idea seemed to meet with the approval of all the members and next Labor Day will undoubtedly find the boroughites in the midst of a typical country fair.

The president was brimming over with new ideas and he suggested the formation of a Ladies' Village Improvement Society to work for the general beautification of the borough by offering prizes for best kept lawn, house and garden, etc. The society would be a sub-organization of the Board and a number of the members didn't favor the proposition on the ground that things would not run altogether smoothly if women became mixed up in the organization's matters. One member said that the object of the formation of such a society could be attained by the Board designating one day in the spring of each year as a cleanup day. Secretary Deering thought the proposition could be covered by the fostering of the civic spirit.

The matter will be talked over further by the members between now and the next meeting, when some action to the benefit of the borough will at least spring from President Walton's idea.

A committee composed of Messrs. Deering, Dix and Fuller was appointed by President Walton to consider the feasability of appropriately celebrating the twenty-ninth birthday of the borough on March 23. The applications for membership of H. L. Pierce, Paul Ott, J. I. Snyder and C. M. Fedderman were favorably acted upon.

A LARGE TARANTULA KILLED BY PAUL RATTI

Paul Ratti, proprietor of a local fruit and candy store, killed a tarantula in his store yesterday. It was hidden in a bunch of bananas which was hanging in the window. Mr. Ratti was cutting the bad bananas off of the bunch when he saw something move. Having a suspicion as to what it was Mr. Ratti leaped back. As soon as he recovered his nerve he commenced making an inspection. He shortly perceived the insect hiding behind a banana. Making a lunge with the knife, which he was still holding, he shot the blade through banana and tarantula. This occurred at 11 o'clock in the morning and the insect still speared on the blade of the knife was alive until sunset. Mr. Ratti will put the insect into a jar filled with alcohol and place it on exhibition. During the nineteen years which Mr. Ratti has been engaged in the fruit business he has killed four of the insects, but he has never come as near being bitten as he was in this instance. He killed one while engaged in business at Flemington and the other two while engaged in business at Elizabeth and Bound Brook.

CLEAN CULVERTS AND REPAIR BROKEN WALKS

Nelson Snyder and Charles Weckoff, under Goldson W. Smalley, repaired and cleaned out the culvert running across New Market road south of Grove street, for the Board of Freeholders, yesterday. It was one reason why the culvert failed to take care of the water of the brook during the recent storm. It was pretty much clogged with dead branches, pieces of wood and other rubbish presumably thrown by the school "kids" into the brook at one end of the culvert to see them come out the other. To guard against the interior of the culvert being clogged in this manner again the end of the culvert facing the current of the brook will be grated with iron bars.

Nothing was done about widening the culvert. The broken flagging which resulted in the sinking of a portion of the roadway was removed and replaced with a new flagging and covered up. The citizens believe that the failure of the culvert to take care of the water was due to the rubbish that was removed and not to the theory held by some that the culvert is too narrow or that the local water company's main, which protrudes above the bottom of the culvert in any way obstructs the flow of the brook as they do not want a repetition of the brook rising the way it did last week. Quite a number had water in their cellars as a result and Mrs. John Rinehart, of Penfield place, had eighteen of her chickens drowned by the waters of the brook backing up almost to the back porch of her home.

The attitude of the citizens is considered fair and just. While they do not want the Board of Freeholders to expend one cent in the borough for an improvement that is not needed neither do they on the other hand want to be sufferers through any narrow policy pursued by the Board.

Oswald Morrisey and family have moved from the Wrage & Hamley house on First street to Plainfield.

Mr. and Mrs. George Meyers, of Prospect avenue, entertained A. H. MacDoneld, of Somerville, Sunday.

'Plains & Fanwood.

Borough residents have had the idea every since the announcement by Chief Decker, of the Westfield fire department, that they would not attend any more fires in this section, that the borough was included. Chief Decker has said that he did not mean to slight the borough in any way, and in fact, did not mean it as the township residents have taken it. As Willow Grove is about four miles from the firehouse in Scotch Plains and much nearer to Westfield that department has extinguished fires on several occasions, and the Township Committee has been sent a bill for expenses, for chemicals, hose and other items, and that body has not felt as if it were responsible for the debt. Not expecting Westfield people to support a fire department for another town, Chief Decker made public the statement that no response to fires in Willow Grove would be made until further notice.

Another meeting of the Scotch Plains Boy Scouts was held in the Sunday-school room of the Baptist church, last evening. After the meeting a social hour was enjoyed.

The Ladies' Aid Society, of the All Saints' Episcopal church, is holding a weekly meeting at the home of Mrs. Albert I. Ribblet, on Russell road, this afternoon from 2:30 until 5:30.

The yearly meeting of the Home Department, of the Baptist church, was held at the home of the president, Mrs. John Z. Hatfield, last evening. The reports of the several officers were very encouraging and showed a large increase in enrollment and along all other lines as well. Plans for 1915 were made that will further benefit the department.

At the meeting of the Westfield Council on Monday it was decided to apply to the State Legislature to have twenty-eight acres of waste land in the township, now used by Westfield as a part of the sewer disposal plant, annexed to that town. It was also reported that work on the macadamizing of Alston road would soon be started and so it now seems probable that "Lambert's Pond" in Willow Grove will be cleaned and the surrounding grounds beautified by W. E. Nelson, the owner, who intends throwing it open to the public.

The annual meeting of the Fanwood Fire Company was held in the firehouse, last night, and with the exception of secretary all of the officers were re-elected. H. P. Robinson was elected president, W. M. Maxim treasurer, R. G. Meggy secretary, who fills the vacancy of S. G. Van Hoesen, who resigned after nearly ten years' service, and Charles Sheppard chief. Many new members were admitted during the past year, all of them being new residents, and the treasurer's and other reports showed favorable conditions.

The Lend-a-Hand Society meets in the parlors of the Baptist church tomorrow afternoon.

Dick Hart is scheduled to arrive in New York today or tomorrow on a return trip from Europe, where he went with a load of horses for the allied armies.

Miss Edith Jopplin has sailed for her home in England, after spending the past year with Captain and Mrs. S. B. Saunders.

THE BIGGEST CONSIDERATION.

What are the things that count in a suit of clothes or an overcoat?

Style is the biggest consideration. Style lurks in the roll of the lapel, in the drape of a coat, in the shape of a pair of trousers; in the "unseen" mannerisms and style twists that dent the impression of the clothes-lover.

Materials were formerly the big yelling-point of the clothier. But today it is true that the fabrics used by the big clothing makers are about equal as far as wearing qualities are concerned.

The difference is in the style—and style make a big difference.

ships," said a resident of Sheringham to a correspondent of the "Daily Mail." "I certainly saw one myself. I should say it was no less than 2,000 feet in the air. The Zeppelin, like a great cigar, lay dim and dark against the blackness of the sky, but its outlines were unmistakable. It was fitted with searchlights. Then came the crash of bombs. There was a tremendous sensation but no panic. The damage done was not great. In one street I inspected a hole made by a bomb. It was two feet deep and about eighteen inches wide. I saw this hole forty-five minutes after the bomb fell, and it was still so hot that you could not bear to place your hand in it."

Reports reaching London are that six Zeppelins crossed over the North Sea and on reaching the coastline separated, some of them taking a southerly direction and others an opposite course. These reports, however, have not been confirmed.

Hunstanton (via London), Jan. 20.—Police deny the report that one of the raiding Zeppelins was brought down here. The last seen of the airship which dropped bombs on this place was as she was passing away to the northward over the sea.

Kings Lynn (via London), Jan. 20.—A resident of Kings Lynn told the following story of the raid:

"I had heard this evening that a Zeppelin had visited Yarmouth and subsequently passed over Sheringham, traveling westward. In the expectation of sighting the formidable visitor I kept a sharp outlook in the direction indicated.

"About 10:50 o'clock I heard an explosion which I afterward found had been caused by a bomb dropped in Dersingham village, eight miles from Lynn, and forming part of the king's West Norfolk estate.

"Subsequently I learned that a Zeppelin also had dropped bombs over the neighboring village of Snettisham, ten miles northeast of Kings Lynn—a favorite resort of Queen Alexandra during her summer visits to Sandringham—and that another had fallen on Grimston, a village on the road to Lynn. At Grimston the missile fell near the ammunition store belonging to the troop camped in that district, but no damage was done.

"Not long after these explosions I could distinguish the noise of an airship's propellers, and a little later could see plainly a Zeppelin outlined against the sky, approaching from the west.

"The airship circled over the town and dropped four bombs, with the results already reported. There were two or three miraculous escapes of people who were buried in the ruins."

Constantinople (via Berlin and London), Jan. 20.—Announcement is male here that during a night attack on English forts on the Shat el Arab River, in Arabia, the enemy was surprised and lost 100 killed and wounded.

An English cavalry division attempted to surprise a Turkish cavalry division near Kurna, near the junction of the Tigris and Euphrates Rivers. The attack was made under the protecting fire of a gunboat, but the English suffered heavy loss and the gunboat withdrew.

Paris, Jan. 20.—The French war office gave out the following statement at 3 o'clock this afternoon:

"From the sea to the Somme, and in the region of Nieuport, there was yesterday a fairly spirited artillery engagement, in the course of which the enemy endeavored in vain to destroy our bridge at the mouth of the Yser. In the meantime we were successful in demolishing a portion of his defenses at this point. Also we were successful at the Union Farm near St. Georges, where the enemy had strongly organized his positions.

"In the section of Ypres and near Lens, there were yesterday artillery exchanges of varying intensity. There was also a very violent bombardment of Blangy near Arras, but it was not followed by any infantry attack.

"From the Somme to the Argonne there has been nothing to report, nor has there been any activity in the section of Soissons, or in the vicinity of Craonne or near Rheims.

"In the region of Camp De Chalons, as well as to the north of Perthes, and of Massiges, our artillery directed a very effective fire on the fieldworks of the enemy.

"In the Argonne in the forest of La Grurie, the enemy delivered a violent attack upon one of our trenches. Our troops who, for a moment gave way under the shock, later recaptured, in two counter attacks, all their positions and maintained themselves therein.

"At St. Hubert the Germans blew up by means of a mine the northeastern projection of our trenches. Our troops threw themselves into the excavations caused by these explosions and prevented the enemy from taking possession of them.

"In the vicinity of Thann there have been artillery engagements in which the advantage rested with us."

London, Jan. 20.—A Dutch naval sloop, the Toitan, was sunk yesterday by a mine in the lower reaches of the Scheldi, according to a despatch from the Hague to a news agency. Since the capture of Antwerp by the Germans the Dutch have patrolled the river where it passes through Holland to prevent any violation of neutrality by the use of that part of the stream by either Germans or Allies. One officer and four men are reported as lost.

Amsterdma, Jan. 20.—Two of the Allies' airmen flew over Cologne, yesterday, according to despatches received here today, but did no damage.

A Zeppelin was observed fifteen minutes after midnight this morning, over Sneek, in Friesland. It cruised about for half an hour and then disappeared in a northerly direction.

Melbourne, Australia, Jan. 20.—The seat of government of the commonwealth of Australia has been temporarily removed from Melbourne to Sydney, New South Wales. In announcing the change the government gave no reason for the removal.

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

The big, special feature at Proctor's Theatre, this afternoon and tonight, will be the presentation of the first authentic Belgian war pictures to be shown in the United States. They were taken by permission of King Albert by the Chicago Tribune's staff photographer and depict scenes in and about Brussels, Louvaine, Ghent, Ostend, Dinant and many other places that have become bywords in the newspapers since the terrible struggle in Europe began. To miss seeing these pictures means missing the greatest series of "movies" ever flashed on the screen. The Belgian pictures will be supplemented by a high-class vaudeville bill and tomorrow there will be a complete change of program as follows. Frank Whitman, the dancing violinist, who plays selections on the greatest of all instruments while interpreting the latest society steps; Gorman & West, comedy variety; Sinclair & Griffith, talking and singing comedians; the comedy dramatic success, "After the Wedding," and John Cramer & Company in the mystic illusion, "A Visit from the Spirits." Another feature tomorrow will be the initial episode of George Randolph Chester's serial story, "Runaway June," the "last word" in continuous narratives from the camera.

MERIT BADGES FOR MANY BOY SCOUTS

Court of Honor Convened to Make Awards Last Night.

Six Boy Scouts passed a total of twenty-seven merit badge tests before the Court of Honor, at Scout headquarters, last night. It was the first application of the unified examining system as approved at the last meeting of the council and its success was unqualified.

Edwin H. Addis, Troop 10, won certificates in machinery, pioneering, pathfinding, music, cooking, electricity and first aid before F. M. Genung and Leslie R. Fort.

Caryl C. Dunavan, of Troop 9, passed on carpentry and pathfinding before F. E. Bach and the commissioners.

Thomas P. Fitch, Troop 5, passed in pioneering, surveying, pathfinding, machinery, first aid to animals, electricity and craftsmanship before Howard W. Satterfield and C. Leslie Bond.

Harold McKay, Troop 5, won certificates for proficiency in pioneering, agriculture, public health, first aid and first aid to animals before F. M. Genung and Leslie R. Fort.

Jack Faucet, Troop 5, passed in art, public health and personal health before J. W. Aughiltree and Frederick A. Martin.

Henry Hannigan, Troop 5, took certificates in first aid, personal health and handicraft before J. W. Aughiltree, Frederick A. Martin and F. E. Bach.

The Court of Honor sits again on Tuesday evening, February 2.

BOARD MEETING POSTPONED.

Owing to the interest manifested in the meeting held in the Y. M. C. A. Auditorium, last night, to protest against the Burnett Immigration Bill, the meeting of the Board of Trade scheduled for that time was called off. Notice of a postponed meeting will be given out in the near future.

Plainfield, N. J., Jan. 20, 1915.

Many residents of Plainfield of German birth, and of every other city in the United States for that matter, have given valuable service as citizens. They have displayed interest in the government, have occupied public office, and have been good citizens in every way. The formation of an organization to maintain and increase active interest in the Fatherland seems to us just at this time, however, in view of President Wilson's neutrality proclamation, to be rather untimely. Enjoying the privileges which come to citizens of the United States, it seems rather out of place to start a movement which it is frankly admitted is to include the children, with an idea of instilling German, rather than American tendencies. It would be better for all to get together to make this a greater America for Americans, retaining the traditions of the countries from which our foreign born residents may have come merely as traditions, and bring the children up to be Americans, without any hyphenated addition to the word.

Commissioner of Motor Vehicles Lippincott says that he believes that the speed limit for automobiles should be increased from twenty-five to thirty miles an hour, giving as one reason for the change the argument that that law is generally violated, anyway. If that is the case isn't it pretty near time for the Commissioner to tell his inspectors to get on the job. There is need for a few efficient men with stop watches, stationed along country roads, for a few days. After some of the violators have been arrested and fined, or perhaps given a few days in jail to think over their sins, the word will go forth and the others will take pains to see that they obey the law.

In Hunterdon county a hotel keeper sold liquor over his bar to a man who became so drunk that he fell out of a wagon and was killed. On the strength of that a jury found the hotel-man guilty of manslaughter. Chief Justice Gummere, writing the opinion when the case was carried to the Supreme Court, of course ruled that the conviction was illegal. Had it been allowed to stand we suppose that if a man had a fight with his wife which led him to take a nip too many out of a bottle at home, and he fell down the cellar stairs and was killed, the spouse would be held for murder.

The remarkable record made by the Y. W. C. A. in collecting all but $400 of the $23,000 subscribed in the finance campaign held last February is a glowing tribute to the work of the finance committee of that successful organization. Coupled with the fact that most of that $400 is expected to be paid within a short time the record is an unusual one for a campaign of the kind. It's another evidence that "Plainfield Knows How."

A little thing like the fact that their country is now in the hands of the enemy, is not to prevent the Belgian government from having an exhibit at the San Francisco Exposition. For an example of sturdy pluck, and determination to progress under the most unfavorable circumstances, the record in the world's history must be ceded to King Albert and his doughty followers.

The year's activities of the Anti-Tuberculosis League, as described in the reports read at the annual meeting on Monday night, show that Plainfield is caring for all who are afflicted with the white plague in an exceptionally able manner. The progress made by the children at the open air school is especially gratifying.

"Jag List Is Plan of Holy Name Men," says a headline in an Elizabeth paper, telling of plans to lessen the liquor evil in that city. A better method than branding men as habitual drinkers would be to adopt the Plainfield policy of high license and a few saloons well regulated. There are certainly too many of them in the county seat.

Even if Judge Heppenheimer has been told by the other members of the court that it is all right for him to sit in the 90-cent gas case, there is nothing to prevent his gracefully withdrawing from the argument, as public opinion is demanding that he do.

Plainfield may be too far from the ocean to have a marine disaster, but there have been many perilous approaches for the people who have had to navigate around the puddles on North avenue caused by the wretched condition of the sidewalk.

Count on the Plainfield Democratic Club being there with the goods. Just watch the others fall all over themselves to follow their example, and elect that Sayre baby to membership.

Someone is going to get a reduction in telephone rates, but we notice that the biggest 'phone users are left with the same old rates. 'Twas ever thus.

Let's see? Who was it thought that the consolidation of the Business Men's Association and the Credit Association would be a good thing?

THE FORUM

Editor, Plainfield Daily Press.

An article appeared in your paper on the 18th inst., which, after stating that the Knights of Columbus had secured $50,000 to repel an attack upon the Roman Catholic Church, went on to state that Protestant leaders desired to bring an end to religious bigotry.

The cry of religious bigotry is always raised by the Roman Church whenever their interference with our laws and institutions reaches the point where the real Americans find it necessary to protest. Not only do they cry "religious bigotry," but "persecution," "intolerance" and "no-nothingism." Why is it that it is only the Roman Catholics who cry out at so-called religious bigotry. To the well informed the plea of religious bigotry is a mere subterfuge and the writer would like to know who the Protestant leaders are who acknowledge it.

I take exception, however, to your further statement that "Roman Catholics will find all Protestant leaders ready to co-operate with them, extended inquiry failing to discover any who sympathize with the attacks." I take exception to this statement because it is untrue unless qualified. It is true that Protestant leaders are to some extent willing to co-operate with those of the Roman Catholic Church on matters of "faith and morals," but are equally prompt in combating the efforts of the heirarchy to interfere in political matters.

It would gratify your readers to learn where and by whom the "extended inquiry" was made. Being a local news item, we presume that the inquiry was made in and about Plainfield, but it could not have been extended, or else some of our "Protestant leaders" lost their nerve and were afraid to meet the issue clearly.

There is a distinct issue between Romanism and Americanism, and it will take more than $50,000 and the efforts of the Knights of Columbus to defeat the efforts of the American people when they rise in their might and demand that the interference of priests, bishops, cardinals or popes in our temporal affairs be discontinued.

Great Semi-Annual Shoe Sale

January 18 we begin the clearance of Women's Fine Shoes to make room for Spring Goods.

Three Reasons Why You Should Be Interested:—

First—the shoes offered in this sale are this season's models from many of the best factories in existence.

Second—the prices are irresistable in that you can save, in many cases, as much as two dollars on a single pair.

Third—because the department is in charge of salespersons who exhaust every means to see that you are comfortably fitted and perfectly satisfied.

LODGE VIGOROUS OBJECTION

Councilman R. A. Claybrook, president of the Plainfield Democratic Club, the organization that originated the movement for the protest meeting, introduced Mayor Leighton Calkins as the presiding officer of the evening and in a short opening address he said:

"The history of this country is the history of the achievements of immigrants; and it is part and parcel of that wonderful history that the ignorant alien, regardless of race and previous condition, has somehow become assimilated. As Bryce says, the American die is quickly stamped upon him, and he very soon becomes transformed because he is only too willing to be transformed.

"Now, it is not claimed for a literacy test that it will infallibly exclude all the undesirable; but it is insisted that restriction is necessary and it is claimed that the proposed test is on the whole the simplest and best. It has the support of some students of the problem. Illiteracy, however, while a defect is far from incurable, and it will not do to assume that the immigrant who cannot read is necessarily unpromising as a future American citizen. Our history is all to the contrary.

"In early days it was chiefly the Germans who came. William Penn got them to settle in Pennsylvania, and for nearly a century after the founding of Germantown in 1683, they contributed more than a half of the population of Pennsylvania, and by their thrift and good old fashioned integrity, helped to make that State prosperous. Yet many came here as 'redemptioners' or servants, and would have been excluded by any literacy test. They built up that part of our country and were assimilated without difficulty, although it would be hard to imagine any system less calculated to promote assimilation than that of the indentured servant. The marvellous development of the country has in great measure been due to the influx of the ignorant and oppressed outcast of Europe. In 1913 out of a million and a third of immigrants reaching us, nearly one-fourth were farm hands or farmers by classification. They would have been barred by any educational test.

"The fact is that peasant illiteracy does not necessarily mean lack of intelligence or of potential citizenship. It means only oppression or lack of opportunity. The literacy test will fail because it is unfair and will not keep out the undesirable. Who are they? They are the diseased and the vicious and immoral; and literacy is no test either of health or character, or, they are lacking in thrift; and literacy is no test of industry, or, they have no purpose to become useful citizens; and literacy is no test of ambition. The illiterate immigrant who is ambitious to become literate, or at least that his children shall have advantages which he did not have, is more likely to develope useful citizenship than the literate alien, nursing wrongs, bitter perhaps, and resentful of all community restraint.

"To me, it seems that our problem is not so much to restrict, as to build a system to exclude the really undesirable (who are not the ignorant) at the ports where they seek to embark; perhaps by consular certificate of character and health. And the remaining problem is to devise a kind and practical system of distribution after the aliens are admitted, so that they will be deterred from hearding in large centres of population. But it is essentially contrary to American spirit and the policy of our goverment, from Washington down to Taft, to exclude the deserving merely because they cannot read."

Former Congressman William S. Bennett, of New York city, was the principal speaker of the evening and said in part: "The Burnett literacy test, if passed, will prove an incentive to bribery and corruption at our ports. If the immigrant cannot get access to America on his mental merits he will seek to 'buy' admission. The bill fails to measure anything except the lack of opportunity and it falls far short of being the test of character it is claimed to be. It is not the immigrant who counts, but the immigrant's offspring, the future American citizen. Public educators, by cold statistics, tell us that the most literate class in the whole world are the children of the foreign born.

"In November, the last month for which there are available reports, there were 19,000 more left this country than came in. The immigrant comes here primarily for the purpose of gaining opportunity and while the first generation always takes the rough work the children of the immigrants always are given the chance to become educated in our schools. The child of the immigrant rarely follows in his parent's footsteps and assumes manual labor, but can generally be counted upon to attain a supervising and paying vocation. While all of the immigrants that come into our country are rising in the social scale the Italian and the Pole have long since been singled out as the industrial class.

"You don't need any legislation in America to keep out the idle for this class doesn't come. It takes courage and ambition for a foreigner to sever home ties and make the trip of adventure to a new country and the weak at heart and undesirable as a rule will not attempt it. Many of those let into America are fugitives, not immigrants. They have undergone prosecution and physical hardships in their fight to set foot on American soil and if they have been successful why should they be returned to be cast into prison?

"There's no humanity in the act and I believe that President Wilson will decline to sanction it as did his predecessor, Grover Cleveland."

H. W. Herrman, efficiency engineer of the Equitable Building Corporation, gave an eloquent talk against the proposed measure and said in part:

"Back of the Burnett bill there is an unwarranted fear that after the war there will be an inrush of foreigners. Labor is scarce now in America and will probably be more so then, and there is no reason to believe that the foreigner will leave his home country, where there will be plenty of reconstruction work to do, to come to this country. History tells us that immigration has never followed a great war and it will probably not follow this one.

"Another object of the Burnett bill is to prevent Roman Catholics from coming in, but this measure should be strenuously discouraged and we should open our doors to all the worthy and ambitious without regard to nationality or creed. The United States has heretofore been the university of liberty and democracy and the brilliant history of our country is due largely to that fact. We have 100,000,000 people here today, but we should have one billion. But one-tenth of our ariable land is cultivated, so let us take all the foreigners we can get and turn the other nine-tenths into usefulness. We do not need to discriminate against men who cannot read, for men who can read will not do the manual labor we expect of the foreigner. We have no right to restrict the resources of this country and withhold opportunity from other human beings. It is not OUR country for God gave it to the children of men and we are only a few of those privileged to enjoy its resources."

Father B. M. Bogan, of St. Mary's church, endorsed the movement against the enactment of the Burnett measure and he declared that America owes its present stability to the fact that in the past it has been a harbor for refugees. He said:

"If the tests had been applied years ago some of our most famous statesmen would never have been here for their predecessors were ignorant foreigners. The Burnett bill is a narrow interpretation of the laws of security and progress and no greater opportunity has ever been given Americans to vouch their stand than to enter a protest against this unjust measure."

Albert H. Atterbury reviewed the progress made by the so-called ignorant Irish and Italian in our country and the good they derive and what they give in return. He said that most of the immigrants are men and women with imagination and the percentage of indolent and thriftless is very small. In closing he declared that the most backward parts of this country are the ones that have had the least leaven from immigration.

Henry Rosenbaum gave an immigrant's view of the question, he having come into this country a number of years ago and experienced the hardships suffered by a foreign-born individual. Dr. Maximillian Groszmann also spoke in favor of protesting against the measure.

The resolution introduced by Councilman Claybrook for endorsement, and to be sent to President Wilson follows:

"At a large and enthusiastic non-partisan public meeting here tonight, the following resolution was passed:

"Resolved, That to refuse admission to these United States to any person simply because that person cannot read or write, or conform to any other literacy test, would do violence to our traditions and the humane instincts, and would seriously hinder our economic progress; it would be a cruel denial to many most deserving of our sympathy and help of their inherent right to go wherever opportunity and undeveloped resources invite them; it would crush the hopes of many ambitious souls; it would prevent the coming to us of those much needed, those willing to do domestic and farm labor and to work with the axe and pick and shovel, while it would not keep out, or tend to keep out, the most undesirable, the criminals and adventurers who would generally stand the literacy test; it would be a surrender to the reactionary element of the community, to follow whose promptings would start us on a retrogressive policy of narrowness and selfishness and hatred, peculiarly inappropriate at this time, when so large a part of the world is aflame with jealousy and suspicion and has its expectant eye on this country, and needs the encouragement, the inspiration of an example of fairness, liberality and magnanimity.

"Therefore, be it further resolved, That we protest against any literacy test and we earnestly urge the President to veto the Burnett bill."

MENDING HUMAN WRECKS OF WAR

German Field Hospitals Now Great Repair Shops.

MEN TAUGHT HOW TO TALK

Tales of Bravery Lighten Gloom of Suffering—Two Iron Crosses Pinned Over Cot of Fritz Lucht, Air Man, Whose Deeds Won Admiration Even of Enemies.

Today I saw men being taught to talk again. In the "human repair shops," the great German field hospitals, many men were learning anew the use of brains, tongue, hands and feet. They had received their baptism of fire. Bullet, shrapnel, broken shell, all had done their work. And now medical science was doing its utmost to restore the victims to partial normality, writes Karl H. von Wiegand, a United Press staff correspondent from Laon, France.

Professor Bockenheimer, in charge, and Dr. Luetkenmueller, chief surgeon, explained the work. They care for 2,100 severe cases, but the slightly wounded are given first aid treatment and then sent back to the home bases, as this is too close to the actual front to permit keeping any wounded that can be moved. More than a score of cases, French and German alike, where trepanning operations had been necessary, were shown.

It was a singular picture. Through the windows came the deep low notes of distant guns killing, smashing, tearing, maiming the human "tenpins." Here they were being patched up. Nurses sat by the bedsides of friends and foe alike, bathing fevered brows and teaching pale faced, bearded men to speak the most simple words, telling them the names of objects and putting words together into sentences.

Lips Form Word "Pencil."

"What is this?" asked Professor Bockenheimer, holding a pencil before a bearded warrior from whose skull he had cut a splinter of steel. The lips trembled. Then came the feeble answer, "Pen—il."

I held up a cigarette and asked what it was. The man's lips moved and a look came on his face which seemed to say that he knew what it was but could not say. Then Professor Bockenheimer came to the rescue. "What do we do with it?" he asked. An apparent tremendous mental effort, then the reply, "Smoke."

"Correct," said the professor. "Now what is it?" This time the brain and tongue worked and the answer was correct.

"Hours have to be spent by the nurses teaching these men all over again," explained the professor. "It requires unending patience and perseverance."

Many cases of plastic surgery were shown. Men with most of their faces smashed away were being brought back to life with parts of their bodies grafted to cover the terrible gaping holes. Many would be much better dead, but the doctors feel it is their duty to save all they can.

"We do not ask the wounded whether they want to live or die," explained Professor Bockenheimer.

At the main French hospital Professor Manasse of Stuttgart was in charge. Here, too, nurses were teaching men to talk again, and terrible wrecks of humanity were being patched up.

An Air Man's Exploit.

Two iron crosses of the first and second class pinned to the wall over a cot attracted my attention. The patient was young Fritz Lucht, air man, whose latest deed fills one of the brightest pages of the annals of aerial battles of the great war.

With an officer as observer he was attacked while flying north of Rheims. They were attacked by a French monoplane armed with a machine gun. Lucht and his officer had only their pistols. Round and round they circled, each trying to gain the advantage by getting above the other. At 6,000 feet the French plane gained its position and the German was riddled. The desperate fight was visible from the lines of both armies.

Lucht was shot through the liver and lung, but he realized that his officer had maps and observations that were badly needed. So he planed downward toward the German lines, landing just inside them. Soldiers removed the two men, just as the French artillery, having secured the range, demolished the plane with well placed shots. In the hospital General von Emmich pinned the decorations on the aviator's shirt. He will probably recover.

PIN IN BODY SIXTY-FIVE YEARS

Entered Throat, Extracted Through Ear, and Deafness Is Cured.

C. B. Truesdell, a farmer of Canton, Mich., when a boy swallowed a small pin, which lodged in his throat and nearly caused strangulation. After a lapse of sixty-five years a pin point was noticed protruding from his left ear. It was removed.

Mr. Truesdell had at times suffered nearly total deafness and constant pain in his head and had the services of several physicians without relief, but now that the cause is removed his hearing is normal and the pain has ceased.

Singular Things in Plurals

We'll begin with a box and the plural is boxes,
But the plural of ox should be oxen, not oxes.
Then one fowl is goose, but two are called geese;
Yet the plural of moose should never be meese.
You may find a lone mouse or a whole lot of mice,
But the plural of house is houses, not hice.
If the plural of man is always called men,
Why shouldn't the plural of pan be called pen?
The cow in the plural may be cows or kine,
But a bow, if repeated, is never called bine.
And the plural of vow is vows, not vine;
And if I speak of a foot and you show me your feet,
And I give you a boot, would a pair be called beet?
If one is a tooth and a whole set are teeth,
Why shouldn't the plural of booth be called beeth?
If the singular's this and the plural is these,
Should the plural of kiss be nicknamed keese?
Then one may be that and three would be those,
Yet hat in the plural would never be hose.
And the plural of cat is cats, not cose.
We speak of a brother and also of brethren,
But though we say mothers we never say methren.
The masculine pronouns are he, his and him,
But imagine the feminine she, shis and shim.
So the English, I think you all will agree,
Is the most wonderful language you ever did see.

MILLIONS OF SHOES FOR ALLIES' HORSES.

Factories Pressed to Fill Single Order Worth $25,000,000.

American manufacturers of horseshoes are not lying awake nights in worry about the duration of the war in Europe. Instead they are employing both their nights and days turning out their wares to keep up with the foreign and home demand.

One of their welcome burdens is the filling of an order from the warring nations for 6,000,000 kegs of shoes. The factories at Providence, Poughkeepsie, Pittsburgh and Troy are going at high pressure to make the output fit the order.

The normal yearly exports of horseshoes, a maker told me, amount to about 10,000,000 kegs. There are no factories in Europe comparable with those in the United States, he said, and hence no particular reason why the manufacturers of this particular product in this country should stamp their shoes with the "Made in U. S. A." trade mark.

When demand is well distributed throughout the year, he said, there is little difficulty in meeting it, but a single order for 6,000,000 kegs necessitated abnormal activity by the makers. Some of the shoes have been delivered, others are on the way, and the rest are being turned out with the greatest possible speed. It is understood that the big order came from a single firm in London and that the shoes are consigned to Holland as the distributing country.

Most, if not all, the shoes are for use by the armies of the allied nations. The order is said to represent a cash investment of at least $25,000,000 by the purchaser, and the profit to the manufacturers is described as unusually attractive.

While the makers are not worried about the length of hostilities, they are reading carefully the opinions of all experts on this phase of war discussions and relying on them somewhat as trade barometers for the months to come. The foreign war business is enticing because it is on a cash basis and is even more profitable than the domestic trade.

HIS BURIED HAND ITCHED.

So Sufferer Dug It Up, Straightened Fingers and Got Relief.

Suffering intense pains in a hand which had been amputated and buried, Lewis Jefferson of Blades, Del., had no relief until the hand was uncovered and the fingers straightened out, since when he has felt no more pain.

The strange story is vouched for by Jefferson himself, who had his hand cut off by a circular saw at the Allen mills several weeks ago. During the past week he had been suffering with severe pains and with an itching sensation in what would have been the palm of his hand.

Unrelieved by physicians, the young man acted on the advice of friends and dug up the amputated hand, which had been buried for nearly six weeks. The fingers of the hand were found in a cramped position. After straightening out the fingers and weighting them so that they could not again double up, the hand was reburied. All pain left Jefferson at once, and he claims that he has suffered no inconvenience since.

WAR ONLY BY REFERENDUM.

Senator Owen Would Have People Decide Nation's Action.

Aggressive warfare by the United States would be possible only on approval of a majority of the voters of the country under a constitutional amendment proposed by Senator Robert L. Owen of Oklahoma.

The power of the president to call out troops to resist invasion would not be altered, but declaration of an offensive war would have to be submitted to a referendum.

Swimming News and Notes

Written for the Daily Press by LOUIS P. HANSEN.

Walter Ramme, of the New York A. C., captured the 100 yard metropolitan swimming title on Wednesday, the meeting being held at the club's natatorium, 59th street and Sixth avenue. The trial heats were held on Tuesday evening, seven of the eight entrants answering the roll call. Ramme, Wheatley, O'Sullivan and Zimnoch, all of the N. Y. A. C., started in the first heat. They all got off well together, there not being a yard's difference between the first and last man for the first two lengths of the pool. Ramme gradually began to draw away from his opponents, and won the heat in the fast time of 59 3-5 seconds, with Wheatley, second, and O'Sullivan, third.

The next heat brought to the mark Vollmer, Reilly and Herold, was hotly contested. The last named earned a small lead on the dive and held it over half the course, keeping Vollmer at safe distance and gaining sensibly on Reilly, who seemed hopelessly beaten.

But the veteran had something up his sleeve. On nearing the seventy-five yard turn he unwound a brilliant sprint, and was soon abreast of his teammate, who had meanwhile outstripped Herold.

The last lap of the race was a splendid struggle between Vollmer and Reilly, but neither could gain an inch and their outstretched hands touched the winning posts with one accord in a perfect dead heat. The time was 59 1-5 seconds.

The final heat, held Wednesday night, brought together Vollmer, Reilly, Wreatley and Ramme. Vollmer leaped into the lead at the gun and held a slight advantage for twenty-five yards, but on the second length both Reilly and Ramme closed in on him, and all three sprinted, neck and neck, to the halfway mark.

Here Ramme missed his turn and fell back a couple of feet, but he recovered promptly, raised his stroke several notches, and before the 75-yard mark had been reached he was in the van, turning first on the home-stretch.

He seemed to exert himself over the last lap, yet he gradually increased his lead, winning by about six feet, in the fast time of 58 3-5 seconds.

Vollmer and Reilly made a great contest of the fight for second place, ploughing down the pool shoulder to shoulder and touching out six inches apart, Vollmer ahead.

Eight heats were necessary to decide the fifty-yard handicap swim. J. T. Ruddy came through in the final and won rather easily, thanks to a liberal allowance of 12 seconds. W. F. Hanscom, unattached, with a handicap of 10 seconds, finished second, and J. F. Curtin, third. Time, 33 4-5 seconds.

It also required four heats and final to decide the 200-yard handicap swim. Ash and Zimnoch, of the N. Y. A. C.; Luke, of Lawrenceville; John S. Reilly, unattached, qualified for the final.

Reilly set out to do the pacing from the beginning, but swam a heady, well managed race, just keeping in front of the field and not attempting to force the going.

Thus, when Luke uncorked a terrific sprint at 150 yards, he was ready for him, and sent up his stroke a bit himself, and though both the latter and Zimnoch, who came up fast toward the end, threatened him dangerously, he managed to keep in front and won by a few feet, Luke and Zimnoch finishing second and third respectively. Time, 2 minutes, 30 4-5 seconds.

Fourteen men reported for the fancy diving contest—the greatest number ever chronicled at a New York A. C. meet. Few of the veterans lived up to their best form, and the newcomers generally outclassed them. Robert E. Gailbraith, of High School of Commerce, gave an almost perfect exhibition, and earned the decision by a small margin over Joseph F. Dunn and Richard Bennett, of the New York A. C., who finished in this order.

The fifty-yard obstacle race was won by John Curran, Dunn and Phinney, second and third respectively, all of the N. Y. A. C. Time, 1 minute, 10 2-5 seconds.

Another very important swimming meet will take place Friday night, between the University of Pennsylvania and the City College, and as City College has already tried conclusions with every other college in the eastern league results should give a pretty good idea of how the Quakers compare with the leaders in swimming and water polo.

The work of Masten, Shyrock and Schoemacher, the Red and Blue's reliance men for the sprints, middle distances and plunge, will be watched with anticipation, for reports indicate that they are performing well enough to figure in the individual championship tests, and they are likely to meet strong opposition at the hands of Bosworth, Riemer and Jones, the stars of the local squad.

Plainfield will shortly see the advent of its first swimming club. With the High School pool now thrown open to the public, there is no reason why strong swimming and water polo teams cannot be organized among the followers of acquatic sports in our own home town. There should be plenty of material from which to draw, and with the proper coaching, it will only be a question of a short time before Plainfield will be able to take its place in the aquatic world.

On Saturday next the watermen of Towensend Harris Hall will visit Garden City for a go at the swimmers of St. Paul's School. Radford McCormick, the coach, has his boys in great shape for the fight with the Long Islanders and is confident of victory.

Although Columbia defeated City College conclusively in the aquatic battle last Friday, the form exhibited by the Morningsiders was somewhat of a disappointment to the team rooters. The times were slow in all the swimming races, the divers and plungers saw their colors lowered, and the water polo sextet showed lack of aggressiveness in attack and inability to take advantage of opportunities for scoring.

Doubtless the poor swimming marks were due to Vollmer's being satisfied with winning and not attempting to do his best, but the divers and plungers, as well as the water polo players, tried hard, and the outcome made evident the fact that material improvement will have to occur if Columbia is to have a chance at either intercollegiate pennant.

SPORTING NOTES

What would Sherman say about baseball war?

Gunboat Smith and Bat Levinsky will fight next Sunday at New Orleans.

Jess Willard is en route to training quarters, and is busy dodging advice from cranks.

Payne Whitney, with his new $250,000 tennis pavilion, promises to be a strong patron of the courts.

O. S. Weeks, 48 years old, held his own in a 7-mile run against youngsters in New York last week.

President Tener is expected to deliver an address at the Stove League dinner at Pittsburgh, tomorrow night.

The lawyers will find the baseball leagues ripe picking, say the wise ones. They will put it all over Tris Speaker and Eddie Collins for pay envelopes.

LOCAL EAGLES TO PLAY.

The local Eagles' five will go to Newark tomorrow night and meet the Progress pinners, of that place. The Plainfield aggregation threw a scare into the Eagles' League last week by taking three from the Newark leaders and are now going after another clean sweep. At the beginning of the season the locals could not be stopped and won six games in succession. After that they lost a dozen straight and are now on the victory road again.

SENIOR ELKS' LEAGUE.

Plainfield Senior Elk pinners are due to get into action tomorrow night, when they go to Elizabeth for a match. The locals have been idle for nearly two weeks and will have to play their best to cop the match on their opponents' alleys.

BOWLING MATCH POSTPONED.

The Junior Elks' League bowling match scheduled for last night between the Newark and Plainfield teams, on the former's alleys, was postponed until tonight.

HENRY KINNEY BEST IN Y. M. C. A. MEET

Fine Showing Made by Athletes in First Annual Event.

Henry V. Kinney captured the gold medal in the first annual handicap athletic meet held under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A. in the association gym, last night. The medal was offered to the entrant scoring the most number of points and Kinney, with two firsts and a second, totalled fourteen tallies, which was far above any other man. The next highest were Noble Ricketts and Sundstrom, each having 9. The meet was a great success from every standpoint and was featured by keen competition. J. H. Karlberg, who was placed at scratch in all the events save the open 220 potato race, made a hard fight for honors, but the handicap pulled him down to 6. In the running high jump event he was the last man to fail and at that was tied with R. Blanchard. Because of the fact that he was a scratch man, the judges awarded him second place.

There were several ties in the other events. Kinney showed great speed in the potato race, when he covered the distance, 220 yards, in 52 and 2-5 seconds. The next best time was done by A. D. Galloway, who covered the distance in 54 3-5. Aided by his handicap of 2 feet 6 inches, Dave Clarin came out ahead in the shot put event, making a total mark of 42 feet, 3½ inches. Sundstrom, who recently eame to this city from Springfield, Mass., was easily the winner of the first event, the standing broad jump, his mark being 9 feet, 3 inches, plus one inch handicap.

The complete results follow:

Standing broad jump (handicap)—Won by Sundstrom; second, N. Ricketts; third, R. D. Boice; fourth, G. Engler; fifth, B. Hansen; distance, 9 feet, 4 inches. Handicap, 1 inch.

Running high jump (handicap)—Won by Henry Kinney; second, Karlberg and R. Blanchard; fourth, L. Brower; fifth, Oscar Phillipson and Noble Ricketts tied. Height, 5 feet, 3 inches. Handicap, 5 inches.

Eight-pound shot put (handicap)—Won by Dave Clarin; second, Sundstrom; third, B. Hansen; fourth, J. H. Karlberg; fifth, N. M. Sweigert. Distance, 42 feet, 3½ inches. Handicap, 2 feet, 6 inches.

Running broad jump (handicap)—Won by H. Brandt; second, H. V. Kinney; third, N. Ricketts; fourth, O. Phillipson; fifth, A. D. Galloway. Distance, 16 feet, 6 inches. Handicap, 2 feet.

Nine-potato race (220 yards, open)—Won by H. V. Kinney; second, A. D. Galloway; third, Oscar Phillipson, fourth, Dave Clarin; fifth, N. Ricketts and B. Berse tied. Time, 52 2-5 seconds.

The complete list of point winners follows: H. V. Kinney, 14; N. Ricketts, 9; Sundstrom, 9; Dave Clarin, 7; J. H. Karlberg, 6; O. Phillipson, 5½; A. D. Galloway, 5; Harry Brandt, 5; B. Hansen, 4; R. Blanchard, 3; R. D. Boice, 3; Gus Engler, 2; H. M. Sweigert, 1; L. Brower, 1; Berse, ½.

Y. M. C. A. TEAM TO PLAY IN ASBURY PARK FRIDAY

The Y. M. C. A. basketball team will go to Asbury Park, Friday night, and meet the strong Crescent Athletic Association team, of that place. This team is considered to be very fast and only lost to the Troy aggregation, of the New York State League, by a small margin, last Friday night. The locals will probably have their new uniforms for this game and they will be entertained over night. The team will leave this city on the 4:36 train.

A practice will be held at 8 o'clock tonight, and all members of the squad should be present.

BOWLING TONIGHT.

Eagles' League—Elizabeth at Newark.

Junior Elks' League—Plainfield at Newark.

Knights of Columbus League—Bayonne at Westfield.

Masonic League—Anchor at Lafayette and Azure at Herrmann.

AZURE AT LAFAYETTE.

Anchor pinners, of the Masonic League, will go to Rahway tonight, and meet the Lafayette team of that place. Azure and Hermann will also meet on the latter's alleys.

MASONIC LEAGUE.

The Jerusalem Lodge pinners, of the Masonic League, will entertain Washington, tomorrow night.

WESTFIELD SPANKED BY LOCAL SPEEDERS

High School Youngsters Put Rough Rivals to Rout.

The boys' basketball team of the Plainfield High School added another notable victory to its string, yesterday afternoon, by defeating Westfield High School in the local gym, by the score of 33 to 21. The Plainfield team had no easy task taking the Westfield team into camp, for the visitors fought tooth and nail all the way.

The guarding of the visiting team was especially close, and seldom did a local player get an open shot at the basket. Many fouls were called during the game, but these came from the eagerness of the two teams to prevent a score being made rather than from rough playing.

The passing of the local five was fast and accurate, although the Westfield five was very fast and intercepted any attempt at long passes.

Plainfield held the upper hand throughout the first half, never being in danger of having the score tied. The first half ended with the score Plainfield 14, Westfield 8. Plainfield also led the scoring in the second half, making nineteen points to Westfield's thirteen.

N. P. H. S. LOSES VALUABLE ALL-AROUND PERFOMRER

The North Plainfield High School basketball team lost another of the squad yesterday, when Daniel Denny left school. It was first thought that Denny would return in a short time, but he has handed in his jersey to Captain Abrams and all hope of his returning now is lost.

This will not affect the basketball team, however, as much as it will the baseball nine, as Denny was not one of the regular five on the basketball quintet, but he was a valuable pitcher on the baseball team and his loss will be felt quite considerably in this line.

BORO LASSIES HOLD RIVALS TO ONE GOAL

Cranford Girls Were No Match for North Plainfield H. S. Sextet.

Accompanied by a large delegation of rooters, yesterday afternoon, the Cranford High School girls went down to defeat at the hands of the speedy North Plainfield lassies by a score of 26 to 2. The Cranford girls were no match for the "Canadians," who held the visitors to one goal in the first half and scoreless in the second period, while they tallied up 26 points. The playing of the Cranford girls showed a decided lack of practice in team work, guarding and goal throwing. They failed to make a basket out of thirteen chances at the fifteen foot line. Out of seventeen tries the North Plainfielders caged four foul goals.

Miss Spencer and Miss Burtis were the point getters for N. P. H. S., dropping the ball in at random, while the work of the two guards, Miss Debele and Miss Keller, was excellent, seldom allowing the ball in their opponent's territory.

Rahway	11	25	981

With three victories in a row on the Rahway Elks' alleys, last night, the members of the New Brunswick team succeeded in tieing the Paterson pin-knights for first place in the Elks' Senior League. The New Brunswicks have won twenty-six games and lost thirteen to date, while the Silk City team has taken twenty-four games and lost twelve, each having a percentage of .667. There was a match scheduled last night between the Jersey City and New York teams, on the latter's alleys, but this affair was indefinitely postponed. The first two games at Rahway were well contested, New Brunswick, with 896, annexing the first by twenty-two pins, while a score of 895 in the second contest was sufficient to give the visitors the game by twelve pins. They came through for 918 in the windup setto while the Rahway pin-knights dropped back to 770. Burton rolled 238 for New Brunswick and Greenwald had 202. Albright rolled 222 for Rahway and Koops was there for 214.

TED MEREDITH BARRED.

Thorough perusal of the Amateur Athletic Union rules by Secretary-Treasurer Frederick W. Rubien and Bartow S. Weeks, chairman of the legislation committee, has failed to uncover any clause which would give Ted Meredith, the University of Pennsylvania runner, the right to compete for his college until after June 1 of this year because he has represented the Meadowbrook A. C., of Philadelphia, in sanctioned sport since October 1 of last year.

Scattered Sport Gleanings

THIS SPORT SHOULD BE ENCOURAGED.

Juvenile sharpshooters appear to be in earnest in their formation of a scholastic rifle team in this city and everything possible should be done to encourage this movement. Those interested in the project have held several enthusiastic meetings and the proper equipment necessary to the organization of a team in this city seems to be available. In other school and colleges where the same plan has been adopted the move has proven itself immensely popular and there is apparently no reason why the idea should not develop in the local ranks.

FROM THE EASTON "EXPRESS."

"In a very listless and rough game, Plainfield High School defeated Easton High at the March building by the score of 31-17 on Saturday last. This game served to open up relations with Plainfield High, and it is hoped that E. H. S. will be able to meet them in other sports. McNamee and Rosenson starred for Plainfield, but it was not Plainfield's individual playing that won for them."

Despite the fact that its achievements have been touted sky-high the Crescent A. C. basketball five, of Asbury Park, will have to exhibit a better quality of the court pastime against the Plainfielders next Friday night than it did against Troy last week in order to be in at the finish. The Y. M. C. A. outfit is due to give the seashore boys a good run for the verdict and the home talent will have to flash a little extra steam in order to keep abreast of the pace.

From the Elizabeth Journal: "Plainfield, with her Vincent Nash, Jr., and Cranford, boasting of Alexander Cummings, haven't got much on Bayonne in the way of veteran pinners able to hold their own with the best on the alleys. "Colonel" E. R. Jaeger, who admits to association with the game of ten-pins a brief thirty-five years, is Bayonne's boss veteran on the alleys." "Bill" Nash, Jr., only admits to being in the maple spilling game some sixteen years "Jay," old man, so he has agreed to forfeit all claim to the veteran honors cited in your squib. Bill's daddy is the real "vet."

With the distribution of several thousand rainbow trout in streams of Burlington, Ocean and Salem counties the State Fish and Game Commission closed for the season the most widespread and efficient campaign yet attempted for restocking the waters of New Jersey with game fish. There will be no more restocking work attempted until next fall, when the State hopes to have double the number of fish liberated this season ready for distribution.

Hundreds of thousands of brook trout, rainbow trout, bass and other varieties of game fish have been sent out from the Hackettsown hatchery for streams in every county of the State. Where brook trout failed to survive in south Jersey streams in former restocking experiments, it is believed the hardier rainbow variety will flourish and will provide the best of sport for anglers. It is the aim of the commission and plans are being worked out to make every available stream in the State a source of food supply, stocking it with the fish best suited to its waters.

OFFICIALS PICKED FOR LEAGUE GAMES

Scholastic Institutions Meet to Settle Final Details for Big Contests.

Representatives from North Plainfield and Plainfield High Schools and the Leal School met in the Plainfield High School athletic rooms, yesterday afternoon, for the purpose of settling the remaining details for the game between the local and borough institutions on the Saengerbund Hall court, Saturday afternoon. The long standing disagreement over the officiating question was threshed out and it was agreed to engage Ralph Buckley, of Rahway High School, to do the umpiring, and James J. McNamee, of this city, will referee. Both are A. A. U. registered officials.

It was further decided to play the full schedule of nine contests this year, each team playing the other team three times, whether or not two games are annexed in a row by one aggregation. The place for the third contests will be decided by the flip of a coin.

Regarding the contest at Saengerbund Hall, Saturday afternoon, the North Plainfield faction was willing to play the contest with one official, a referee, but the local schoolboys stood out for two officials and, furthermore the P. H. S. captain demanded that the league go out of town for its referee and umpire. The Plainfield High School leaders made it plain that they were strongly in favor of having Bulkley, of Rahway, do the refereeing, and wanted Lidgate, of Fanwood, for umpire. This proposition was opposed by North Plainfield and after much consideration the final choice was arrived at. Those present at the meeting were: Coach Paul R. Collier, Captain Hyman Abrams and Manager Duclos VanMater, of North Plainfield; Coach Ralph S. Patch, Captain Daniel F. McNamee and Manager Nicholas Zelmas, of Plainfield; Coach C. B. Wardlaw, Captain Chauncey Stewart and Manager Fred Dickerson, of Leal's.

COLUMBUS CLUB FIVE LOST FIRST BATTLE

Fast Pickup Aggregation Took 32 to 13 Victory Over New Quintet.

Although it met with defeat in the first game of the season, the Columbus Club basketball team was defeated by the Bank Clerks' five last night, by the score of 32 to 13. In the first half the home team could not find the basket and could get only three baskets and one foul, while its opponents ran up 22 points. The visiting aggregation was composed of players who have been in the game for several years and have been playing steadily this season, while the Columbus Club combination consists of men who have not played for several years, or who are new at the game.

Only six members of the Columbus Club squad were put into the game, but the others will get a chance next week. The score at the end of the first half last night was 22 to 7. For the Clerks, Ricketts and Waller did the bulk of the scoring, while Linke and George Taylor scored eleven points between them.

ANCHOR TEAM WON.

The Anchor Lodge bowling team played the Azure five, of Cranford, on the Elks' alleys, last night, and took two out of the three games. This was a match that was won by the local team by forfeit some time ago, but it was later ruled that the match should be played. The highest score made by the local team was 930. Through some mistake the visitors copped the score sheets and carried them home.

BIG MONEY FOR GOOD FIGHTERS

Champions Find Huge Profits In Ring Work.

RITCHIE MADE A FORTUNE.

His Successor as Lightweight Title Holder Is Also Cleaning Up Large Sums—Welsh Has Been Unusually Busy Since Coming to America a Few Weeks Ago.

The loss of the lightweight title and the financial opportunities it represented was doubtless a sad blow to Willie Ritchie, but he can console himself with the gratifying knowledge that he "got his."

Ritchie won his title on Nov. 28, 1912. He lost it to Freddie Welsh in England July 7, 1914. Between those dates he accumulated the respectable fortune of about $121,000, including his receipts from theatrical engagements. He received nothing but the title when he won on a foul from Ad Wolgast in sixteen rounds at San Francisco, but the honor was the entering wedge to his fortune. Ritchie received the following sums in defense of his title after winning it from Wolgast:

Joe Rivers	$18,000
Leach Cross	7,000
Ad Wolgast (Milwaukee bout)	16,000
Tommy Murphy	15,000
Charlie White	10,000
Freddy Welsh	25,000
Theatrical engagements	30,000
Total	$121,000

Since his defeat by Welsh Ritchie has engaged in one bout, a four round exhibition with Johnny Dundee at Frisco. For this contest he received the munificent sum of $1,500, bringing his total earnings for the last two years up to $122,500, which was $61,250 per year, or $5,104 per month.

Ritchie averaged $15,166 for each of his six championship fights, about $1,123 per round, or $374 for every minute he was actually in action.

Although Welsh is fighting more often than Ritchie—he has already fought as many times in the five months he has held the title as Willie did during his entire titular career—he has not received anything like the money Ritchie was paid for his efforts. Like Ritchie when he won the title, Welsh didn't receive a penny in the bout that netted him the championship. Since that event Welsh's earnings have been as follows:

Matty Baldwin	$3,500
Ad Wolgast	4,500
Charlie White	11,000
Freddy Duffy	5,000
Fred Yelle, Young Brown, Young Shugrue	*10,000
Total	$34,000

*Estimated.

While Ritchie was paid far more per bout than Welsh, the latter's earnings per month were greatly in excess of the former's. The Welshman has averaged almost $6,800 during the five months he has held the title. He has fought a total of seventy-four rounds as a champion. He received $459 per round, or $153 a minute.

In several of his matches Welsh has not made as good a showing as was expected. Young Shugrue got the best of the encounter, according to the New York sporting writers, but as there could be no decision Welsh's title was not in jeopardy except by a knockout. Shugrue handled him roughly, but lacked the punch that would make the Britisher take the count.

ALLEGE O .B. CONTROLS 84,000 PERFORMERS

Hearing on Federal League's Injunction Against Organized Baseball.

Chicago, Jan. 20—The application for an injunction made by the Federal Baseball League against organized baseball before Federal Judge Landis, charging a common law conspiracy, otherwise a monopoly of the baseball business, drew a crowd of fans which tested the capacity of the courtroom to the limit. The case came near receiving a setback at the outset when the court suggested the question of jurisdiction. Forthwith both sides waived this question and left it to the discretion of the court to be determined after the argument was submitted.

The attorney for the plaintiff led off with a denunciation of the national agreement between the two major leagues as well as the minor leagues; the control estimated at 84,000 players. It was charged that the agreement is indissoluable except by mutual consent of all clubs, a dominating weapon so complete in itself as to contain a blacklist styling seceding players as outlaws, contract jumpers, etc., so binding in its phraseolgy as to reflect on the freedom of citizens' rights of a person engaged in the pursuit of baseball as a living. Officials of both sides were present from all parts of the country, occupying seats within the rail of the court.

N. P. H. S. NOTES.

On account of the weather conditions, the trip which Mr. Earley had planned to the Rutgers observatory to view the Nebula on Orion and other interesting astronomical phenomena, which occur at this time, has been postponed until Monday or Tuesday of next week.

All the students who ordered their class pictures at the time they were taken a week ago, have not all claimed the photographs and if these are not claimed by tomorrow the pictures will be given to any one who wishes to get them on payment of the price asked.

Miss Barnard and Miss Robley have been asked to coach the junior class play, which will be given some time in the near future. Miss Ray had been formerly chosen to coach it, but as she is now coaching the Athletic Association play, Miss Robley and Miss Barnard have kindly consented to take her place. Although the class had previously decided to give a minstrel show they have now decided to give two short farces in its stead.

P. T. A. DANCING CLASS HOLDS FIRST MEETING

The first session of the night dancing class, under the auspices of the North Plainfield Parent-Teacher Association, was held last night and was equally as successful as the first session of the afternoon class for the children which was held last week. The class met last night in the kindergarten rooms at Duer street and Lincoln place, and there were about thirty present.

This was the first of a course of twelve lessons, one to be given every week. Because of the basketball game to be played Saturday afternoon in the borough, the time of the afternoon class has been changed to Saturday morning.

PLAINFIELDER LEAVES TO CONDUCT ENGLISH FACTORY

Wilfred Wharton, who has resided in this city for the past two years with his uncle, J. Fred Wharton, of West Sixth street, sailed for England Saturday on a Cunard Line steamer. He came to Plainfield for the purpose of finishing his training as an expert machinist and was employed at the Saurer and Pond plants.

Mr. Wharton's father is the proprietor of a large machine shop at Manchester, England, and last week the young man received a cable to return home and take charge of the place. The factory is working day and night on British war orders, the rush demanding all the help possible to secure. Mr. Wharton sailed as soon as he could secure booking. He made many friends during his stay here and a delegation saw him off at the pier.

SUNDAY SCHOOL ASS'N MEETS IN THIS CITY

Rev. Dr. Bradner Addresses Gathering at Grace Church Parish House.

The Plainfield District Sunday School Association of the Episcopal church, which includes Elizabeth, Westfield, Bound Brook, Somerville, Dunellen, Plainfield and other nearby towns held its regular conference in the parish house of Grace church, yesterday afternoon and evening. There were between seventy-five and one hundred teachers present to enjoy an attractive program.

The afternoon session convened at 4 o'clock when a short business meeting was held. At this time Douglas Anderson was elected a delegate to the Diocesan Board of Religious Education and Mrs. Hansen, of Grace church, was chosen as alternate.

Following the transaction of business, Rev. Dr. Charles Bradner, general secretary of the Board of Religious Education, gave an instructive talk on "Old Testament History and Literature." He made use of the blackboard in outlining his plan as to how to teach the Old Testament history. His talk was illuminating and interesting.

In the evening following supper which was served by women of Grace church under the direction of Mrs. J. A. Peterkin, Dr. Bradner again addressed the association, speaking on the subject of "Church History." From his extensive fund of knowledge on this topic the speaker presented many interesting facts. He recommended a number of books to be read by teachers as an aid to them in teaching children of all ages.

REV. C. C. CAIN INVITED TO REMAIN AS PASTOR

The fourth quarterly conference of Grace M. E. church, of the borough, was held last night, at which time Rev. C. C. Cain, the pastor, was invited to return for another year. The routine business of the quarter was transacted and the various reports all showed the church to be in good condition.

Since the beginning of this conference there have been about seventy-five new members taken into the church and the Sunday-school is continually growing. The financial reports showed them to be in good condition.

MUSICAL PROGRAM TO BE GIVEN AT TEMPLE SHOLEM

At the concert to be given in connection with the ball of Temple Sholem tonight, in Columbus Auditorium, an excellent program of vocal and instrumental selections will be rendered.

It will include piano solos by Master Walter Silbert; a soprano solo by Mrs. Adolph Tepper, accompanied by Miss Mae Preger; piano solos by Miss Lea Hamberger; soprano solo by Miss Hattie Kaufman, accompanied by Nathan Kaufman; banjo symphony by A. A. Farland; baritone solos by William Holmes, accompanied by Miss Ruth Weinberger; recitais by Mrs. Leo Loeb, accompanied by Miss Rae Preger; piano solo by Miss Rae Preger, and a soprano solo by Mrs. Edith Hallet Frank, accompanied by Miss Ruth Weinberger.

"CHILDREN IN CHRISTIAN AND NON-CHRISTIAN LANDS"

The monthly missionary meeting of the Women's Association of the Congregational church was held yesterday afternoon in the parish house and several letters and reports were read. Miss Margaret Weseman read an interesting paper on "Children in Christian and Non-Christian Lands." Reports from the recent conference, which was held in Newark, were given by the delegates, Mrs. C. A. Rice, Mrs. John M. Whiton and Mrs. Charles L. Goodrich.

A letter was read from Dr. Parker, who is at the head of the hospital at the Madura, India, missionary station. The local association is at present working to secure funds to put up a permanent structure at that place and an offering was taken for that purpose yesterday. Mrs. Frank A. Weeks served tea after the meeting.

PLAN AUTOMOBILE TRIP.

One candidate was put through the second degree at the weekly meeting of Freedom Castle, No. 42, Knights of Golden Eagle, last night. The regular business of the organization was transacted. During the meeting there was a discussion of a visitation trip through south Jersey next spring and it met with much enthusiasm. The trip will be made by automobile if arranged.

CONDITION IS CRITICAL.

John Dent, steward at the Elks' clubhouse, who has been seriously ill for the past month, was removed to Muhlenberg Hospital, yesterday. His condition is said to be critical.

EMERGENCY CALL OF NEEDLEWORK GUILD

Co-operation of Members Requested to Give Assistance to Belgian Mothers.

The Needlework Guild of America, has issued an emergency call to the members to assist in the work of helping Belgian mothers and the earnest co-operation of every one is desired. The following which is directed to the Plainfield members of the Guild will explain itself:

To the Directors and Members of the Plainfield Branch:

The Needlework Guild of America, as a factor in relief for local and national disaster, has long been appreciated, and the members have doubtless wondered why we have stood aloof at this time, when, as never before, the heart of the nation has been stirred by the cry of distress. Had the call been at another time of the year, we should doubtless have been first aid in the field, but the national officers and executive committee decided that to ask a special collection so near the time of the annual collections of the branches might tell disastrously on the supply of garments for the needs of America, and also on money for the national treasury.

As a national organization for relief, it is plainly our duty to bear our part in the great world's helpfulness. We are fortunate in having a specific aim and object for this collection and to be able to plan and carry it out with the co-operation of our Lyons-France Needlework Guild.

From May, 1913, until July, 1914, Mrs. Stewart, the founder of the Guild in America, lived in Lyons, and founded there a Needlework Guild, which is headed by the Mayor, and officered by representative women. The president is a daughter of a president of the Swiss Republic, and the secretary is an American who has lived for fifteen years in Lyons. There is a strong body of section presidents; one is president of the Lyons Red Cross; two sections are formed of working girls, many of whom, through the closing of factories and shops, are now destitute. Lyons has a population of 600,000; of these, probably 500,000 were dependent on their daily wage.

What The Needlework Guild of America proposes to do is to open workrooms where girls and women will be kept warm through the day and be given material to make into garments for the wounded (of whom as early as September thousands were sent to Lyons), and be paid the war wage of twenty cents a day. Besides, we shall open workrooms for Belgian mothers, where they can bring their babies and be given materials prepared to make into garments for themselves and their children. There are many thousands of Belgians in Lyons—800 arrived one day in September. How long these workrooms shall continue and how many can be opened, depends upon the help of our members. We are asking for money instead of garments because we want to give employment to the starving women, and because, by buying material at wholesale rates in America, we get it at half price. This plan enables us to help, 1st—the wounded soldiers; 2nd—destitute women in the war country; 3rd—our own mills, and 4th—out cotton growers. All shipments will be made through the American Red Cross. In order to conform to our neutrality laws, the work is for all nations.

This circular letter is to be sent to every Guild member, and the committee is hoping for the earnest co-operation of all. If you wish to have a part in this service, send ten cents, or as much more as you care to Mrs. Frank O. Herring, president, 811 Third place, this city.

ROBERT MURRAY WEDS MISS ALICE MILDON

Announcement was made today of the marriage of Robert Murray, the auctioneer, and Miss Alice Mildon, also of this city. The ceremony was performed by Rev. C. W. F. Attlee, of this city, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Steele, at Highland Park, near New Brunswick, on Saturday night, and was witnessed by a few intimate friends of the couple.

Mr. Murray, who was a widower, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Murray, of Sutherlandshire, Scotland, while the bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Mildon, of Cadeleigh, Devonshire, England. Both the bride and groom have lived in this country for several years. Mr. Murray has been engaged in the auctioneering and real estate business for some time, having offices in Plainfield and Elizabeth. The couple are now enjoying a honeymoon and upon their return will reside on Grove street.

Corporation Notice

Notice is hereby given that the following Ordinance has been introduced before the Common Council, read the second time and ordered engrossed preparatory to its third reading, and that it is the intention of the Council to adopt the same.

J. T. MacMURRAY, City Clerk.
Plainfield, N. J., January 11, 1915.

AN ORDINANCE

To License and Regulate Omnibuses, Stages and Other Vehicles Used for the Transportation of Passengers In or Through the City of Plainfield in Connection With Any Omnibus Line or Stage Line.

The Inhabitants of the City of Plainfield, by their Common Council, do enact as follows:

Sec. 1. No person, persons or corporation shall either as principal or as agent or employe of another, drive, run or operate in or through the City of Plainfield, any omnibus line or stage line for the transportation of passengers without first obtaining a license for each vehicle so used for that purpose, as hereinafter provided.

Sec. 2. Any person, persons or corporation may make application, written or printed, or partly written and partly printed, to the Mayor of said City for license to drive, run or operate in or through said City, an omnibus or stage line, but every such application shall be signed by the applicant or a duly authorized agent of the applicant, and shall designate the particular description of vehicle or vehicles intended to be so used. Whenever any such application is granted as hereinafter provided, the City Clerk shall cause the same to be endorsed with the date of the grant and the number of the license granted, and filed in his office.

Sec. 3. The Mayor shall have the power to grant, and to refuse in his discretion, any such application, but every such license granted by the Mayor shall state the object for which it is given, the number and description of vehicles licensed thereunder, the name or names of the person, persons or corporation to whom the license is granted, the number of the license, the date of its expiration, and it shall be signed by the Mayor, attested by the City Clerk and countersigned by the Chief of Police before it shall become operative.

Sec. 4. Every such license shall expire on the first day of March following the date on which it is granted, and no such license shall be granted except upon the payment by the applicant therefor to the City Clerk for the use of the City, of a license fee of Fifteen Dollars ($15.00), for each vehicle to be used thereunder, and no vehicle shall be used thereunder other than a vehicle specified therein.

Sec. 5. The Common Council may, from time to time, by resolution, forbid the use of any particular street or streets, avenue or avenues, highway or highways, or portion or portions thereof, in said City by any vehicle or vehicles licensed under this ordinance and, after the adoption of any such resolution and before the same is rescinded, no vehicle licensed under this ordinance shall use or pass through or along any street, avenue or highway or portion thereof, the use whereof by such vehicle is forbidden by any such resolution.

Sec. 6. Every omnibus, stage or other similar vehicle, the use whereof may be authorized by any license granted under this ordinance, shall at all times have displayed on each side of the outside thereof, in a conspicuous place, the number of the then current license under which it is being used in said city; also another numeral sufficient to distinguish it from every other vehicle used under such license.

Sec. 7. Every vehicle used by virtue of any license granted under this ordinance shall be subject to every ordinance of the City of Plainfield, and every regulation of the Board of Police of the City of Plainfield, touching upon or regulating street traffic or the standing or movement of vehicles in public streets or highways.

Sec. 8. Any license granted under this ordinance may be suspended or revoked by the Mayor or City Judge upon proof to his satisfaction that such licensed person, persons or corporation, or any person acting in his, their or its behalf, has violated this ordinance or any other ordinance of the City of Plainfield, or regulation of the Board of Police aforesaid, provided, that no license shall be so suspended or revoked without reasonable opportunity first afforded to the licensed person or corporation to be heard in his or its own behalf; and no person or corporation shall, during the suspension or after the revocation of his or its license, use any vehicle so licensed, in the operation of any such omnibus line or stage line.

Sec. 9. Each and every person or corporation who or which shall violate, and each and every person or corporation who shall direct, assist in or connive at the violation of this ordinance shall, on conviction thereof, be punished by a fine not exceeding Twenty Dollars for each offense.

NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS.

Notice is hereby given that the Board of Education will meet on Monday, February 5, 1915, at 8 p. m., at the Board room in the High School building, corner Ninth Street and Arlington Avenue, in the City of Plainfield, at which time and place the said Board of Education will receive sealed proposals for furnishing 200 tons, more or less, of the best anthracite Buckwheat coal for steaming and hot-air purposes.

Parties bidding will be required to specify in their bids the name of the coal and shippers of same.

The coal to be non-clinking, thoroughly screened over a sieve fine enough to take out all dust and small particles of coal, and to be of quality acceptable to the Board of Education or their agent.

All coal to be placed in the coal bins in the High School without any extra expense to the Board for handling or trimming the coal in the bins, and to be delivered at such time as the Board may direct.

Bids to specify whether long or short tons are to be delivered.

All proposals to be sealed and endorsed "Proposals for Coal," and addressed to the Secretary of the Board.

No proposals will be opened prior to 8 p. m. Monday, February 1, 1915, and none will be received later than that hour.

Bidders may attend the meeting of the Board on February 1, 1915, and submit their bids in person, but in writing, if desired.

The Board of Education reserves the right to reject any or all bids.

For the Board of Education,
B. VanD. HEDGES,
Secretary.

CHAPTER XIII.

The Adventure With the Little Man.

"I WISHT you wasn't so set in your ways," Shorty demurred. "I'm sure scairt of that glacier. No man ought to tackle it by his lonely."

Smoke laughed cheerfully and ran his eye up the glistening face of the tiny glacier that filled the head of the valley. "Here it is August already, and the days have been getting shorter for two months," he epitomized the situation. "You know quartz, and I don't. But I can bring up the grub, while you keep after that mother lode. So long. I'll be back by tomorrow evening."

He turned and started.

"I got a hunch somethin's goin' to happen," Shorty pleaded after him.

But Smoke's reply was a bantering laugh. He held on down the little valley, occasionally wiping the sweat from his forehead, the while his feet crushed through ripe mountain raspberries and delicate ferns that grew beside patches of sun sheltered ice.

In the early spring he and Shorty had come to the Stewart river and launched out into the amazing chaos of the region where Surprise lake lay. And all of the spring and half of the summer had been consumed in futile wanderings, when, on the verge of turning back, they caught their first glimpse of the baffling, gold bottomed sheet of water which had lured and fooled a generation of miners.

Making their camp in the old cabin which Smoke had discovered on his previous visit, they learned three things—first, heavy nugget gold was carpeted thickly on the lake bottom; next, the gold could be dived for in the shallower portions, but the temperature of the water was man killing, and, finally, the draining of the lake was too stupendous a task for two men in the shorter half of a short summer. Undeterred, reasoning from the coarseness of the gold that it had not traveled far, they had set out in search of the mother lode. They had crossed the last glacier that frowned on the southern rim and devoted themselves to the puzzling maze of small valleys and canyons beyond, which, by most unmountain-like methods, drained, or had at one time drained, into the lake.

The valley Smoke was descending gradually widened after the fashion of any normal valley, but at the lower end it pinched narrowly between high, precipitous walls and abruptly stopped in a cross wall. At the base of this, in a welter of broken rock, the streamlet disappeared, evidently finding its way out underground.

Climbing the cross wall, from the top Smoke saw the lake beneath him. Unlike any mountain lake he had ever seen, it was not blue. Instead its intense peacock green tokened its shallowness. It was this shallowness that made its draining feasible. All about arose jumbled mountains, with ice scored peaks and crags, grotesquely shaped and grouped. All was topsy turvy and unsystematic—a Dore nightmare.

Across the lake, seemingly not more than half a mile, but, as he well knew, five miles away, he could see the bunch of spruce trees and the cabin. He looked again to make sure and saw smoke clearly rising from the chimney. Somebody else had surprised themselves into finding Surprise lake, was his conclusion as he turned to climb the southern wall.

From the top of this he came down into a little valley, flower floored and lazy with the hum of bees, that behaved quite as a reasonable valley should, in so far as it made legitimate entry on the lake. What was wrong with it was its length—scarcely 100 yards—its head a straight up and down cliff of 1,000 feet, over which a stream pitched itself in descending veils of mist.

And here he encountered more smoke, floating lazily upward in the warm sunshine, beyond an outjet of rock. As he came around the corner he heard a light metallic tap-tapping and a merry whistling that kept the beat. Then he saw the man, an upturned shoe between his knees, into the sole of which he was driving hob spikes.

"Hello!" was the stranger's greeting, and Smoke's heart went out to the man in ready liking. "Just in time for a snack. There's coffee in the pot, a couple of cold flapjacks and some jerky."

"I'll go you if I lose," was Smoke's acceptance as he sat down. "I've been rather skimped on the last several meals, but there's oodles of grub over in the cabin."

"Across the lake? That's what I was heading for."

"Seems Surprise lake is becoming populous," Smoke complained, emptying the coffeepot.

"Go on, you're joking, aren't you?" the man said, surprise painted on his face.

Smoke laughed. "That's the way it takes everybody. You see those high ledges across there to the northwest? There's where I first saw it. No warning. Just suddenly caught the view of the whole lake from there. I'd given up looking for it too."

"Same here," the other agreed. "I'd headed back and was expecting to fetch the Stewart last night when out I popped in sight of the lake. If that's it where's the Stewart? And where have I been all the time? And how did you come here? And what's your name?"

"Bellew—Kit Bellew."

"Oh, I know you!" The man's eyes and face were bright with a joyous smile, and his hand flashed eagerly out to Smoke's. "I've heard all about you!"

He was a slender man, wiry with health, with quick black eyes and a magnetism of camaraderie.

"And this is Surprise lake?" he murmured incredulously. "And its bottom's buttered with gold?"

"Sure. There's some of the churning." Smoke dipped in his overalls pocket and brought forth half a dozen nuggets.

"Well, gosh-dash my dingbats, if you haven't beaten me to it," Carson swore whimsically, but his disappointment was patent. "And I thought I'd scooped the whole caboodle. Anyway, I've had the fun of getting here."

"Fun!" Smoke cried. "Why, if we can ever get our hands on all that bottom we'll make Rockefeller look like 30 cents."

"But it's yours," was Carson's objection.

"Nothing to it, my friend. You've got to realize that no gold deposit like it has been discovered in all the history of mining. It will take you and me and my partner and all the friends we've got to lay our hands on it. All Bonanza and Eldorado dumped together wouldn't be richer than half an acre down there. The problem is to drain the lake. It will take millions. And there's only one thing I'm afraid of. There's so much of it that if we fail to control the output it will bring about the demonetization of gold."

"And you tell me"— Carson broke off, speechless and amazed.

"Am glad to have you. It will take a year or two, with all the money we can raise, to drain the lake. It can be done. I've looked over the ground. But it will take every man in the country that's willing to work for wages. We'll need an army, and we need right now decent men in on the ground floor. Are you in?"

"Am I in? Don't I look it? I feel so much like a millionaire that I'm real timid about crossing that big glacier. Couldn't afford to break my neck now. Wish I had some more of those hob spikes. I was just hammering the last in when you came along. How's yours? Let's see."

Smoke held up his foot.

"Worn smooth as a skating rink!" Carson cried. "You've certainly been hiking some. Wait a minute, and I'll pull some of mine out for you."

But Smoke refused to listen. "Besides," he said, "I've got about forty feet of rope cached where we take the ice. My partner and I used it coming over. It will be a cinch."

It was a hard, hot climb. The sun blazed dazzlingly on the ice surface, and with streaming pores they panted from the exertion. There were places, crisscrossed by countless fissures and crevasses, where an hour of dangerous toil advanced them no more than a hundred yards. At 2 in the afternoon beside a pool of water bedded in the ice Smoke called a halt.

"Let's tackle some of that jerky," he said. "I've been on short allowance, and my knees are shaking. Besides, we're across the worst. Three hundred yards will fetch us to the rocks, and it's easy going, except for a couple of nasty fissures and one bad one that leads us down toward the bulge. There's a weak ice bridge there, but Shorty and I managed it."

"I'm lighter than you by forty pounds," Carson said. "Let me go first."

They stood on the edge of the crevasse. It was enormous and ancient, fully 100 feet across, with sloping, age eaten sides instead of sharp angled rims. At this one place it was bridged by a huge mass of pressure hardened snow that was itself half ice. Even the bottom of this mass they could not see, much less the bottom of the crevasse. Crumbling and melting, the bridge threatened imminent collapse.

"Looks pretty bad," Carson admitted with an ominous head shake.

"But we've got to tackle it," Smoke said. "We can't camp here on the ice all night. And there's no other way. Shorty and I explored for a mile up. It was in better shape, though, when we crossed."

"It's one at a time, and me first." Carson took the part coil of rope from Smoke's hand. "You'll have to cast off. I'll take the rope and the pick. Gimme your hand so I can slip down easy."

Slowly and carefully he lowered himself the several feet to the bridge, where he stood, making final adjustments for the perilous traverse. On his back was his pack outfit. Around his neck, resting on his shoulders, he coiled the rope, one end of which was still fast to his waist.

"I'd give a mighty good part of my millions right now for a bridge construction gang," he said, but his cheery, whimsical smile belied the words.

The pick and the long stick he used as an alpenstock he balanced horizontally after the manner of a ropewalker. He thrust one foot forward tentatively, drew it back and steeled himself with a visible physical effort.

Of Interest to Women and the Home

Animal Jingles
FOR LITTLE FOLKS
BY ALICE CREW GALL

J. Augustus Rabbit
(Who Told Fibs.)

Little J. Augustus Rabbit had a most distressing habit
Of telling things that were not true; he told them every day.
If he told you he was sickly you would make your mind up quickly
He was well, because you couldn't trust a single thing he'd say.

Now, his parents were distracted at the dreadful way he acted;
They were afraid when he grew up he'd meet some awful fate.
And they sounded night and mornings any number of grave warnings,
And begged of him to mend his ways before it was too late.

And they tried so hard to break him of this fault they'd even shake him
Every time they caught him telling anything that was not true.
And Augustus promised truly he would curb his tongue unruly,
But he still went right on fibbing in spite of all that they could do.

Finally once when he was hopping through the field and often stopping
To nibble at a root or at a tender blade of grass,
He heard a dreadful snapping and felt some iron a-trapping
His little paw; he tried to run, but could not move, alas!

Then he tried to call his mother, his sister or his brother.
He called: "I'm fastened in a trap; please come and let me out!"
Although they heard him plainly, he called and called them vainly.
They said: "That is another lie; we know what you're about."

And because that little rabbit had the dreadful fibbing habit
No one would pay attention when he pitifully called;
And if little Mary Linnet hadn't happened by that minute,
I reckon J. Augustus would have stayed there till he died.

If any little girl or boy who reads this sorry tale,
Has J. Augustus' fault I hope he'll cure it without fail.
For truth is just the pearl of pearls; I'm older and I know.
If you'd be happy, boys and girls, don't tell what is not so.

The Wife's Money
BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

"What has become of Jack Barnes?" asked Mrs. Farwell, who was visiting her native town after ten years' absence.

"Poor Jack is a sad wreck," replied her hostess. "You knew he married Nellie Graves, didn't you?"

"It seems to me I did hear that. Wasn't he in politics for a time?" and Mrs. Farwell settled herself in a morris chair and prepared to rest.

"I must tell you about him. His story would be amusing if it were not tragic," said Mrs. Jones, threading a needle and slipping her darner into a stocking.

"What was Jack doing when you left? I must begin where you left off in his history," she laughed.

"Let me see," came reminiscently from the morris chair. "I think he was a lawyer's clerk or something of that sort. Wasn't he studying for the bar?"

"Yes, something of that kind. He finally went to the capital as stenographer for the Hon. Jacob Strauss, and it seemed for a while that he had the making of a man in him. It was about this time that he married Nellie."

Mrs. Jones paused to raise the window shade and draw her chair into the light.

"I don't seem to remember much about her," remarked Mrs. Farwell.

"Oh, she blondined her hair and jingled with chains and lockets and chatelains and was as full of airs as a music box.

"To proceed, as our minister says, Jake took to drinking. I do not know whether Nellie drove him to it or not. At first he was never seen drunk in the daytime, but after Nellie was obliged to open her fashionable boarding house he occasionally filled up from his shoes to his hat, and several times walked into the dining room and made a scene before he could be persuaded to retire to private quarters. Then it was that Nellie had a room fitted up for him in the barn and he was never allowed to enter the front door

"When he is sober she employs him to do errands. He takes care of the walk and lawn in summer and the furnace in winter. She notified all saloonkeepers in town that she would pay no bills for drink. The queerest part of the whole story is that she pays him cash for everything he does and charges him for his meals. What she gives him about pays his board, not much more, so when he drinks he cannot eat. She clothes him and tries to keep him comfortable, but he lives the life of an outcast on the skirts of his home."

"I wonder why she never put him in a cure hospital," said Mrs. Farwell, after a pause.

"Perhaps she never thought of it," replied Mrs. Jones. "She is not much of a thinker. Few people are."

"Well, I must go and start supper. It is nearly five o'clock," and Mrs. Jones carried her mending basket away with her.

YOUNG GIRLS' DAINTY ACCESSORIES.

On the left is a pretty little bag of silk and velvet daintily mounted in gilt and decorated with small tassels in self-tone. To the right is a charming muff of tangerine velvet shirred on cords and trimmed with bands of skunk. This is, of course, intended for evening use. A pretty little chain purse of brightly colored beads is shown with this. The design is one of conventionalized leaves in green and little pink flowers. In the lower left corner is a boudoir cap of white net and lace. This fits the head snugly and is trimmed with single rows of pearls and edged with pleated net.

VOTES FOR WOMEN

Conducted by the Equal Suffrage League of Plainfield and North Plainfield.

The Vote in the House of Representatives.

Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, president of the International Suffrage Association, and chairman of the Empire State campaign committee, says:

"There is nothing coming to the Suffragists but victory. A ballot like that of yesterday is only stopping to take a poll to see how far we have gone. Not very long ago such a debate on woman suffrage in the House of Representatives would have been impossible. Ten years ago we wouldn't have carried a corporal's guard of voters. Five years ago we would not have carried half the number that we had on Tuesday.

"There were men who were in favor of woman suffrage who did not vote for us because they believe in State right. We were pleased that so many of the Southern men who stand for State rights voted in favor of prohibition. It shows that their belief in State rights does not hold. Tuesday's action marks a great onward progress and shows that we shall have a favorable vote soon."

The surprising thing about the vote on the Woman Suffrage Amendment in the House, on Tuesday, was, that outside of the South only one State voted solidly against it. That was the rockbound State of Vermont. If Delaware is considered a Northern State, there were two—two of the smallest Northern States.—N. Y. Times, Jan. 14.

The States where woman suffrage has already been granted, voted, of course, almost solidly for the amendment.

Suffrage has made some headway in the South. Eight members of the Alabama delegation voted against it, but one voted for suffrage. Of the nine members of the Tennessee delegation, four voted for it and five against it. West Virginia went for suffrage by a vote of four to one; Oklahoma by a vote of five to three. Even in Virginia and Maryland, centers of conservatism, there were votes for suffrage; only one in each State, but twenty years ago neither one of those States would have elected a Congressman who could have voted for such an innoration.

In New Jersey, where the question will come up this year, seven votes were cast for it and four against it.

How Suffrage Stands in the Separate States.

The passage of the woman suffrage amendment through this year's Legislature in Massachusetts, New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania, should not be difficult, if the vote in the last Legislature is any guide. In Massachusetts, it stood 34 to 2 in the upper house and 168 to 39 in the lower; in New York, 40 to 2 in the upper house and 125 to 5 in the lower; in Pennsylvania, 26 to 22 in the upper house and 131 to 70 in the lower; in New Jersey, 15 to 3 in the upper house and 49 to 4 in the lower.

This year in New York, Pennsylvania and New Jersey, all the political parties have put suffrage planks in their platforms, and the passage of the amendment through the Legislature is looked upon as a foregone conclusion. In Massachusetts, all the parties have declared for submission except the Republicans. Likewise last year the Republicans withheld their official endorsement, yet two-thirds of the Republicans in the House voted for it and it went through with a sweeping majority. And since then two more States have given women the ballot.

A. S. B.

Suffragists in Washington.

It is significant that many of the distinguished speakers at the National Child Labor Conference were Suffragists. The great peace meeting went on record unanimously in favor of votes for women.

The President a Convert.

President Wilson has become a believer in equal suffrage. This was shown by his answers to the women who lately interviewed him on the subject. While holding firmly to his opinion that the question ought to be settled not by national but by State action, the President expressly disclaimed any antagonism toward the principle. Six years ago he was opposed to it, and stated his opposition freely. In the past five years the number of suffrage States has increased from four to twelve; but we do not believe that Mr. Wilson's change of view is due to policy. He has shown that he "wears no collar but his own," as one editor of a great daily puts it, and that he can be thoroughly stiff-necked when he chooses. But ever since he became President the Suffragists have plied him with the evidence that in the enfranchised States woman's ballot has done good. The opponents, of course, have done their best to persuade him of the contrary; but the arguments of the Suffragists have been the more convincing. The evidence will convince any other man who is intelligent and open-minded. What is now needed is to bring it home to every legislator and every voter.

Household Hints

THE CHRISTMAS TURKEY

Poultry should be dressed as soon as it is killed, and turkey is no exception to this rule. The feathers come off easier when the fowl is warm and when stripped off toward the head.

If the skin is very tender, pull the feathers out the opposite way.

Use a knife to remove the pinfeathers. Singe the hairs and down by holding the fowl over a gas jet or over a roll of lighted paper held over the fire.

Remove wind pipe, pull crop away from the skin on neck and breast, and cut off close to opening into the body. Be careful not to tear the skin. Always pull the crop out from the end of the neck, rather than through a cut in the skin, which, if made, has to be sewed together.

To dress a turkey for roasting: First, make on incision near the vent; insert two fingers, loosen the fat from the skin and separate membranes lying close to the body. Keep fingers up close to breastbone until you can reach in beyond the liver and heart, and loosen on either side down toward the back. The gall bladder lies under the lobe of the liver on the left side, and if the fingers be kept up and everything loosened before drawing out, there will be no danger of its breaking.

The kidneys and lungs are often left in by careless cooks, but everything that can be removed should be taken out.

When the fowl has been thoroughly cleaned it will not require much washing. Hold it under the faucet or rinse out the inside quickly, then wipe dry.

When these directions have been observed, proceed to stuff the turkey with bread or cracker crumbs highly seasoned with sage, thyme, salt and pepper; moisten stuffing with half cup of melted butter and enough hot water to make it quite wet. Add one beaten egg. Some use a little salt pork finely chopped, but, of course, that is a matter of taste. Oysters, chestnuts, chopped celery or stoned raisins make a pleasing variety; especially do many people like stoned raisins and celery in their turkey dressing.

Place turkey on a rack in a pan, rub well with butter and dredge with salt, pepper and flour. Put in hot oven; when flour is browned, reduce heat and add a pint of water. Baste with butter until nicely browned, then with the fat in the pan. Baste often, and dredge with salt and flour after every basting.

Allow three hours for an eight-pound turkey. Cook until the legs will separate from the body.

With roast turkey, cranberry sauce or current jelly is served.

Gravy for roast turkey: Put giblets, or neck, liver, gizzard and heart, on to boil in one quart water; boil until tender and water is reduced to a pint. Then mash liver and, if desired, chop gizzard, heart and the meat from neck.

Pour off the clear fat from the dripping pan and put settlings into a sauce pan, rinse out pan with the water in which giblets were boiled, and pour this water into the sauce pan and put on to boil.

Put three or four tablespoonfuls of the fat into a frying pan, adding enough dry flour to absorb all the fat, and when brown add giblet liquor gradually, and stir till it thickens. Season with salt and pepper.

If not smooth, strain it. Pour half into gravy-boat and add chopped giblets to the remaining half, and serve separately, as all may not care for the giblet gravy.

THINGS WORTH KNOWING.

When pipes freeze put one-fourth peck of coarse ice cream salt in half a large bucketful of hot water and let it come to a boil. Stir as it heats, so that all the salt dissolves, and pour this down the nearest straight connection that is frozen. If it does not effect a thaw, repeat; it must be a serious case of "freeze" that will withstand a second application. It sometimes takes several hours for the salt to penetrate the ice. If the supply pipe freezes, apply old blankets wrung out of boiling water, or see what a hot water bottle or bag "put to the pipe's back" will do. These simple directions may save you the expense of a plumber's bill.

Wash boys' corduroy trousers in good suds, then rinse through three waters and dry without wringing; more satisfactory if dried on a winter day.

For doors and windows that do not fit closely and that are not used in winter, first lock door or window, then on the outside paste passepartout over the cracks. Passepartout can be bought in 10c rolls, any color desired. This helps very much in keeping out the wind and the passpartout can be easily removed in the spring.

Executor, Administrator,

Guardian, Trustee.

The One Safe Way

of providing for the future comfort of one's family is to make a will, appointing an executor who will be competent to carry out its provisions.

The Plainfield Trust Company can fulfill this requirement. Unlike an individual executor, it is not subject to death or sickness; it will not err through lack of experience. Come in and talk with our Officers about this matter. They have a proposition which may interest you.

STRANGE AS IT MAY SEEM

One of the most common contradictions in the average man is to thoughtfully provide an estate to sustain his family after he is gone, and then leave the estate unprotected, in the hands of inexperienced heirs or under the control of a friend who may not be equipped to handle or invest the property.

And even if an individual is competent to act as executor—trustee, he cannot be depended on to serve. He may not survive you; he may become disabled or move away; he may want to travel and not be tied down. No such uncertainties attend the appointment of this responsible Company. Its service is efficient and unfailing.

Conditions

Are terms of agreement. Conditions never have been or ever will be ideal. Circumstances are governed largely by will power, therefore don't let anybody tell you that men are the creatures of circumstances. Will power make circumstances the creatures of men. You are the architect of your own fortune. Think well of yourself, assume your own position, be neat, courteous, attentive, and above all be careful in your habits of dress. Come to us and let us show you our easy credit system. We are prepared to extend to you our services of weekly payments to the outfitting of the whole family. We have what you want; then why not come and let us show you our line of Winter goods.

are often easily formed. We drift into wrong ways of doing things for no reason at all.

Don't drift into the wrong clothing shop. Look into the claims of local merchants carefully, then you'll know why thousands of people have bought everything they wear at Laurie's for years.

VALUABLE AID TO MEMORY THINKING

Former Senator E. R. Ackerman Writes Interesting Story on Philately.

PERSONAL EXPERIENCE

Plainfielder Tells How He Was Led to Make a Stamp Collection Now Said to Be One of the Finest in Existence.

In a recent issue of the Collector's Blue Book, a publication devoted to philately, the following contributed article by former Senator Ernest R. Ackerman appeared under the caption, "A Personal Reminiscence." In it the former Senator brings out a thought in connection with stamp collecting which tends to show that it is an excellent memory-trainer and incentive to the study of geography and history.

Since the article was written, the developments in the European war indicate that Mr. Ackerman's extensive collection will be materially enhanced by reasons of the changes which have been wrought and are likely to be extended, changing the issues of postage stamps in the countries involved, nearly all of which he has visited and gathered specimens for his collection.

Mr. Ackerman says:

"In the year 1875 my father was a patent attorney, and having much correspondence with the authorities in Washington, his mail at that time was liberally covered with the various values of the Department of Interior stamps, which I promptly removed and placed in my album. If I had saved the envelopes with the stamps on them, what interesting mementos they would now make.

"I traded duplicate 'Interior' stamps for those of foreign countries, which caused me as a schoolboy to take an active interest in geography. I soon wanted to travel, and a few years later my wish was gratified. It was most pleasant to buy over the counter from foreign dealers with

FIRST STEP TOWARDS ELKS' MINSTREL SHOW

The first steps toward its annual minstrel show were taken by Plainfield Lodge of Elks, last night, when Exalted Ruler Frank H. Smith appointed the following committee: William Mulvey, Joseph C. Martin, John V. Todd, Walter Marder, William C. Smith, Jr., William N. Runyon, Dr. C. L. Crist, Harry Weber and V. W. Nash, Jr. These members will meet next Wednesday night to select their chairman and start preliminaries. The acknowledged success of last year's performance created enthusiasm among the lodge members that still exist and every effort will be made to have the 1915 show bigger, better and grander than ever.

BISHOP MATTHEWS WILL VISIT PLAINFIELD MARCH 10

In the list of visitations and appointments announced by the Very Rev. Paul Clement Matthews, who will be confirmed as bishop of the Southern Diocese of New Jersey, at St. Mary's church, Burlington, next Monday, are the following for Union county:

Tuesday, Jan. 26—Convocation of New Brunswick at Elizabeth; men's meeting and dinner in Trinity church in the evening.

Wednesday, Feb. 3—Morning session, Woman's Auxiliary, Westfield.

Sunday, Feb. 14—Quinquagesima, evening, Grace church, Elizabeth.

Wednesday, March 10—Grace church, Plainfield.

Friday, March 19—Holy Comforter church, Rahway.

Friday, March 26—Linden.

Sunday, March 28—St. John's church, Elizabeth, in the morning, and St. Paul's church, Rahway, in the evening.

PARENTS OF A DAUGHTER.

Mr. and Mrs. William Garman, of 37 DeKalb avenue, are receiving congratulations upon the arrival of a ten-pound daughter. The little one arrived in time to be present at the birthday celebration of her aunt, Miss Florence Taylor, and has been given her name, Florence Elizabeth.

URGES INTEREST OF WHOLE COMMUNITY

Commission on Unemployed Makes Strong Appeal to Every Citizen.

There is one thing for which the Commission for the Relief of the Unemployed may feel exceedingly thankful. Those who have given to the support of its work have done so most generously.

The amount raised to date, however, is far short of the estimated requirement up to April 1st, and the number of subscriptions is increasing very slowly, although the Commission has announced that any unexpended balance will be returned pro rata to the contributors. There is no desire to accumulate a surplus.

It has been felt from the start that this relief should be the work of the whole community, and that every one who can possibly do so should have at least some small part in it. For that reason there has been no direct appeal to individuals. What has been given has been entirely voluntary, but there are surely more than 78 people in Plainfield and North Plainfield who can give something, even if only one or two dollars, and who would do so if they fully realized the conditions.

Anyone who is inclined to question the existence of an unusual amount of unemployment or of unusual distress, should bear in mind that the Commission is composed of many of the leading citizens of the community; that they are business men; that they approached this matter with entirely open minds, and are far from willing to cry "Wolf!" unnecessarily. After the Commission was formed, a careful investigation was made of every case registered, and all of those not actually in need of work were eliminated, or at least subordinated.

All of the eastern cities have this same problem to face. The New York papers teem with it every day. We are fortunate that it is no more acute here than it is, and that it is chiefly limited to the unskilled class. Every man in town who has a job should realize his blessing sufficiently to want to do what he can for those who can't get one just now. Is anything more hopeless or more helpless than not to be able to work even when you want to?

Up to and including January 18, contributions not previously acknowledged, have been received from: "A Friend," S. H. Patterson, Mrs. H. D. Hibbard, E. C. Stevens, Mrs. C. E. Ryder, Proceeds of Subscription Dance on December 31st, and Week of Prayer Offerings at the First M. E. church, First Presbyteri*an church, First Baptist church, and* Trinity Reformed church. The total to date is $2,652.63.

CONDITIONS IN LOCAL SHOPS GREATLY IMPROVED

Industrial conditions in some of the local plants have improved greatly during the past two or three weeks. At the Saurer plant of the International Motor Company there is plenty of work, where several orders have been received for both small and large trucks. It is said that nearly 450 men are employed in the shops at the present time and there has also been some night work of late. The new orders, it is believed, will keep the force busy for an indefinite time.

Another hopeful sign is that the Levgar Structural Iron Works has again resumed full time with a force of nearly 200 men. This is likely to last, it is reported, for a month or more, and in the meantime additional orders may be received. The Spicer Manufacturing Company is also said to be rushed with orders and a full force is employed at that plant.

The Pond Machine Tool Works seems to be holding its own with other industries in the city with no apparent sign of a let-up for the present. The force has been gradually increased from time to time as the work warrants, in each case the old men being given preference in the matter of employment.

There is no reported change at the Potter Press Works and it is problematical when the plant will resume at anything like its normal conditions. The Walter Scott Press Works appear to be busy with nearly the full force employed.

UNDERGEOS OPERATION.

Otto Gunther, one of the firemen attached to the East Second street headquarters, who has been ill for several weeks with a poisonous infection of the face, underwent an operation yesterday. It was performed by Dr. Albert Pittis and has already afforded Mr. Gunther much relief. It is believed that he will be able to be about again in a week or ten days.

DOG SHOW WILL BE A BIG AFFAIR

Many Classes to Be Judged in Local Kennel Club's Indoor Exhibition.

VALUABLE PRIZE LIST

Will Be Held in the Lufburrow Building on West Front Street—List of Breeds—Many Entries Expected—Date of Closing.

Entries for the match dog show of the Plainfield Kennel Club will close Wednesday, January 27, with the secretary, F. N. Anderson, 615 Central avenue. Final details for the event were made at a meeting of the club held in the Queen City Hotel, last night, when it was decided to include the following classes:

St. Bernard's, Great Danes, Russian Wolfhounds, Greyhounds, Foxhounds, Pointers, Setters, Cocker Spaniels, Beagles, Daschunde, Collies, German Sheepdogs, Poodles, Dalmations, Bulldogs, Airedale, Bull Terriers, French Bulls, Boston Terriers, Fox Terrier, Irish Terriers, Scottish Terriers, Pomeranians, English Toy Spaniels, Japanese Spaniels and Pekinese.

Two extra variety classes were provided for any breed not already in the above list, one for twenty pounds and one for under twenty pounds. Handsome ribbons will be awarded to first and second winners in each class and many fine cups and special prizes will act as an incentive to keen competition. The special awards will be divided by the committee to be allotted to various breeds. A very prominent judge has been selected to officiate and his name will be announced in the near future. He will probably pass on all breeds.

The show, which will be the first of its nature ever attempted by the Queen City organization, will be held in the Lufburrow building, on West Front street, opposite Grove street. A better place for such an event would be hard to single out, it being in the central part of the town and easily accessible to trolley service.

Keen interest is being manifested by local dog owners, the show being exclusive for Plainfield fanciers, and it is expected that the event will act as a "feeler" to determine the possible entries for the annual bench show of the club to be held in the near future.

JOHN P. DALY NOW IN PRODUCING FIELD

Plainfield's Well Known Theatrical Man to Put Big Show on the Road.

John P. Daly, Plainfield's well-known theatrical man, has purchased John C. Fisher's elaborate production of "The Red Rose," and from now on will be a factor in the producing field of his profession. He has been in the game for the past twenty years and his latest venture marks another step in his successful career. "The Red Rose" is a musical comedy carrying a company of eighty people. The opening performance under the Plainfielder's management will be at Allentown, Pa., on February 15, after which it goes on a long tour through the Western States and Canada.

Mr. Daly, whose home is at 32 Westervelt avenue, began his theatrical career in what was then Music Hall, but is now known as Proctor's He was first an usher, then treasurer and finally manager. He resigned the last named to act as advance man for "The Cotton Spinner," one of the heaviest melo-dramas on the road when it was first produced. Mr. Daly afterwards managed David Higgins for several seasons and in recent years, has been connected with Klaw & Erlanger's managing staff. He piloted their original "Pink Lady" production through one of the most profitable ventures the big concern ever had. Mr. Daly's last position was as manager of the musical comedy, "The Debutante," in which Hazel Dawn is starring and now playing at the Knickerbocker, New York. A big delegation of Plainfielders will wish success to the new producer at the Allentown premiere.

NEW HARDWARE CONCERN.

The Howard Hardware Company, a concern composed of local people, has leased the store at 144 North avenue and will conduct a general hardware business. Bergen Naylor is managing the business at the present time.

Mrs. Silas Roberts, of Wharton, is visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Collins, of Duer street.

COUPLE'S WEDDING SURPRISE TO FRIENDS

Miss Aurelia Brown Becomes the Bride of Arthur Newman.

Friends of Miss Aurelia Brown, of Union street, and Arthur Newman, of Spooner venue, received a surprise today when they announced that they had been married. The ceremony took place in St. Elizabeth's church, New York, Tuesday afternoon, and was performed by the rector. Only a few relatives were present. Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Brown, of New York, parents of the bride, acted as attendants. A reception was afterwards tendered the young couple at the parents home.

Both Mr. Newman and his bride are well-known throughout the city. The former is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Max Newman, and is a successful plumbing and steam-fitting contractor. His bride was graduated from Muhlenberg Hospital's Training School last year, and has since practiced her profession in this vicinity. Her father is a prominent New York hotel man. Mr. and Mrs. Newman will reside for the present at 600 Spooner avenue.

APPEAL IS MADE BY 'ICE-WAGON' CONNORS

Outcome Will Be Watched With Interest by Finger-Print Experts.

Trenton, Jan. 21—Charles, alias "Ice-Wagon" Connors, the notorious Chicagoan, who was convicted of having looted the home of former State Senator Ernest R. Ackerman, in Plainfield, on January 3, 1914, took an appeal to the Supreme Court from his conviction in Union county, today. When found guilty, last month, Judge James C. Connolly sentenced him to serve a sentence of from three and one-half to seven years in State Prison. He is charged with having stolen jewelry and other valuables amounting to $17,585.

Decision on the appeal will be awaited with interest, as Connors was convicted solely on fingerprint evidence and because of the effect the outcome will have on the Bertillon system of fingerprint identification in the apprehension and conviction of criminals. The Connors case is one in which the Bertillon men throughout the entire country are interested. During his trial some of the world's most famous authorities on this subject were present.

DANCE FOR MUHLENBERG HOSPITAL ON FEBRUARY 11

Under the auspices of the Women's Auxiliary Board of Muhlenberg Hospital the second dance in the series for the benefit of the hospital will be given at the High School auditorium Thursday night, February 11. So successful was the first dance that the auxiliary is much encouraged in its plans to provide a series of similar affairs during the winter months. The hospital received $190 from the first dance.

This time the auxiliary announces that the price of the tickets will include refreshments which on the previous occasion were extra. The price of the tickets will be increased slightly. The committee in charge announce that the music will be a feature.

GRAND JURY RETURNS FORTY-SIX INDICTMENTS

Elizabeth, Jan. 21—The Union County Grand Jury returned a total of forty-six bills of indictment to Judge James C. Connolly, in the Court of Common Pleas, this morning. The jurors thought that their labors were concluded, but learned that there are several other matters to be considered and in consequence were not discharged. This will not, however, interfere with the dinner to be given in Plainfield tonight.

Miss Olive DeLany, of Plainfield, a graduate nurse, who is a native of Canada, through her attorney, H. C. Runyon, made application to the court for naturalization papers.

N. B. SMALLEY A GRANDPA.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence I. Smalley, of Watchung avenue, are parents of a boy born to them this afternoon. Mrs. Smalley is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Farland, of this city, while Mr. Smalley is the son of former Mayor and Mrs. N. B. Smalley, of the borough.

JUDGESHIP FIGHT STIRS SOMERSET

Many Candidates Are After the District Court Job.

MAY COMBINE COURTS

George Pace and William Vosseller Are Said to Be Leading for the Appointment—George Bird is Also a Candidate.

The appointment of a district court judge of Somerset county to succeed Isaac P. Runyon, of North Plainfield, who has held the position since the establishment of the court, is arousing unusual interest throughout the country. The contest, it is said, is now on between George Pace, an attorney of East Millstone, who has the backing of William J. DeMond, of Somerville, and William Vosseller, of Bound Brook, who is said to have the support of George LaMont, the State Banking and Insurance Commissioner.

The claims of both men have been presented so forcibly to Governor Fielder that, it is said, he is having considerable trouble in reaching a decision. Judge Runyon's term expires on March 1, and as it is understood that the appointment is to be a partisan one, he is not seeking a re-appointment. The salary is $1,200.

George W. Bird, of the law firm of Swackhamer & Bird, recently announced himself as a candidate for the job, but it is believed that the successful man will come from some other part of the county. W. V. Steele, of Somerville, is also a candidate.

It has been suggested that it would be a wise move to combine the two courts at Somerville and have the judge of the Common Pleas Court look after both. Those who favor this plan say that there are many times during the year when the higher court judge has little to do and he could easily look after the one-day-a-week business in the district court. By this arrangement the county would save money as well.

Under the present law a judge of the Common Pleas Court can sit in a district court and while it has not been a general practice there are many who believe that it would be by far the best arrangement and to a large extent would eliminate politics from the lower court and give better results.

There is a report that Judge Daniel Beekman is likely to be named prosecutor of Somerset county to succeed the present incumbent, F. A. Pope. S. S. Swackhamer several months ago announced himself as a candidate for this appointment, but judging from the reports coming from the county seat he does not appear to have a sufficient amount of strength to land the berth.

CHARLES J. FISK IS CHOSEN PRESIDENT

New Jersey Association for Poultry Improvement Holds Annual Meeting.

The annual meeting of the New Jersey Association for Poultry Improvement was held last night in the Coward building, Park avenue. There was a large attendance and officers were elected. Former Mayor Charles J. Fisk was chosen president to succeed W. H. Taverner, of Westfield. Mr. Fisk has been an enthusiastic member of the association for several years and has worked earnestly for its advancement. Mr. Fisk has already begun work on the program for the coming year, which will undoubtedly be one of the best in the history of the association.

The other officers elected are: Thomas Lindsay, vice president; William J. Trembath, re-elected secretary; Joseph Weiner, of Dunellen, assistant secretary; William F. Isenmann, treasurer, and Miss Laura Osgood, librarian. The following trustees were also elected: Rufus Delafield, Charles V. Smith, G. H. Whitney, Frank McInerney and R. H. Armstrong. W. H. Taverner was elected to the honorary roll. Reports were read covering the recent poultry show held here in December.

SENTENCE SUSPENDED.

Louis VanNest, of 215 East Fifth street, was arrested by Marshal Hermann, of the borough, last night, for driving without a light. He was arraigned before Recorder Fred Hand, this morning, and sentence was suspended.

EXCELLENT PROGRAM FOR MUSIC LOVERS

Temple Sholem Event in Columbus Club Was Largely Attended.

Music lover and critics attended the first annual concert given under the auspices of Temple Sholem, in Columbus Auditorium, last night, the event being a great success and thoroughly enjoyable. The vocal and instrumental numbers were listened to with keen interest by the large and appreciative audience and each individual selection received a round of raptuous applause and subsequent encore.

In an address of welcome, William Newcorn, one of the active workers in the Temple, thanked the audience for its patronage and the talent for its services. The renditions were given by a galaxy of local and visiting students of music and many classical numbers featured the excellent program. As a result a neat sum was realized for the work in Temple Sholem.

The artists included Walter Silbert, Miss Rae Preger, Miss Ruth Weinberger, Mrs. Adolph Tepper, William Holmes and A. A. Farland, of Plainfield; Miss Leah Hamberger, Mrs. Leo Loeb and Mrs. Edith Hallet Frank, of New York, and Miss Hattie Kaufman, of Elizabeth.

Little Walter Silbert's selections on the piano were finely executed. The local youth exhibited a rare talent as a pianst and played many classical numbers in a manner that evoked considerable favorable comment from his listeners. Vocal selections by Mrs. Tepper, soprano; William Holmes, baritone, and Mrs. Frank, soprana, were also greatly enjoyed. A. A. Farland, the well-known banjo artist; Miss Hamberger, a pianist, and Miss Preger, a pianist, also played selections. Miss Preger acted as accompanist to Mrs. Tepper, and Mrs. Loeb and Miss Weinberger were accompanists for Mr. Holmes and Mrs. Frank.

Following the musical program dancing was enjoyed by many of those present, the spacious auditorium being cleared for that purpose. Samuel Rothberg was chairman of the floor committee and he had as his assistants Leon M. Livingston and Herbert Schuldenfrei.

The committee in charge of the entire event included Samuel Rothberg, chairman; Hyman Adelberg, Louis Levine, Leon M. Livingston, Rabbi H. L. Martin, William Schloss, Herbert Schuldenfrei, Adolph Tepper, Dr. Raphael Yood and William Newcorn, ex-officio.

The officers of Temple Sholem are: President, William Newcorn; vice-president, Jacob Tepper; secretary, Herbert Schuldenfrei; treasurer, Herman Schwed.

UNION COUNTY JURORS WILL HOLD BANQUET HERE TONIGHT

Union county grand jurors will hold a banquet in the Waldorf tonight, having as their invited guests Judge James C. Connolly, Prosecutor Alfred A. Stein, Assistant Prosecutor Martin O'Connor, Sheriff George C. Otto, Robert Eaton, clerk of the jury, and Jury Commissioner Russ.

The members of the grand jury who will attend the dinner are George A. Watson, foreman, Cranford; George W. Dawes, Roselle Park; James E. Johnson and Charles H. Burt, Sr., Fanwood township; DeWitt C. Ivins, Hyman Adelberg and Duncan W. Taylor, Plainfield; Maurice A. Chaillet and John B. Ross, of Rahway; Edward F. Hillier, William Marsh, Egbert E. Osterman, Charles C. Denton, J. Arthur Pulsford, Fred W. Aschenbach, Otto Wimmer, Peter S. Servis and Walter H. Cole, of Elizabeth; Frederick Green, Summit; Walter Johnson, Garwood, and Albert J. Beckley, Westfield.

A HARBINGER OF SPRING.

The remarkable spring-like weather of the past few days has been the cause of considerable comment, especially on the part of some of the older residents. The fact that bull*frogs have been heard frequently* this week might lead one to believe that winter is about over, but one weather sharp remarked yesterday: "I think the frogs are fooling themselves."

Y. M. C. A. PICTURES.

The films selected for the motion picture entertainments in Y. M. C. A. Hall on Saturday afternoon and evening will include: "The Sleeping Sentinel," "The Belgian Army," "Mr. Toot's Tooth," "The Lost Kitten," "Like Knights of Old," "A Message From the Moon." The last four named are comedies.

FRENCH RETAKE LOST TRENCHES

German Statement Says That Kaiser's Troops Have Been Compelled to Evacuate.

SMALLPOX IN VIENNA

Rome Hears That Austrian Heir Apparent is on Way to Visit Kaiser—Petrograd Reports Victory Over the Turks.

Berlin, Jan. 21 (By wireless).—The following statement was given out at German headquarters today:

"In the western theatre of the war artillery duels took place yesterday. Between the coast and the Lys trenches at Notre Dame De Lorette, which we occupied on the day before yesterday, were lost again today. Northeast of Arras the French repeatedly attacked both sides of the high road from Arras to Lille, but were repulsed. Southwest of Berry Au Bac we took two trenches from the French, and kept them nothwithstanding their fierce counter attacks.

"French attacks on our positions south of St. Mihiel were repulsed. Northwest of Pont A Mousson we succeeded in recapturing the positions we evacuated three days ago. In that vicinity our troops captured four cannon and several prisoners. Fighting still continue for the remainder of the lost trenches.

"In the Vosges, northwest of Senn heim, battles still proceed.

"The situation in East Prussia remains the same. An unimportant engagement to the east of Lipno, ended *favorably for us. One hundred pris*oners remained in our hands."

Rome, Jan. 21.—The Austrian heir apparent has left Vienna on his way to Berlin on a special mission to the Kaiser from Emperor Francis Joseph, says a despatch to he Messagero from Vienna.

An epidemic of smallpox is raging in Vienna, says a despatch from that city to the Messagero. There were 151 cases inside the city registered yesterday, and 56 outside. Several

ANTI-SUFFRAGISTS TO ADDRESS THE LOCAL ELKS

Acting on a request from Mrs. Sherman B. Joost, president of the Plainfield Branch of the Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage, Plainfield lodge of Elks, at its regular meeting last night, voted to allow a delegation from the organization to address the members in the lodge room. Wednesday night next from 7:30 to 8 o'clock was fixed upon as the time and date.

A similar privilege was accorded the suffragists a short time ago and last night's action was the result of a desire to be both fair and neutral.

The Antis will devote the half hour alloted them to explaining their side of the momentous question and appearing to the Elks to use their influence against the granting of votes to women.

BOTH SIDES SATISFIED IN HARDY CASE SETTLEMENT

In speaking of the settlement of the Hardy will case, former Judge William A. Coddington said this morning, that the report given out in Newark, yesterday, that "the termination of the suit is a great victory for Mr. Parsell, as he practically gets all that he sought for through the suit," is erroneous. Mr. Coddington stated that in company with Charles A. Reed, of this city, and former Judge Alton B. Parker, of New York, negotiations toward settlement between the lawyers on both sides occupied about two weeks, and that settlement was made out of court and the case discontinued by mutual consent of both sides, without costs to either party to the suit. He also said that in the settlement both sides were fully satisfied, and that it was no more a victory for Mr. Parsell than it was for Col. Hardy.

Mr. Parsell was represented by Lum, Tamblyn and Colyer, of Newark, and Lawyers Patterson and Linke, of the New York bar.

PREPARING FOR BIG TRADE.

Washington, Jan. 21.—Elaborate preparations are being made by the administration to prepare for the expected increase of trade with Central and South America it became known today. While President Wilson is pressing the ship purchase bill in Congress, to provide means of transportation, Secretary of Commerce Redfield was ordered into the south to explain the program. Secretary Redfield's trip is part of the plan to capture the Latin-American trade.

DUNELLEN

All the Happenings of the Day In Plainfield's Hustling Suburb.

RECORDER DAVID CAMPBELL STRICKEN IN HIS OFFICE

Borough Recorder David S. Campbell, of Dunellen avenue, general bookkeeper of the Dunellen Lumber and Stone Company, was taken seriously ill in the office of the company on North avenue, last evening. Mr. Campbell had put in an unusually hard day. This affected his heart, and resulted in a rush of blood to the head.

The first intimation that any one had that Mr. Campbell had been taken ill was when Treasurer B. K. Burke heard him exclaim, 'I don't feel well." Rushing out of his apartment Mr. Burke found Mr. Campbell sitting on the steps of the rear entrance to the office, where he had gone to get air. With the assistance of John Doty, who was nearby at the time, Mr. Burke carried Mr. Campbell in the office and then telephoned for Dr. Longbotham. The doctor was shortly on the scene, and after administering necessary treatment took Mr. Campbell home in his automobile.

PLAINFIELDER IS FINED $2 IN BOROUGH COURT

Arraigned before Mayor F. B. Latham in the Borough Hall, last evening, on a charge of disorderly conduct preferred against him by the crew of the trolley from Plainfield due here at 8 o'clock, Valo Cuitinbye, of 1535 William street, Plainfield, was fined $2 and severely reprimanded by the court.

It seems that the defendant wanted to get off of the trolley at the first street near the Saurer Motor Truck Company, and although he said he pushed the "buzzer" three times the car did not stop until Rock avenue had been reached. As he was getting off of the car he is alleged to have swore at the conductor, who, it is said, struck him. The defendant then got back on the car and started for the conductor. The motorman rushed back and stopped the fight. He was then told to get off of the car but he refused to do so. The crew tried to forcibly eject him but he was obstinate and wouldn't budge.

The car then proceeded. When within the borough limits he was given one more chance to get off and was warned that unless he did so he would be arrested by Marshal Ernest Kepler, of the local police, who chanced to be a passenger. The fellow stubbornly refused to take advantage of the opportunity and he was taken off the car at Prospect avenue by the marshal, who experienced little difficulty in handling his man.

William N. Apgar, of Lincoln avenue, who is ill with bronchitis, has shown steady improvement since Monday.

Nathan Guyre, of Washington avenue, who has been ill, is now able to take short constitutionals.

William R. Craig, of Dunellen avenue, who suffered a stroke about three weeks ago, continues to improve steadily. He is now able to sit up for a while each day.

M. R. Gallagher, the local realty magnate, who has been a sufferer from rheumatism this winter, is now able to take short walks.

ATTENDING CONVENTION.

Mrs. Edward Krinic, of Front street, who is worthy matron of Lydia Chapter, No. 41, Plainfield, is attending the annual meeting of the Grand Chapter Order of Eastern Stars, which is in session at Newark. The meeting opened this morning and will be continued tomorrow. Mrs. Krinic's companion is Mrs. William R. Causbrook, of Netherwood avenue, Plainfield, who is associate matron of Lydia Chapter.

RETURNS FROM THE ARMY.

William Brennan, who was born and brought up here, has returned from a four years' service in the army with his honorable discharge. He was a member of the 14th New Jersey Regulars. During the four years he was stationed at Fort Slocum, opposite Fort Hamilton; in the State of Arizona and on the Mexican border. He is stopping with his sister, Mrs. Reuben Hurley, of Myrtle avenue, Plainfield.

Mrs. Mary E. Tinsman, who has been visiting her son, John Tinsman, of Front street, is now visiting at the home of Lewis Tinsman, on North avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Newton Apgar and Mrs. A. N. Randolph spent yesterday in New York.

Captain and Mrs. B. A. Coie visited their daughter, Mrs. Charles Painter, of Newark, Tuesday.

FRACTURED HIS RIBS.

Harry Dodwell, of Jackson avenue, is suffering with two fractured ribs, sustained by a bad fall Saturday evening. Mr. Dodwell was not aware that he was so badly injured until Monday evening, when he visited a physician after suffering from severe pains in his side all day.

GAVE A STAG PARTY.

Benjamin Coie, of Washington avenue, gave a "stag party" to a few of his friends at his home on Monday evening. A most enjoyable evening was passed, after which refreshments were served. Among those present were: Edward Maurer, Harrison E. Giddes, William Vail, Charles Kregar, Benjamin Dodwell and Alfred Day.

S. R. Titsworth, of New Market road, who has been ill with the grip, was able to be out for the first yesterday.

Anna May Ryno, the nine-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Ryno, of Centre street, has not shown very much improvement since she was brought home from the hospital a month or so ago.

The heavy blasting heard all day yesterday was caused by two lots of W. W. Stryker in the former woodlands on Columbia street being cleared of all stumps. Those who witnessed the work say that dirt and pieces of wood were blown in some instances fully fifty feet in the air and showered down in all directions.

AUTOMOBILE STALLED.

The unusually mild weather that has prevailed since the first of the year, with the subsequent coming of the frost out of the ground when topped by the heavy rain storms, has resulted thus far in two heavy auto trucks being stuck in the macadam roadbed giving way under their weight. The auto truck of Potts & Kaufman, the Poreth Amboy wholesale grocery firm, broke through the roadbed on Prospect avenue, opposite the residence of Irving Mundy, on Tuesday night, remaining there three hours. It was finally jacked up and pulled out by a team from the Park Hotel stables. The heavy truck of the Smith auto express broke through the macadam roadbed on North avenue, opposite the residence of Albert Haver, Tuesday afternoon.

PRIZE WYANDOTTES.

A valuable shipment of Tom Barrow's English White Wyandottes was received yesterday by Joseph R. Weiner, of Prospect avenue. Ten Wyandottes of this breed laid 2,084 eggs for Mr. Barrows in the Missouri egg laying contest of 1914, or an average of 208.4 eggs.

PLAN TO CELEBRATE BOROUGH'S BIRTHDAY

Facts Concerning History of Dunellen From Time of First Commission.

Since the Board of Trade has been considering an appropriation to celebrate the borough's birthday on March 23 next many of the townspeople have interested themselves in gleaning some facts concerning the history of the municipality. On March 23, 1886, what is now known as the borough limits separated from the Township of Piscataway and assumed the commissionership form of government. John W. Handren, a Brooklyn shipbuilder, who owned the G. Summer Smith place, was president of the first commission and the late Dr. P. W. Brakeley was clerk. The other commissioners were Christian Schepflin, Samuel Lucky, John Hunt, J. W. Moynihan and John Runyon, all of whom with the exception of Mr. Moynihan have passed away. The commissioners were broad and liberal minded men.

Editor George W. Day, of the Weekly Call, gave an illustration of their liberality. Christian Schepflin, who then owned the present Mayor E. B. Latham property and conducted a manufacturing business in Plainfield, was in the habit of driving to and from his business each day. The street between Dunellen and Plainfield was then unimproved and in stormy weather was in an almost impassable condition. Desiring to have the road improved Mr. Schepflin presented a petition to the Plainfield Council. He was informed that the road would be improved if $2,000 was secured by Mr. Schepflin, whereupon he sat down and drew a check for that amount.

Another illustration occurred in the second year of the commissionership, when the late Ruliff J. Swackhamer, who was then a commissioner, suggested that Washington Park had ought to be fixed up. Mr. Swackhamer was asked by Commissioner Handren how much the work would cost and he was told in the neighborhood of $15 or $20, whereupon Mr. Handren pulled a $20 bill out of his pocket and handed it to Mr. Swackhamer, telling him to go ahead with the work.

Contractor J. Newton Apgar was stricken with appendicitis early this morning. His physician is administering the ice treatment.

Mrs. L. A. Smalley, of Jackson avenue, is ill of an old complaint.

'Plains & Fanwood.

A number of church workers in the borough and township are at present advocating a religious canvass similar to those that have been conducted in other nearby towns. It will be in an effort to ascertain the number of persons belonging to each denomination and to encourage those who are not members of local churches to become so. The executive committee of the Fanwood Township Sunday-school Association has signified its willingness to look into the matter and determine if the present time is suited for such a movement.

Mrs. William Sisserson entertained the members of the Willow Grove chapel at a regular monthly meeting held at her home yesterday afternoon. The women are at present sewing for the missions and following the afternoon of work tea was served. The next meeting will be held the third Wednesday in February.

The members of the Ladies' Aid Society, of the Episcopal church, met in weekly session at the residence of Mrs. Albert Ribblet, on Russell road yesterday afternoon, and sewed on aprons and other garments.

The cake and pie sale held under the auspices of the Altar Guild, of the Episcopal church, will be continued at the residence of Mrs. Frederick Sherwood, on Martine avenue, between the hours of 2 and 5 on Saturday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Thrane, of Paterson road, are entertaining Miss Knaben, of New York, a former grand opera singer of note. It will be remembered that Miss Knaben sang "Ave Marie" at the Christmas services in the Episcopal church, which was heard by all local music lovers.

The twentieth anniversary of the founding of the local order of the Jr. O. U. A. M., Twilight Council, will be observed tonight by the holding of an invitation dance in Excelsior Hall. The mermbership has grown rapidly, especially in the past few years, and now includes a large part of the men of Scotch Plains.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Weldon, of Grand street, are spending a month or so with relatives in Florida.

The Girls' Sewing Class will meet with Miss Fannie Haskard, the teacher, this evening.

James E. Johnson and Charles Bent, Sr., representing the borough and township on the last grand jury, will attend a banquet of that body that will be held in the Waldorf Hotel, Plainfield, tonight.

The persons who were trying to secure a license to conduct a saloon in the "Big Woods" section of the township have dropped the matter, for the present anyway, and the number of hotels will remain the same as last year, William Lee, Herman Frowery and the proprietor of the Maple Tree Inn having been granted licenses.

Miss Lillian Schenck, of Grand street, is ill with pneumonia.

Henry Rahb will entertain the members of the Christian Endeavor Society at his home in the township, this evening.

William Beeken, of North avenue, has rigged up a wireless station that is probably one of the best in this section. It has a receiving radiance of twenty-two hundred miles and he has received messages from Colon, Panama, on several occasions. He has become quite proficient in sending also and is able to send several hundred miles.

Warrenville.

Fairview Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., No. 248, held its eighteenth anniversary last night in its hall and Grandview Council, Daughters of America, No. 55, held its eight anniversary at the same time. John V. Brockway had charge of the whole affair, which was the largest and best ever held. The program was as follows: Address of welcome, Arthur G. Winn, councilor; singing, America; recitation, Miss Rachel Winn; history of the Daughters of America, John C. Cooper; solo, Miss Emily Kloth; recitation, Miss Helen Pulver; address, Rene P. F. Von Minden, State councilor; address, John Brockway, on the growth of the order; singing, Star Spangled Banner. After which the women furnished supper.

J. R. Adams who until recently lived on the John Miller farm in Coontown, has opened offices in Plainfield as an importer of teas and spices.

A delegation of prominent citizens of the township will wait on the Town Committee at its next meeting February 3, asking them to endorse the project of a State road from West End avenue in North Plainfield over the Washington Rock road into Warrenville.

The P. J. Koechlein Construction Company, of Liberty Corner, who have the contract for drilling the wells on Kline Realty tract, are experiencing unusual difficulty in their work. After two sittings on the north slope, C. W. Fritts, the manager in charge, has taken a position on the south side of the ridge. Solid trap rock at a depth of six feet has made progress slow and the work very expensive, but sixty-two feet has been reached after six weeks' work. It is estimated that water will not be reached at a less depth than 140 feet. The presence of trap rock was not reckoned with when the contract was accepted because the soundings seemed to show the red shale to be near the surface.

William G. Cooper, who was having his automobile rebuilt for racing purposes, has abandoned the plan and will buy one of a later model in the spring.

Mrs. Rudolph Steffens, of Mt. Bethel, expects to spend the week end with friends in Jersey City and Brooklyn.

The Ladies' Aid will meet at the home of Rev. and Mrs. George Bowers tomorrow evening.

Whitehouse

The cottage prayer meeting of the Reformed church at Whitehouse Station was held last evening at the home of Mrs. Eunice E. Perry.

Miss Helen Trumbower, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. William M. Trumbower, of East Whitehouse, has entered Centenary Collegiate Institute at Hackettstown, to finish her studies.

Russell and the Misses Mabel and Nora Todd, of Potterstown, are guests of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Vliet, at High Bridge. Alvin Todd, of Gladstone, is also visiting there.

Daniel Schomp returned yesterday to Centreville after a visit to his son, Abram Schomp, near Pleasant Run.

Joseph G. Lewis has returned to Newark after spending a few days at his summer home in East Whitehouse.

Members of the Wishbone Improvement Society were entertained at a sewing bee at the Willowhurst, East Whitehouse, yesterday afternoon, by Mrs. John E. Seals.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the Reformed church at Readington, will hold a buckwheat cake and chicken supper in the church basement tonight.

Mrs. John Potter, of Lebanon, left yesterday for Trenton, where she will spend a week with her cousin, Mrs. Jane Walker.

Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Gethard have returned to Centreville after a visit to Mr. Gethard's brother in Newark.

Mrs. Robert Woodruff, of Westfield, is visiting her sister, Mrs. Leslie Young, at Whitehouse Station.

Mrs. William Fenner and daughter, Catherine Fenner, of New York, are visiting Mrs. Fenner's parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. C. Dalley, at Centreville.

The newly elected officers of Chester Grange, No. 198, Patrons of Husbandry, will be installed tomorrow night. Refreshments will be served at the close of the business session.

For the January term of the Morris County Court Chester township is not represented on the petit jury.

High Bridge-Califon.

Rev. and Mrs. Edwin Bronson, of Lower Valley, left Tuesday for Roosevelt, where they will spend a part of the week with friends.

A daughter was born Monday to Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Herrington, of Main street, Califon.

Ezra Schuyler is ill at his home in Railroad avenue, Califon.

A daughter has been born to Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Wescoe, of High Bridge.

Chester Apgar will vacate in the spring the Anderson farm, near Mt. Lebanon.

Miss Marion Wellinghoff is ill at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Rowlette, of Califon.

After suffering from a crushed hand for several weeks, David Pool, of High Bridge, has resumed work at the Taylor-Wharton Steel plant.

After a visit in Philadelphia, Rev. John Mahoney returned this week to High Bridge.

Miss Helen Koons, of High Bridge, is visiting her sister, Mrs. George Livingood, of Allentown, Pa.

Mrs. Edwin Dufford and children of Chester, were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. John Apgar, of Church street, Califon.

The senior class of the High Bridge High School will produce a play in Rialto Hall, Friday night.

PEACE RESOLUTION ADOPTED BY CONFERENCE OF FRIENDS

Members of the Religious Society of Friends in this city, have been supplied with copies of a resolution adopted by the Friends' General Conference, held at Saratoga, N. Y., last September and presented by the special committee to President Wilson, which dwells on the subject of "Peace." Cited as the outstanding reasons for the European conflict are group hatreds, land hunger and the ambition of rulers for power.

The resolution has been adopted in sympathy rather than to condemn, those who feel it their duty to sacrifice themselves for their ideals of patriotism. The document further declares that the United States, as a great neutral power, is in a position which will enable it, at the conclusion of the European war, to use decisive influence for a permanent settlement on the basis of world organization, rather than a merely temporary truce to future wars in which we will inevitably be involved.

Mrs. John G. MacLaughlin, of Arlington avenue, is detained at home by illness.

Mr. and Mrs. B. C. Wiemster, of Philadelphia, have returned home after a visit with Plainfield friends for several days.

"RUNAWAY JUNE"

By GEORGE RANDOLPH CHESTER and LILLIAN CHESTER

is an original story, an ingenious story, a story of puzzles and charm.

It is illustrated with moving pictures produced by the Reliance Motion Picture Corporation by special arrangement for this paper.

"Runaway June" has never before been published. It was written for America's greatest newspapers. In Plainfield it is being printed exclusively in the Daily Press, a complete installment being published every Monday night. The pictures to illustrate the same installment are being shown on the following it in advance, "Runaway June" is declared to be the most enthralling continued "movie" that has yet been presented to the public. Be on hand today to see the opening chapter and it is a foregone conclusion that you will follow the story to the end. The Pathe Weekly, a pictorial review of recent events throughout the country, will also be shown at Proctor's this afternoon and tonight, while an entire change of program will provide for the vaudeville portion of the entertainment. Tomorrow's picture feature will be the third installment of the Pathe serial, "The Exploits of Elaine," which has already caught the town in a firm grasp, although hardly more than started. More big feature pictures are promised for next week, eclipsing even "As Ye Sow" and "The Pit," so keep your eye on the Proctor announcements.

The members of Miantonomo Tribe, No. 118, I. O. R. M., last night held another contest in the pinochle and euchre tournament. The deciding games will be played at the next meeting. Two propositions for membership were received and the adoption of degrees will be performed the first meeting next month.

Past Sachem David C. Allen and Charles C. Holstein, Sr., will go to Trenton, Saturday afternoon, to attend a special meeting of the Great Council, I. O. R. M., of New Jersey, when plans will be formulated for a vigorous campaign during the coming great sun.

Queen City Lodge, No. 226, I. O. O. F., worked the adoption of the first degree on one candidate at the regular meeting last night. The second and third degrees will be conferred next Wednesday night.

The members of the local Knights of Columbus were well entertained by Westfield Council, K. of C., in Westfield, last night. A large delegation of local Knights participated in the visitation.

Iona Council, No. 14, D. of P., will raise up chiefs at the meeting tonight.

TO CONSIDER PLANS FOR AN AGGRESSIVE CAMPAIGN

A conference under the auspices of the evangelistic committee of the Presbytery of Elizabeth will be held in the Crescent Avenue church, Monday evening at 8 o'clock. This will be one of a group of simultaneous meetings to be held at different points in the Presbytery "to consider how best to mass and use our forces for an aggressive campaign this winter in behalf of the Kingdom of God."

This conference will be addressed by Rev. Dr. John R. Davies, of Philadelphia, and Rev. Paul Stratton, of The Day Spring church, Yonkers, N. Y. All men interested in the work of the church are asked to show their co-operation by attendance at this meeting.

—The Daily Press can be purchased each night at Mallinson's drug store, East Second street.

C. E. CHAIRMEN FOR COUNTY ARE NAMED

Notes of the Work Being Carried on in Other Districts Made Public.

Arthur E. Warner, chairman of the "Elizabeth 1915" convention committee, has announced the committees which are to have charge of the arrangements for the twenty-ninth annual convention of the New Jersey Christian Endeavor Union, which is to be held in Elizabeth next October. The chairmen of the various committees are as follows: Finance, Walter O. Anderson; press and printing, Miss Nellie K. Foote; devotional, J. Duer Randolph; music, Frank E. Binns; hospitality, Miss Edna G. Schmidt; registration, Miss Edna K. Winans; decorations, Harry Gernert, and ushers, Edward Earl. The entertainment and flower committees will be named later. Plans for the convention are progressing very satisfactorily.

An excellent program was rendered by the junior and intermediate Christian Endeavor Societies of Bergen county at their fall rally held in the Reformed church, of Ridgefield. Included in the many special features was an address on "Building," by Mrs. G. D. Baker, of Jersey City, State intermediate superintendent. The session was presided over by Mrs. J. W. Goldsworth, of Leonia, the junior superintendent for Bergen county.

The Essex County C. E. Union is as usual very much alive. The Essex Endeavorers set a pace in various lines of activity, that other county organizations might profitably undertake. A Congress of the Essex county officers was recently held at the High Street Presbyterian church. Following a supper, papers were read by the members of the executive committee on the duties of the various officers, and these were discussed at length. So interesting was the session, that the discussion continued long beyond the scheduled closing hour. The county press superintendent, Frederick V. Molesون, of Newark, is doing a good work along publicity lines by promptly reporting all items of interest to the press department of the State union.

With "Work and Power" as the keynote, the Cumberland County Christian Endeavor Union assembled at the Pearl Street Baptist church, of Bridgeton, for the thirteenth annual convention. The afternoon session was in charge of Miss Edna M. Horner, of Bridgeton, State district secretary, and County President J. B. Patch, presided over the evening session. The principal address was given by the Rev. George P. Horst, of Philadelphia, on "The C. E. Marriage Certificate." Roscoe Tullis, of Bridgeton, was elected president.

An appeal comes from the introduction department of the State Union, requesting the societies to forward the names of any Endeavorer moving to another city. The purpose of the department is to follow up these young people and see that they are properly introduced to one of the Christian Endeavor societies in their new locality. Such names will be very gladly received by the superintendent of this department, Percy R. Quessle, 209 Elwood avenue, Newark.

PERSONAL.

J. Henry Crane has been elected leader of the Probasco Bible Class of the First Baptist church, during the absence from town of Dr. Norman H. Probasco.

Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Heath, of West End avenue, are spending the winter in Brooklyn.

Mrs. John Butler, of West Sixth street, has returned from a visit with relatives on Staten Island.

Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Stephens, of Dunellen, but formerly of this city, have been visiting relatives here and in Newark.

Mrs. Harry G. Runkle, of West Eighth street, entertained the Plainfield Musical Club at her home, Tuesday afternoon, the members furnishing the program.

Mr. and Mrs. Elmer E. Garretson, of Roselle, have been visiting relatives here.

Elmer Gayle, of Vine street, who has been in Muhlenberg Hospital under treatment for a fracture of the leg, is reported to be doing well at present. It was found necessary to graft a bone in the fractured part of the leg.

William Thiers, of Grant avenue, who was in the advertising business in New York, has taken a position as salesman with Wanamaker.

City Clerk James T. MacMurray has been detained at Truell Court, where he lives, for several days with a severe cold which he contracted on a business trip to Boston.

Mrs. Lorenzo Townley, of Watchung avenue, is visiting her sister, Mrs. J. T. Minugh, of Jersey City Heights.

Miss Powell, the pupil nurse at Muhlenberg Hospital, who was reported to have been ill with diphtheria contracted from a patient, had a slight attack of tonsilitis from which she has fully recovered.

BLEASE AND THE RECALL.

Cole L. Blease, who recently resigned as Governor of South Carolina, was determined to go down in a blaze of glory. He pardoned some ten hundred more convicts in a single day, increasing the number to receive clemency at his hands to a grand total of nearly 3,000. He also disbanded the South Carolina militia consisting of three thousand men, after refusing to permit them to participate in the annual encampment ordered by the War Department last summer.

The only conceivable good reason for Governor Blease's successful efforts to empty the penitentiary of his State would appear to be his expectation that the liberated convicts will gratefully electioneer in his interests during the rest of their lives. Possibly a similar desire to make capital among his supporters was at the bottom of his disposition to quarrel with the Federal War Department from the beginning of his term and of his final disbanding of the militia. At all events, his position was not made clear, and no reasons even in a measure plausible were given.

Governor Blease and his remarkable acts and utterances were long a humiliation to the intelligent people of South Carolina as well as a wonder and a delight to distant scoffers. During his first term advocates of the "recall" frequently suggested that his was a case with which their system would promptly and effectively deal. But the suggestion was heard no more after the time for a regular election had come and a bare majority of the people of South Carolina, instead of "recalling" Mr. Blease, had triumphantly re-elected him against the determined opposition of every newspaper of consequence and of nearly every intelligent citizen of the State.

It was perceived that the recall was not necessarily the panacea for misrule it had been alleged to be and that wisdom is not always the indisputable possession of a bare majority. The case of Governor Blease and South Carolina brings us face to face with the unwelcome fact that it is possible for popular government to break down and fail to serve its purpose. It remains true, however, that government by majorities is, on the whole, the best as well as the only kind possible under our system, no matter how unintelligent a large part of the electorate may be.

The second term granted his volcanic excellency of South Carolina, in spite of his continuing violent irruptions, or in spite of his continuous vaudeville performance—to employ a milder figure of speech—is an interesting reminder that, not the vaunted system of the recall, but an increase in the general intelligence by means of education must be relied on to protect an American commonwealth from misrule.

Postmaster Hoagland says that he wishes that some of the people who are kicking about the mail service would complain to him, as he is at the post office during business hours, and is only too glad to do anything he can to improve conditions. Apparently everyone with a kick is voicing it publicly, without going to the proper authority, and the post office head has to hear in a roundabout way the many things that are being said. Much of the criticism which is being heard is not against the local office or its employees, but against the service in and out of town. In all probability that trouble lies in the railway mail service, or in offices other than the Plainfield one. The local office handles an enormous number of separate pieces a month, and it must be admitted that when letters and packages are promptly delivered nothing is heard about it. We suppose that trouble only occurs in the receipt, despatch and delivery of a very small percentage of the service, and suggest to those who are complaining that instead of voicing their sentiments to their friends and the newspapers, they take the matter up with Mr Hoagland.

We wish that it were possible to have every resident of Plainfield see the Belgian war pictures which were displayed at Proctor's theatre yesterday. All of the written and spoken argument that could be prepared in weeks could not be half so effective as are the pictures in describing the suffering, want and privation which the struggle has brought about in Belgium. The pictures were taken while battles were actually in progress, and while cities were being shelled and rumed. Women and children, the crippled and the aged are shown as they fled from before the Kaiser's war machine, as it ruthlessly destroyed in its march through the country to France. The reputation of the great newspaper, the Chicago Tribune, assures the authenticity of the pictures. They should influence thousands of Americans who have not already done so, to contribute toward the relief fund being raised in this country. Plainfielder's have done much, but we hope to be able to continue recording the receipt of subscriptions by the local relief committee. The Daily Press will be pleased to receive any sum, large or small, and see that it gets into the proper hands to aid this good work.

Mayor Calkins recommends that Plainfield procure a city building for the housing of its offices. What we need is a new, modern city hall, large enough to provide for the growth of the city's needs for many years to come. What an ideal civic center Plainfield would have, were a city hall placed where the Friends' meeting house now stands, moving that building to another section of the same block, and straightening out Third street so that it meets Watchung avenue directly opposite North avenue. It would mean a sizeable bond issue, but the improvement would be well worth the money.

The editorial for Saturday has been prepared by a well known local educator. His articles have appeared in the same column three times before in the last three years, and have been timely and read with pleasure by hundreds of the Daily Press "family." The subject is an interesting one.

Some of the "powers that be" say they don't know who is demanding that the fire whistle be restored to service. If the almost universal demand for it has not reached their ears they must have them stuffed with cotton.

The traffic post still stands at the corner of Park avenue and Second street, impeding traffic much more than it aids it. Some day it will be the cause of a serious accident, instead of serving to make conditions better.

Michael Corocoran, of West Front street, who has just sold his property to William Murphy, of Grant avenue, will soon remove to one of the Jacob Sachar houses on West Front street, near Giraud avenue.

Great Semi-Annual Shoe Sale

January 18 we begin the clearance of Women's Fine Shoes to make room for Spring Goods.

Three Reasons Why You Should Be Interested:—

First—the shoes offered in this sale are this season's models from many of the best factories in existence.

Second—the prices are irresistable in that you can save, in many cases, as much as two dollars on a single pair.

Third—because the department is in charge of salespersons who exhaust every means to see that you are comfortably fitted and perfectly satisfied.

THE FORUM

IDA TARBELL AT THE INDUSTRIAL INQUIRY.

Ida Tarbell was a witness before the United States Commission on Industrial Relations yesterday. She was asked, "Would Woman Suffrage improve or make worse the condition of woman wage earners?"

"That would be hard to say," replied Miss Tarbell, who has been listed as an "anti." "Sometimes I think that the right to vote might improve their condition. But I wouldn't like to see women get mixed up in public life, for public life is merely partisan politics."

Miss Tarbell went on to say that most of the men she knew were in favor of suffrage; it was the women who were keeping the vote from women.

"Have you observed whether the possession of suffrage tends to minimize vice?" asked Mrs. Harriman.

"I do not think it has been tested long enough," replied Miss Tarbell. "In one respect, it has generally served a good end. In suffrage States, I believe, the age of consent has been raised. But the suffrage States are not shop and factory States, so that the matter of the working conditions of women and children have not come to the fore in those States."

Suffragists must ever disagree with Miss Tarbell in the belief that "public life is merely partisan politics," but they are happy to have it brought out that "Suffrage States are not shop and factory States, so that the matter of the working conditions of women and children have not come to the fore in those States." Ida Tarbell, herself an Anti, has answered the question of why suffrage States have no child labor laws. They do not need them.

OPEN CONVENTION ON FOREIGN TRADE

American Industrial Leaders Discuss Problems of Trade Extension.

St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 21.—A great gathering of the leaders of American commercial life to discuss the new phases of our commerce with foreign countries was welcomed to St. Louis this morning by Secretary of Commerce W. C. Redfield, Mayor Henry W. Kiel, and Samuel D. Capen, president of the St. Louis Business Men's League. Quite the most important meeting of American business men held in modern days is the convention which began today, for many new problems have arisen from the European war; problems that vex the most able manufacturers and hinder the great expansion of foreign commerce now under way.

Representatives of trade boards, chambers of commerce and commercial organizations from all parts of the United States comprise the Second National Trade Convention. So important are the issues that the majority of the real commercial leaders have come personally to the convention. The government's foreign trade experts are here in person, and Secretary Redfield has brought the information which his department has gathered from all ends of the earth on trade conditions.

"Foreign Banking, Loans and Credits," the subject assigned to Benjamin Joy, a Boston banker, has proven to be one of the problems of trade extension. For it was the financial situation in many lands, particularly in South America, that held back the natural growth of exports to those countries. American banking has not kept pace with its foreign trade, it was pointed out. The German and English bankers and French financiers had been the bone and sinew of business in South America. The sudden wiping away of this staff forced home to Americans that they must supplant the financial aid if they were to grasp the benefit of the new trade openings.

One of the most interesting papers is that of John Bassett Moore, on "Problems Arising in War and Commerce." This afternoon the first subject is "Government Regulation of Commerce as Affecting Foreign Trade," and many expressions will be heard on this topic. Problems of the smaller manufacturers will then be taken up by able speakers. Tonight the banquet will be served, at which Alba B. Johnson, of Philadelphia, will be toastmaster.

Tomorrow's meeting will be devoted to the merchant marine problem, which is agitating the country just now. The viewpoint of manufacturers, exporters and government representatives will be presented. Commercial education for foreign trade is another subject set for tomorrow. Prof. Edwin F. Gay, of Harvard, will present the principal paper. It will be pointed out that the study of Spanish, French and German languages is one of the greatest requirements for our new "world drummers."

The one absorbing topic of the convention is the attitude of the British admiralty toward American shipping. On this subject many opinions will be received, and the consensus of American opinion on the negotiations between the United States and British governments may result.

The great advance in ocean freight rates is another hardship that will bring out some hot shot, and this subject is expected to lead up to the administration's measure for government purchase of ships to break the rates, furnish the bottoms and insure the natural growth of exports.

NO WORD FROM GLAZEBROOK, U. S. CONSUL IN JERUSALEM

Elizabeth, Jan. 21—No word has been received from Rev. Dr. Otis A. Glazebrook, formerly rector of St. John's church, and now United States Consul at Jerusalem, by his son, H. McK. Glazebrook, of 830 Salem avenue. Mr. Glazebrook said yesterday that the last letter his father had written consisted chiefly in a description of the ancient city.

Dr. Glazebrook has been mentioned in newspaper dispatches as doing much to aid foreign residents of Jerusalem, who have been compelled to leave that city because of Turkey's entrance into the European war.

Mr. Glazebrook, although not worried about his father, is anxious to hear from him. A daughter of Dr. Glazebrook, Mrs. Harry Morse, of New York, returned recently from Jerusalem, where she attended the marriage of her father to a Miss Rumford more than two months ago. Sons of Dr. Glazebrook, residing in Morristown and Washington, D. C., had heard nothing from his attorney.

CLABBY AND GIBBONS TONIGHT.

Milwaukee, Wis., Jan. 21—One of the real classy boxing mills of the season will be staged here tonight between Mike Gibbons and Jimmy Clabby. Clabby is acknowledged by most sporting writers as middleweight champion, while Gibbons and Eddie McGoorty dispute the title. The winner of tonight's bout will meet McGoorty and thus the title will be settled within a month. Clabby and Gibbons have met three times before, but have not mixed it up since they bloomed into the limelight. Three years ago they were chased out of the ring in Milwaukee and branded as weak-kneed exponents of the boxing game. Each will make the fight of his life tonight, not only for the come-back of reputation, but for the title that hinges on the battle.

MOVE FOR 'PHONE RATE QUIZ.

Bayonne, Jan. 21.—Acting upon a request from the Chamber of Commerce, the City Council, Tuesday night, named a special committee to participate on behalf of this city in an inquiry into the legality, as well as the reasonableness, of the rates charged for service in Bayonne by the New York Telephone Company. The subject will come before the Public Utility Commission at a hearing in Chancery chambers, Jersey City, January 22. The matter has been brought to the attention of the commission by William D. Salter, a lawyer, of this city. He alleges that the yearly rate, for business telephones, $105 a year, is not only unreasonable, but also that it is in defiance of franchise conditions.

JUDGE SPEER SAYS CRITICS ARE HOUNDS IN FULL CRY

Jersey City, Jan. 21—Answering the attack made against him by foes Monday night, in an effort to prevent the confirmation of his re-appointment by Governor Fielder as a Circuit Court judge by the Senate, Judge William H. Speer, Jr., yesterday, issued a statement in which he says:

"In some of Tuesday evening's newspapers a bitter attack was made on me in the hope, as stated, of preventing my confirmation by the Senate for the office of Circuit Court judge, in which I have already served for seven years. It was said that the attack proceeded from my 'political opponents.'

"It was full of subtle suggestions, suppression of dates, and was clothed in anonymity. It was made by a pack of hounds in full cry; indutiably a very small and cowardly pack, and, as I said, in full cry.

"The story which forms the basis of the attack is seventeen years old. It is now burnt powder and a twice-told tale, for it was used upward of twelve years ago in an unsuccessful effort to defeat my appointment by Governor Franklin Murphy to the office of prosecutor of the Pleas, was investigated by him through his attorney-general, and was then treated by him with the contempt which it now so much more richly deserves."

STATE HEALTH BOARD FIXES FEB. 19 AND 20 FOR CONFAB

Trenton, Jan. 21—The State Board of Health has selected Friday and Saturday, February 19 and 20, as the time for holding the annual conference between its members and local health officials. As heretofore, the conference will be held at the State House, and as there are nearly 500 local Boards of Health in the State a large attendance is anticipated.

The State Board has planned to have more outside speakers than usual at this year's conference, and already several persons prominent in public health work of the country have accepted invitations to make addresses. The New Jersey Health Officers' Association is working in conjunction with the State Board in arranging for the conference. The association will hold its annual session for the election of officers at the conclusion of the general conference.

VALUABLE AID TO MEMORY

whom I had corresponded. This made it necessary for me to take an interest in German, French and Spanish, and in the latter tongue I had many letters, and for some time was a regular correspondent of the Postmaster-General of Spain, from whom I received in exchange many interesting valuable specimens.

"On my first visit to Europe I purchased the black Mulready letter sheet. Returning to America on the steamer Baltic, I saw the ship's papers come aboard at Queenstown, and as there were two beautiful stamps of the two shillings brown of the 1880 issue on the envelope, I eyed that envelope closely for a couple of minutes while it was in the purser's hand, and then made bold to ask him could I have the stamps, and he said 'Yes.' I still have one of those stamps as a momento of that interesting occasion in my collection.

"Increasing opportunities permitted me to enlarge the list of countries that I have visited until today they number over 100. Whenever I go to a new country I take additional interest in its postal issues, and my recollections of a visit are always brought vividly to mind by opening the pages covering the collection of a country included in the number. From memory's store I draw recollections most pleasurable of visits to Hawaii, where I bought 'fives' and 'thirteens' of the King type over the counter at face value; of visits to the consular posts in Canton and Shanghai and Peking; of the great luck in obtaining many old issues of face value of the Macab postoffice; of the great find of the surcharged stamps at Johore, as well as of Provisionals' at Singapore and Penang, while in Java copies of obsolete issues were induced to leave their resting places for their expressed value being paid to the postoffice authorities.

"In Ceylon rare water-marks could be had by searching among the hill postoffices. In Soudan obliging officials allowed me to use canceled postage dues as regular adhesives. In the Levant and Constantinople, in Dominica and St. Vincent, Trinidad, Jamaica and Panama, the postoffice was one of the first places visited. In Mexico rare Wells Fargo and Government franks were plentiful, and in the Faroe Islands, Iceland, Luxemburg and Leichtenstein the postal officials were to me most obliging.

"In Chili the clekrs at the postoffice are obliging and affable to collectors. In Maderia the ordinary issues of Portugal are now used, and stamps sold are no longer inscribed Funchal. At the Rio de Janeiro postoffice it is quite impossible to get blocks of four, because all the stamps are separated into strips. When you inform the clerks at the Montevideo postoffice that you are a stamp collector they offer you used sets of the current issues at low prices.

"I am sure my love for foreign travel, which now amounts to over a half million miles, has been increased by my love of philtaely and my knowledge of rulers and coinages stimulated by the fact that I could easily trace a country's history for the last fifty years by recalling its postal issues, and my memory strengthened by the fact that I recorded mentally what specimens I possessed. As an exerciser for the memory, stamp collecting, in my opinion, has no equal. All its attributes are educational and artistic, and it cultivates the sense of the beautiful.

"In a business career covering a third of a century I have been well occupied in many directions, but when tired and exhausted with business problems, and even in war times, I have never failed to be refreshed by turning to my albums which recall to memory many pleasurable incidents connected with my travels and stamp collecting."

CIVIL SERVICE PLACES OPEN.

Trenton, Jan. 21.—Three civil service positions for farmers are open, according to an announcement issued yesterday by the Civil Service Commission. Examinations for the positions will be held February 4 and will be open to residents of the State. The positions are those of poultry assistant, at a $900 salary; fertilizer sampler, salary $60 to $65 a month, and inspector of nursery stock for the State Board of Agriculture, at $75 a month. The first two positions are connected with the State Agricultural Experiment Station at New Brunswick. All applications should be on file with the commission at the State House not later than noon, January 28.

ELECTRIC SIGN FOR CHURCH.

Red Bank, Jan. 21—Believing that methods adopted by a commercial house are sometimes good enough to be copied by the church, Rev. Dr. Lester Leggett, formerly of Plainfield, pastor of the First Reformed church, at a meeting of his Dutch Arms Club, announced that he was going to put an electric sign on the tower of the church, where it would be seen by everybody. He then proceeded to sell the electric light bulbs at forty cents a bulb, as all of the sign, with the exception of the illuminating bulbs, had either been donated or paid for by church members or their friends.

UNION COUNTY MEET HERE DECORATION DAY

Plainfield High School Athletic Forces Get Year's Big Plum in County.

Plainfield High School athletic authorities have at last secured a plum for which they have been angling for the past four years. It was announced yesterday that the Union County Athletic League, or what remains of that one time flourishing organization, had decided to hold the annual field and track championships for Union county high schools on Parker Field instead of Pingry Oval, Elizabeth, where they have formerly been held.

This is due largely to the fact that this particular branch of athletics has undergone a big boom here recently through the efforts of Jack Fritts, the P. H. S. coach. The following schools will probably take part in the event: Roselle, Westfield, Pingry, Battin, Plainfield, Cranford and Rahway.

Parker Field offers excellent facilities for a meet of this nature and the entry list this year will probably be a record breaker.

STOCK COMPANY TO CONTROL FLEMINGTON BALL GROUND

Flemington, Jan. 21.—Flemington baseball enthusiasts held a meeting in the grand jury room Monday night and discussed the formation of a stock company to control the new baseball grounds. Dr. William W. Hawke was chairman, and Avery W. Parker secretary of the meeting.

Several solicitors will offer the residents stock in the company, which will be capitalized at $5,000. The stock will be $5 a share and not more than $2,500 is to be sold at this time. When a sufficient number of shares have been subscribed the stockholders will meet and elect officers for the purpose of becoming incorporated.

Title will be acquired to about nine acres of land belonging to Jacob R. Wert. The tract has a frontage of about 500 feet on Capner street. It is planned to open a roadway from the terminus of Court street and from Capner street to the grounds.

The grounds will probably be enclosed with a high wire fence and a row of hedge to close off outside view. It is expected that the baseball diamond will be laid out and a grandstand erected in time for the opening of the baseball season.

BOWLING TONIGHT.

Senior Elks' League—Hoboken at Paterson; Elizabeth at Plainfield.

Eagles' League—Somerville at Rahway; Plainfield at Progress.

Masonic League—Washington vs. Jerusalem at Plainfield.

Columbus Club—Peacocks vs. Hawks.

ELIZABETH HERE TONIGHT.

Captain Nash and his Senior Elks' League pinners will meet Elizabeth on the local alleys tonight. The locals are out for a raise in percentage and will undoubtedly make their opponents travel some.

TRI-CORNERED MEET IN THE P. H. S. GYM

Montclair and Westfield to Be Contenders in Athletic Meet Here.

Coach Jack Fritts, of the Plainfield High School track team, announced last night that a tri-cornered indoor athletic meet would be held between the teams of Plainfield, Montclair and Westfield High Schools on the local High School gym floor, Saturday night, February 13. Plans are now underway to make the event the biggest of its kind ever held here and suitable awards will be made to the winners in each event and the school scoring the highest number of points.

The Plainfield schoolboys have made great progress in this line of sport under the supervision of Fritts and it is not unlikely that they will come out on top in the initial interscholastic meeting. As far as Westfield and the localites are concerned this meet will act as sort of a "feeler" for the Union county championships Decoration Day.

SOME BIG SCORES IN SCHOOLBOY CONTESTS

Midweek Results Indicate That Several Aggregations Had Walkaways.

SCHOOLBOY BASKETBALL.

Orange H. S. 34, Summit H. S. 28.

Kingsley School 70, Boonton H. S. 8.

North Plainfield and Leal's both set up banner mid-week records at the expense of rival quintets yesterday afternoon, the boroughites swamping New Brunswick and Leal's taking a two point verdict from the Morristown aggregation, the five that beat the locals last week.

Kingsley School set up the highest score of the week, tallying seventy points at the expense of an apparently unworthy foe, the Boonton quintet.

"Wren" Townley, of North Plainfield, once more copped the midweek individual laurels by accounting for twenty-four points in the clash with Brunswick.

DIVORCED FROM "BOB FITZ."

Chicago, Jan. 21—Mrs. Julia Fitzsimmons yesterday, obtained a divorce from Robert Fitzsimmons, of Dunellen, N. J., formerly world's champion heavyweight pugilist. She charged cruelty.

The Plainfield bowlers of the Junior Elks' League, who have been holding on to second place for some time, were given a severe jolt last night, at Newark, when the home pinners copped all three games and sent their opponents down to fifth place in the standing of the teams while they advanced to third. Plainfield was never in it, especially in the last two games, when the home team made high score. Nineteen points separated the score at the end of the initial game, the marks being 855 to 836. Woolston started off for Plainfield with a 114 while Haggerty, the first man to bowl for Newark, chalked up a 177. Hoyt and Townley scored 153 and 173 respectively and then Causbrook hit for a 203. But the home pinners were making good scores all this time and managed to pull out with a win after Waldorf had finished the game for the locals with a 193.

Newark rolled much better in the second game than in the first and totalled 954. Ayres and Jackson registered 211 and 201 in order, while Haggerty started off with a 199. Plainfield's best was 205, made by Waldorf and the team total was 879. The home pinners continued their good work in the last game and made their highest score in the final roll. Jackson, who was anchor man for Newark, made high individual score of the match, getting a 224, while Keppler made 216. Waldorf again pinned well for Plainfield with a 199 and Causbrook's mark was 202.

UNION COUNTY SCHOOLBOYS TO HAVE GOOD TRACK TEAMS

Several Union county High School track managers have issued calls for candidates and a number of indoor meetings are being planned in preparation for the Union county championships scheduled to be held on Parker Field, Decoration Day. Present conditions and enthusiasm indicate that the county schools this year will have some of the best aggregations in their athletic histories and the big meeting on Parker Field will no doubt prove a record breaker for interest and entries.

During the past two years considerable interest has been awakened in track sports and some notable individual performances have been recorded by students in nearby schools.

Plainfield High School is one of the most active along this line and under the able coaching of Jack Fritts the schoolboys have developed a sterling squad of all around performers. Ralph Runyon, who is without a doubt the best scoring schoolboy in the county, will be available as a point winner for the red and blue in all meets and it is practically certain that he will at least annex five points in each competition, being practically invincible in the pole vault. Runyon also excels as a running high jumper and additional points may be added by him in this event.

The Battin and Pingry Schools, of Elizabeth, have some crack runners to pick from and the Cranford, Westfield and Roselle High Schools are not far behind in the list.

ELKS' HOUSE TOURNEY.

Three teams will play in the Elks' House Tourney tomorrow night. The Stout, Causbrook and Townley fives are booked to roll each other one game.

P. H. S. GIRLS TO PLAY.

The Plainfield High School girls' basketball team will go to Westfield, tomorrow afternoon, and meet the team of that school.

WELL EARNED WIN FOR LEAL WARRIORS

Local Team Scores Two Point Victory Over Morristown School Aggregation.

The Leal School basketball aggregation annexed a well earned game, yesterday, on the Y. M. C. A. court, when it defeated the Morristown School five, the quintet that trounced it in Morristown last week. There were only two points difference in the two scores at the end of the game, the count being 14 to 12. The game was close throughout and was featured by close guarding and erratic shooting on the part of both teams. The visitors started the game with a rush and obtained a seven-point lead which was finally overcome by the local five.

Dickerson registered the first points for the home team, dropping in a field goal which was quickly followed up by baskets from Harrington and Schneider. Captain Chauncey Stewart did his part at the fifteen foot mark, getting three baskets, which put his team two points in the lead. Both teams had many shots that were missed and the half ended with the score standing 9 to 7. The second period of play was almost half over before either team scored and then Morristown took the lead by scoring a basket together with a point awarded them for fouling. Stewart's foul and Dickerson's field goal put the locals ahead again and then a field goal by Devitalis tied matters up shortly before time was called. Another goal from the field won the game for Leal's.

PLATT ADAMS NOT GUILTY OF CHARGES

So Declares A. A. U. Board Following Meeting Last Night.

Platt Adams, the former Plainfield athlete, has been exonerated by the Amateur Athletic Union on the charges of professionalism, recently made against him. The registration committee, after the meeting at the St. Bartholomew Club, in East 42nd street, New York, last night, officially announced that the charges made against Adams, to the effect that he had sold some prizes given him for victories as an amateur athlete, had not been proved. The announcement made by the committee was, in effect, as follows:

"After careful consideration of the testimony and after due deliberation of the evidence, we find that no proof was shown that Platt Adams, of the New York Athletic Club, did sell any prizes or accept any cash for medals or cups.

"Regarding the exchange of a cup, we find, upon investigation, that the cup in question was given neither for competition nor for exhibition, but to show appreciation of their efforts (the committee used the word 'their, meaning, presumably, both Platt Adams and his brother, Ben, who is also a famous athlete) by fellow-Newarkers for the good work accomplished at the Stockholm Olympus, in 1912.

"The communication is signed by the members of the registration committee, of which Jacob W. Stumpf is chairman."

During the trial it was shown that the cup referred to had been exchanged by Platt Adams for other articles. It was also shown that this arrangement had been made at the time the cup was given him.

BOWLING MATCH OFF.

The bowling match scheduled to be played last night, between the Anchor and Lafayette teams, of the Masonic Bowling League, was postponed until February 26.

EASY VICTORY FOR BOROUGH QUINTET

North Plainfield Five Works Well Together in Last Game Before Leaguer.

The North Plainfield High School basketball team gave the New Brunswick High School five a severe drubbing on the Saengerbund Hall court, yesterday afternoon, the final score being 62 to 32. This is the second victory of the season for the boroughites over this aggregation, the former being a far better game. After the first ten minutes of play the home team outclassed its opponents in every department of the game and shot at will, piling up the score and holding its rivals down to comparatively few baskets.

It took fully half the initial period for North Plainfield to get started and during that time New Brunswick took the lead in the scoring department. Townley started the scoring with a pretty field goal, but Broffe, who did the foul shooting for the visitors, tied matters up when he made good on a pair of fouls called on the borough players. With the half about half over the score 7 to 6 in favor of New Brunswick and then the North Plainfield boys started working in real form which put the game on ice before the end of the half. The VanMater, Conroy and Townley combination, with the last named player shooting the basket, could not be stopped by the visiting guards and the ball was rolled in the basket with ease. The score at the end of the initial period was 28 to 12.

At the beginning of the last half New Brunswick was completely lost and made only one basket in the first nine minutes of play. The boroughites were working at their best and simply worked the ball to their goal and then dropped it. Townley made almost every shot good he tried in this period, while Conroy had worse luck and missed a good many. Before the end of the game Captain Abrams put in all his substitutes and in five minutes of play, Edson Day scored five field goals. The other players that were sent into the game were French, Kirch and Dilts. The visitors had a shooting streak and tossed in seven baskets in succession, but were never dangerous.

KNOCKS AND BOOSTS

Westfield High School athletes certainly added to their 1914-15 basketball reputation Tuesday afternoon, when they "crabbed" over a clean-cut defeat administered by the Plainfield High School clan. The Mt. Ararat schoolboys have found some kick to lodge in every game they have played this year and every one of their reverses have been attributed by their coach and leaders to "unfair refereeing." This happens to be the same group of schoolboys that had trouble with the Westfield Board of Education a couple of months ago when the football team of the school refused to abide by certain regulations laid down by their superiors. The Westfielders are about as brilliant an example of poor sportsmanship as could be singled out.

North Plainfield and Plainfield High School basketball officials have selected Ralph Buckley, of the Rahway Y. M. C. A., to do the umpiring at the game in Saengerbund Hall, Saturday afternoon. Although practically unknown in this city and the borough, Buckley has done considerable officiating in and about Rahway and if he consents to take the job he will undoubtedly meet the demands of the contending bodies. One of the largest crowds of the season will attend this conflict and it has been deemed necessary to name an umpire as well as a referee as a means of forestalling criticism.

Midget captains appear to be all the rage in the Interscholastic League this year. Although each of the three contenders have plenty of soaring talent in their lineups the players have chosen the smallest man on the quintet in each case to lead the team on the playing floor. Abrams, of North Plainfield, is the biggest of the three, and Stewart, of Leal's, and McNamee, of Plainfield, are about even up on the stature question.

In the game Saturday it is not unlikely that the two captains will be pitted against each other. This is a condition that has not arisen before in several years and the outcome will be keenly watched.

Jack Fritts is to be congratulated on his efforts to bring the Union county high school championships, which have at last been capped with success. Parker Field offers excellent facilities for such a meet and the county athletes will no doubt welcome the shift from Elizabeth. Fritts is also the father of the tri-cornered meet idea and when the Montclair and Westfield athletes come here to match their prowess against P. H. S., local followers of athletics will be given an opportunity to witness a competition well worth while. This will be the first match in which the Plainfield schoolboys will compete for the school insignia.

Platt Adams' acquittal by the A. A. U. is evidence enough of the esteem in which this athlete is held by that body and his many friends here welcome the exonerating decision. Adams is a credit to the sport world both as a competitor and a fosterer of athletics and the ultimate verdict was conceded from the first time the spiteful allegations were lodged.

N. P. H. S. GIRLS HAVE TEN GAMES TO PLAY

Miss Lillian Spencer, manager of the North Plainfield High School girls' basketball team, announces a revised schedule which contains ten games booked to date, with others pending, with the High School teams of Paterson and Roselle and P. H. S. Alumni and the Y. W. C. A. outfit.

The next game will be played Friday night, when the team meets the High School Alumni in Saengerbund Hall. Two games have recently been scheduled with Summit, the first to take place in Summit on February 19. The schedule follows:

January.

Friday, 22—Alumni at N. P. H. S.

Wednesday, 27—Westfield at Westfield.

February.

Friday, 5—Kearny at Kearny.

Wednesday, 10—Rahway at N. P. H. S.

Friday, 19—Summit at Summit.

Monday, 22—Plainfield at N. P. H. S.

Friday, 26—Perth Amboy at Perth Amboy.

March.

Wednesday, 3—Westfield at N. P. H. S.

Friday, 12—Summit at N. P. H. S.

Saturday, 20—Plainfield, on neutral court.

GAME AND DANCE.

The N. P. H. S. girls' team will play the Alumni in Saengerbund Hall, tomorrow night, and there will be dancing after the game.

PLAYERS HAVE BEEN TRADED FOR DOGS; BETTER DEALS MADE ON BARGAIN DAYS

Recent mention of queer deals and trades in baseball reminds Enoch Somers, a veteran bush league manager, of some of the capricious trades he has made in his day. He tells of one time when in desperate need of a chew he traded an outfielder for a pack of Mail Pouch. And later when he found the team they were to play was without a complete infield he traded his star third baseman for a bat bag. Both of which deals, protests Somers, were on the level and here 61.

FLETCHER S. BROCKMAN TO SPEAK IN THIS CITY

Fletcher S. Brockman, who for sixteen years has been prominent in missionary work in China, will speak Sunday morning in the Crescent Avenue church on changing China. Mr. Brockman was brought home from China in December, to help in the difficult financial problems facing his board.

Having been successful he has a few weeks before he returns to his field, which he is devoting to telling the story of the China of today. He is one of the most eloquent speakers now before the American public and the city is considered fortunate in being favored with a visit from him.

CONTINENTAL CHAPTER TO FORM CHILDREN'S BRANCH

The members of Continental Chapter, D. A. R., of this city, at its January meeting Tuesday, decided to form a local chapter of the Children of the Revolution for the purpose of instilling patriotism in those children who are eligible for membership. The meeting, which was held at the home of Mrs. C. R. Banks on Watchung avenue, was well attended and full of interest. Mrs. Henry A. Fiske was named chairman of the committee to look after the details of organizing the children. Four new members were elected to the chapter and five propositions were received. Interesting reports were presented by Mrs. Edward Finch, treasurer, who stated that there is a balance on hand of $394, and Mrs. Henry Maxson, secretary, who reviewed the work of the year.

The balance in the treasury will be used to complete work on the tea house at Washington Rock. Mrs. A. V. D. Honeyman was chosen librarian and she will be the custodian of all the chapter's records. After the business session there was a social hour. The February meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. W. A. Conner on Hillside avenue.

MANY GUESTS ATTEND JUNIOR EUCHRE PORTY

The Jr. O. U. A. M. Club gave a euchre, last night, in Jr. O. U. A. M Hall, East Front street, which was attended by more than one hundred members and guests. The Jr. O. U. A. M. Club comprises the four local councils.

The occasion proved enjoyable. About twenty tables were in play. To those fortunate in winning umbrellas and candy were distributed. After the games had been completed a collation, comprising coffee and sandwiches, was served.

C. O. Keller, of Watchung avenue, is seriously ill at his home.

SECOND VICTIM OF ROOSEVELT STRIKE

Carman Patty Dies in Hospital—Middlesex County Conducting Inquiry.

Roosevelt, Jan. 21.—All is quiet among the 400 strikebreakers and former employes of the Williams and Clark plant here today and further trouble is not anticipated by the Middlesex county authorities who have assumed control of the situation. Carman Patty died this morning in the Alexian Brothers' Hospital, Elizabeth, as the result of gunshot wounds received Tuesday morning. Patty was operated on last night and little hope was entertained for his recovery. He was shot through the stomach and he said that he was but 150 yards away from the deputy guard when he was fired upon. Desidoi Alessandro died Tuesday.

Twenty-two employes of Jeremiah O'Brien's Detective Agency, of Newark, who were employed as Middlesex county deputy sheriffs on strike duty at the plant here were arrested yesterday afternoon on warrants charging manslaughter in connection with the killing of a striker. They pleaded not guilty when arraigned before Judge Peter Daily at New Brunswick last night and were held in $2,000 each for the Grand Jury. The aggregate bond, $44,000, was furnished by a surety company.

Senator James E. Martine called upon the Judiciary Committee of the United States Senate to act at once on a bill he introduced several months ago making it unlawful for any person, firm or corporation to hire armed detectives. He has promised to make a speech in the Senate on the Roosevelt riot.

Middlesex county officers are today investigating the charge that the men arraigned had nothing to do with the shooting, and that the guilty deputies have made a getaway. None of the authorities who caused the arrests have explained how they identified the prisoners. The inquest proposed to be held into the death of Desidori Alessandro has not been started as yet.

ARREST AMERICAN SAILORS.

Washington, Jan. 21.—A number of sailors of the American steamers Greenbrier and Carolina were arrested by German authorities on arrival at Bremen, the State Department was informed by a cablegram from Ambassador Gerard today. The message gave no particulars of the arrest of the men. Assurances have been given by the German government that the men will be released and allowed to return to the United States on the ships on which they sailed.

PLAYERS DRAW COLOR LINE.

There Will Be No Chinese on Portland Team This Year.

Walter McCredie, manager of the Portland team, champions of the Pacific Coast league, exploded a bombshell several weeks ago by announcing the signing of Lang Akena, a half Hawaiian, half Chinese outfielder.

Recently he plucked another out of the ammunition case, took cool aim and then during the uproar vouchsafed the "info" that he would have to release his Chinese horticulturist because of strenuous objection from prospective teammates.

"His skin's too dark," explained the Portland mogul. "The coast leaguers who played at Honolulu on that recent barnstorming trip came back vowing boycott. I have received a couple of letters from players telling me Akena is as dark as Jack Johnson, so I guess I will have to give him a release."

In announcing the release of his pol eating prodigy Manager McCredie took occasion to exude a few remarks relative to baseball's attitude toward colored ball players.

"I don't think the color of the skin ought to be a barrier in baseball," declared Mac. "They have Jim Thorpe, an Indian, in the big leagues; there are Cubans on the rosters of the various clubs. Here in the Pacific Coast league we have a Mexican and Hawaiian, and yet the laws of baseball bar negroes from organized diamonds.

"If I had my say the negro would be welcome inside the fold. I would like to have two such ball players as Petway and Lloyd of the Chicago Colored Giants, who play out here every spring. I think Lloyd is another Hans Wagner around shortstop, and Petway is one of the greatest catchers in the world."

Mr. Woodward has for several years been a vice president of the body of which he is now the head. He is an enthusiastic golfer, though his skill does not put him in the class with Ouimet, Travis or Travers. But he is a consistently good player and has represented his club in numerous tournaments.

Adams' Great Fielding Record.

A study of National league fielding records shows that Pitcher "Babe" Adams of the Pirates has made but two errors in four seasons. He had one misplay in forty-six chances in 1911. In 1912 he handled thirty-eight chances without a skip. In 1913 he had eighty-five chances and slipped up on one, though it really wasn't a chance, as he made a bad throw in an attempt to catch a base runner napping at first. In 1914 he handled seventy-five chances without a slip.

GOLF GAME FOR THE POOL TABLE

It Combines Some Features of Both Sports.

IS A REAL TEST OF SKILL.

The Idea Is to Make Six Holes With the Fewest Number of Shots, and There Are Penalties For Misplays. Even Expert Pool or Billiard Players Must Practice to Make Low Scores.

Golf pool is the newest indoor game to offer some of the features of the great outdoor sport. The new game can be played on any pool table, each pocket representing a hole. Instead of the putting iron there is the cue or white ball. One other ball is used, and this is the one the player must pocket in the least number of strokes. Even the best pool or billiard player must practice before he can make a creditable score.

Each shot at the object ball counts a stroke in the score. The object ball is spotted in the center of the table and the shooter or cue ball is placed on the upper spot, as shown in the diagram. The player then starts the round by trying to pocket the object ball in the side pocket, representing hole No. 1. When he has made the hole the next player starts. The object ball is spotted in the center of the table, but the cue ball is left where it rests after the preceding player had made the hole. Quite naturally the player who has just holed out will try to leave the cue ball in a position where it is difficult for the next man to play the hole. This brings into play a man's ability to play position at pool or billiards.

Should the cue ball come to rest so that the object ball cannot be spotted the balls are set up again as at the start of a game.

One of the rules is that in making a shot or stroke one of the balls must go to a cushion. This makes it hard for a player who is trying to place the object ball close to the pocket so that he can hole out in his next shot. It compels him to put a certain amount of force behind the stroke, because if the object ball does not reach a cushion the shooter or cue ball must. Even if the ball is pocketed the cue ball must strike the cushion.

The penalty for a scratch, pocketing the cue ball, is three strokes in addition to the one made. In other words, a scratch counts four strokes. The same penalty goes if one of the balls fails to reach a cushion or for pocketing the object ball in the wrong pocket.

If a player makes an intentional scratch so as to get position he is penalized ten strokes. It is left to the referee to decide whether the player deliberately tried to miss.

MARANVILLE USES STOMACH.

Shortstop Discovers Valuable Aid In Scooping In the High Ones.

Rabbit Maranville, the speedy and astute shortstop of the Boston Braves, is the first athlete to discover that the human stomach is a valuable aid in catching a baseball.

Other players have struggled along life's rocky road catching the ball in their hands and utterly ignoring their stomachs. But not so with Maranville.

When called on to tackle a fly ball the Rabbit places his hands firmly against his manly little front at a point just below his diaphragm and with great precision adjusts himself under the descending sphere. Fans and fellow players uncouthly laughed at Maranville when he broke into the big league because of his peculiar manner of catching a fly. But he refused to be swerved from his purpose and proved that he was right by making a pronounced success of the "stomach catch."

It is a system, however, which cannot be conscientiously recommended to young boys with big league ambitions. The Rabbit is a genius. Others might not be able to make a success of it.

WAR NEWS

well known persons are among those attacked by the disease.

Petrograd, Jan. 21.—The Caucasus general staff states:

"On January 19, near Ahalik Lavsor and Hyagani, we fought a series of combats with the Turkish rearguard, who retreated. We captured a great many prisoners and a Turkish camp. We also occupied Aradanoutch in Transcaucasi, near the Turkish border. A torpedo boat sent to inspect the Asia Minor coast sank twelve vessels with their cargoes near Archava. In other sections there has been no particular change."

Amsterdam, Jan. 21.—Dr. Von Bethmann Hellweg, the German imperial chancellor, has arrived in Berlin, and Baron Burian, the new Austrian foreign minister, is expected to reach here Saturday, to confer with the Prussian Premier, says a despatch from Berlin.

London, Jan. 21.—A despatch from Cairo to the Evening News declares that the Turks are busily concentrating in the vicinity of Beersheba, and it is believed that their advance upon Egypt will be timed to begin on January 27, the Kaiser's birthday.

Rotterdam, Jan. 21.—Heavey cannonading has been heard from the direction of East Borkum.

East Borkum is on the westernmost island of the East Frisian group. It is almost directly off the mouth of the River Ems and is about eighty-five miles southwest of the entrance to the Kiel Canay.

Despatches from Copenhagen report that twenty-three bodies of Brtish and German sailors have been washed ashore on the west coast of Jutland. It is supposed they are victims of a sea battle.

Geneva (via Paris), Jan. 21.—Another Zeppelin, after three days of trial, left Friendrichshafen, Wednesday, in a northwesterly direction to reinforce the air fleet near Ghent.

There is great rejoicing at Friedrichshafen over the Yarmouth aerial raid. The plan was known of in advance in certain quarters in Switzerland, it is declared, and warnings had even been sent to the British authorities, who are reported to have stated that they attached little importance to it.

The visit of the Prince of Wales to Belfort has led to reports here British troops would shortly be sent to Belfort to participate in any possible advance on the Rhine. The French advanced trenches, according to reports received here, are now only sixteen miles from the Rhine.

Turin, Italy, Jan. 21.—The "Stampa" announces that a British warship has halted the liner Duc d'Aosta, from Genoa for New York, to arrest Count von Keller, a German officer of high rank, sent to the United States on a secret mission.

The newspaper says the count has been landed at Gibraltar.

Paris, Jan. 21.—The Austrian fleet at Cattaro, near the Montenegrin frontier, have furiously bombarded Mount Lovchen, a strong Montenegrin position just across the frontier, without affect, according to a Havas dispatch from Cettinje, Montenegro.

London, Jan. 21.—An Exchange Telegraph Stockholm dispatch says German airships have been reconnoitering the frontier between Sweden and Finland, evidently with the purpose of destroying the bridges of the new Finnish railway, thus interrupting communication between Russia and Sweden.

An "Express" Amsterdam dispatch says: "Reports from Germany declare the news of the air raid on England has been received there with great enthusiasm. Emperor William has sent a congratulatory message to Count Zeppelin."

A "Chronicle" Paris dispatch says:

"The Germans so far have been unable to pursue the temporary advantage obtained during the heavy fighting around Soissons. They are busy with their dead and wounded, for they paid a dreadful price in human life for the few villages which lay between them and the Aisne.

"It is reported, however, they are bringing up fresh reinforcements, and public opinion in Paris, in spite of its supreme confidence in the French troops, is not altogether easy at this profound calm, which seems to herald another attempt to storm a way to Paris by the passage of the Aisne and the capture of Soissons.

"They are two miles nearer Paris than they were after their first retreat to the Aisne, but further away than ever from a military point of view."

The "Mail" suggests the raid was only a reconnaissance, a rehearsal preparatory to a more serious raid during the next moonless period, which will be in February.

GIVEN SURPRISE ON WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

Mr. and Mrs. John Neagle Were Married Thirty-nine Years Ago Yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs. John Neagle, of 210 West Sixth street, celebrated the thirty-ninth anniversary of their wedding yesterday, and last night they were given a surprise at their home, the affair being arranged by their son, Charles F. Neagle, of 453 West Sixth street. The couple were invited to take supper last night at their son's home, which they did, and when they returned to their own home a little later they found a gathering of about thirty relatives and friends. The surprise was complete, Mr. and Mrs. Neagle having no previous intimation of the affair.

The evening was spent in playing games and there was a program of vocal and instrumental music, after which refreshments were served. Mr. and Mrs. Neagle received the congratulations of their guests and best wishes for many happy returns of the day.

Mr. and Mrs. Neagle were married at what is now East Bound Brook, thirty-nine years ago yesterday, Rev. L. A. Platts, then pastor of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, New Market, officiating. The bride was Miss Mary Giles, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Giles. Both the bride and bridegroom were born near Bound Brook.

Mr. Neagle is in charge of the local United States Weather Bureau, a position he has filled for many years in a creditable manner. The couple have two children, Mrs. E. B. Rowland, with whom they live, and Charles F. Neagle, also of this city.

Y. W. C. A. NOTES

The registration party will be held at the association tonight. At that time members may register for the Bible study classes, mission study class, which is a series of four talks given by Mis Margaret Mead; first aid class, dressmaking, millinery, basketry and gymnasium and asthenic dancing. The winners of scholarships offered for the best work in the various classes during the past year will be announced att his meeting.

All classes for the new term will commence on Monday, February 1. This will include the swimming class, which was to have started next Monday night, but was postponed one week.

RECREATION NOTES

The Thespian Society will rehearse "Father and the Boys" this evening, at High School.

The Dramatic Club will meet tomorrow evening at 8:15 at the Washington School.

The colored people will hold their regular social evening at Washington School tomorrow night.

The Italian Athletic and Dramatic Clubs will meet tomorrow night at the Lincoln School.

The committee announces that a dancing class for children will be held every Monday afternoon in the Bryant School auditorium. Modern dances and folk dances will be taught. There will be a fee of ten cents per lesson to defray expenses. Mothers and guests will be welcome as visitors.

BELATED ANNOUNCEMENT.

Charles J. Bogert, formerly of Plainfield, but now of St. Louis, has announced his marriage, his bride being a resident of the latter city. The ceremony was performed April 1, 1912. Mr. Bogert was employed by Asa F. Collier when he was in the jewelry business.

COMB SAGE TEA INTO GRAY HAIR
Darkens Beautifully and Restores Its Thickness and Lustre at Once.
Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea, with sulphur and alcohol added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant; remove every bit of dandruff, stop scalp itching and falling hair. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get the ready-to-use tonic, costing about 50 cents a large bottle, at drug stores, known as "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," thus avoiding a lot of muss.
While wipsy, gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared. After another application or two your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy soft and luxuriant and you appear years younger.—Adv.

Mrs. P. J. Melvin and daughter, Miss Mary Clare Melvin, of East Second street, have returned from a visit with relatives at Sparkill.

"I wish I was flat broke," he smiled up. "If ever I get out of being a millionaire this time I'll never be one again."

"It's all right," Smoke encouraged. "I've been over it before. Better let me try it first."

"And you forty pounds to the worse," the little man flashed back. "I'll be all right in a minute. I'm all right now," as his foot went out, this time to rest carefully and lightly, while the other foot was brought up and past.

Very gently and circumspectly he continued on his way until two-thirds of the distance was covered. Here he stopped to examine a depression he must cross, at the bottom of which was a fresh crack. Smoke, watching, saw him glance to the side and down into the crevasse itself and then begin a slight swaying.

"Keep your eyes up!" Smoke commanded sharply. "Now, go on!"

The little man obeyed nor faltered on the rest of the journey. The sun eroded slope of the farther edge of the crevasse was slippery, but not steep, and he worked his way up to a narrow ledge, faced about and sat down.

"Your turn," he called across. "But just keep a-coming, and don't look down. That's what got my goat. Just keep a-coming, that's all. And get a move on. It's almighty rotten."

Balancing his own stick horizontally, Smoke essayed the passage. That the bridge was on its last legs was patent. He felt a jar under foot, a slight movement of the mass and a heavier jar. This was followed by a single sharp crackle. Behind him he knew something was happening. If for no other reason he knew it by the strained, tense face of Carson. From beneath, thin and faint, came the murmur of running water, and Smoke's eyes involuntarily wavered to a glimpse of the shimmering depths. He jerked them back to the way before him.

Two-thirds over he came to the depression. The sharp edges of the crack, but slightly touched by the sun, showed how recent it was. His foot was lifted to make the step across when the crack began slowly widening, at the same time emitting numerous sharp snaps. He made the step quickly, increasing the stride of it, but the worn nails of his shoe skated on the farther slope of the depression. He fell on his face and without pause slipped down and into the crack, his legs hanging clear, his chest supported by the stick, which he had managed to twist crosswise as he fell.

His first sensation was the nausea caused by the sickening upleap of his pulse; his first idea was of surprise that he had fallen no farther. Behind him were crackling and jar and movement, to which the stick vibrated. From beneath, in the heart of the glacier, came the soft and hollow thunder of the dislodged masses striking bottom. And still the bridge, broken from its farthest support and ruptured in the middle, held, though the portion he had crossed tilted downward at a pitch of twenty degrees.

He could see Carson, perched on his ledge, his feet braced against the melting surface, swiftly recoiling the rope from his shoulders to his hand.

"Wait!" he cried. "Don't move, or the whole shooting match will come down!"

He calculated the distance with a quick glance, took the bandanna from his neck and tied it to the rope and increased the length by a second bandanna from his pocket. The rope, manufactured from sled lashings and short lengths of plaited rawhide knotted together, was both light and strong. The first cast was lucky as well as deft, and Smoke's fingers clutched it. He evidenced a hand over hand intention of crawling out of the crack. But Carson, who had refastened the rope around his own waist, stopped him.

"Make it fast around yourself as well," he ordered.

"If I go I'll take you with me," Smoke objected.

The little man became very peremptory.

"You shut up!" he ordered.

"If I ever start going"— Smoke began

"Shut up! You ain't going to ever start going. Now do what I say. That's right—under the shoulders. Make it fast. Now start. Get a move on, but easy as you go. I'll take in the slack. You just keep a-coming. That's it. Easy, easy."

Smoke was still a dozen feet away when the final collapse of the bridge began. Without noise, but in a jerky way, it crumbled an increasing tilt.

"Quick!" Carson called, coiling in hand over hand on the slack of the rope which Smoke's rush gave him.

When the crash came Smoke's fingers were clawing into the hard face of the wall of the crevasse, while his body dragged back with the falling bridge. Carson, sitting up, feet wide apart and braced, was heaving on the rope. This effort swung Smoke in to the side of the wall, but it jerked Carson out of his niche. Like a cat he faced about, clawing wildly for a hold on the ice and slipping down. Beneath him, with forty feet of taut rope between them, Smoke was clawing just as wildly, and ere the thunder from below announced the arrival of the bridge both men had come to rest. Carson had achieved this first, and the several pounds of pull he was able to put on the rope had helped to bring Smoke to a stop.

Each lay in a shallow niche, but Smoke's was so shallow that, tense with the strain of the flattening and sticking, nevertheless he would have slid on had it not been for the slight assistance he took from the rope. He was on the verge of a bulge and could not see beneath him.

CHAPTER XIV.

The Knife and the Rope.

SEVERAL minutes passed, in which they took stock of the situation and made rapid strides in learning the art of sticking to wet and slippery ice. The little man was the first to speak.

"Gee!" he said and a minute later: "If you can dig in for a moment and slack on the rope I can turn over. Try it."

Smoke made the effort, then rested on the rope again. "I can do it," he said. "Tell me when you're ready, and be quick."

"About three feet down is holding for my heels," Carson said. "It won't take a moment. Are you ready?"

"Go on!"

It was hard work to slide down a yard, turn over and sit up. But it was even harder for Smoke to remain flattened and maintain a position that from instant to instant made a greater call upon his muscles. As it was, he could feel the almost perceptible beginning of the slip when the rope tightened, and he looked up into his companion's face. Smoke noted the yellow pallor of sun tan, forsaken by the blood, and wondered what his own complexion was like. But when he saw Carson, with shaking fingers, fumble for his sheath knife he decided the end had come. The man was in a funk and was going to cut the rope.

"Don't m-mind m-m-me," the little man chattered. "I ain't scared. It's only my nerves, gosh dang them. I'll b-b-be all right in a minute."

And Smoke watched him, doubled over, his shoulders between his knees, shivering and awkward, holding a slight tension on the rope with one hand, while with the other he hacked and gouged holes for his heels in the ice.

"Carson," he breathed up to him, "you're some bear, some bear."

The answering grin was ghastly and pathetic. "I never could stand height," Carson confessed. "It always did get me. Do you mind if I stop a minute and clear my head? Then I'll make those heel holes deeper so I can heave you up."

Smoke's heart warmed. "Look here, Carson; the thing for you to do is to cut the rope. You can never get me up, and there's no use both of us being lost. You can make it out with your knife."

"You shut up!" was the hurt retort. "Who's running this?"

And Smoke could not help but see that anger was a good restorative for the other's nerves. As for himself, it was the more nerve racking strain, lying plastered against the ice with nothing to do but strive to stick on.

A groan and a quick cry of "Hold on!" warned him. With face pressed against the ice he made a supreme sticking effort, felt the rope slacken and knew Carson was slipping toward him. He did not dare look up until he felt the rope tighten and knew the other had again come to rest.

"Gee, that was a near go!" Carson chattered. "I came down over a yard. Now, you wait. I've got to dig new holds."

Holding the few pounds of strain necessary for Smoke with his left hand, the little man jabbed and chopped at the ice with his right. Ten minutes of this passed.

"Now, I'll tell you what I've done," Carson called down. "I've made heel holds and hand holds for you along side of me. I'm going to heave the rope in slow and easy, and you just come along sticking and not too fast. I'll tell you what, first of all. I'll take you on the rope, and you worry out of that pack. Get me?"

Smoke nodded, and with infinite care unbuckled his pack straps. With a wriggle of the shoulders he dislodged the pack, and Carson saw it slide over the bulge and out of sight.

"Now, I'm going to ditch mine," he called down. "You just take it easy and wait."

Five minutes later the upward struggle began. Smoke, after drying his hands on the insides of his arm sleeves, clawed into the climb—bellied and clung and stuck and plastered—sustained and helped by the pull of the rope. Alone, he could not have advanced.

A third of the way up, where the pitch was steeper and the ice less eroded, he felt the strain on the rope decreasing. He moved slower and slower. Here was no place to stop and remain. His most desperate effort could not prevent the stop, and he could feel the down slip beginning.

"I'm going," he called up.

"So am I," was the reply, gritted through Carson's teeth.

"Then cast loose."

Smoke felt the rope tauten in a futile effort; then the pace quickened, and as he went past his previous lodgment and over the bulge the last glimpse he caught of Carson he was turned over, with madly moving hands and feet striving to overcome the downward draw.

To Smoke's surprise, as he went over the bulge, there was no sheer fall. The rope restrained him as he slid down a steeper pitch, which quickly eased until he came to a halt in another niche on the verge of another bulge. Carson was now out of sight, ensconced in the place previously occupied by Smoke.

"Gee!" he could hear Carson shiver. "Gee!"

An interval of quiet followed, and then Smoke could feel the rope agitated.

"What are you doing?" he called up.

"Making more hand and foot holds," came the trembling answer. "You just wait. I'll have you up here in a jiffy. Don't mind the way I talk. I'm just excited."

"You're holding me by main strength," Smoke argued. "Soon or late, with the ice melting, you'll slip down after me. The thing for you to do is to cut loose. Hear me! There's no use both of us going. Get that? You're the biggest little man in creation, but you've done your best. You cut loose!"

"You shut up! I'm going to make holes this time deep enough to haul up a span of horses."

Several silent minutes passed. Smoke could hear the metallic strike and hack of the knife, and occasionally driblets of ice slid over the bulge and came down to him. Thirsty, clinging on hand and foot, he caught the fragments in his mouth and melted them to water, which he swallowed.

He heard a gasp that slid into a groan of despair and felt a slackening of the rope that made him claw. Immediately the rope tightened again. Straining his eyes in an upward look along the steep slope, he stared a moment, then saw the knife, point first, slide over the verge of the bulge and down upon him. He tucked his cheek to it, shrank from the pang of cut flesh, tucked more tightly and felt the knife come to rest.

"I'm a slob!" came the wail down the crevasse.

"Cheer up, I've got it!" Smoke answered.

"Stay! Wait! I've got a lot of string in my pocket. I'll drop it down to you, and you send the knife up."

Smoke made no reply. He was battling with a sudden rush of thought.

"Hey, you! Here comes the string Tell me when you've got it."

A small pocketknife weighted on the string slid down the ice. Smoke got it, opened the larger blade by a quick effort of his teeth and one hand and made sure that the blade was sharp. Then he tied the sheath knife to the end of the string.

"Haul away!" he called.

With strained eyes he saw the upward progress of the knife. But he saw more—a little man, afraid and indomitable, who shivered and chattered, whose head swam with giddiness and who mastered his qualms and distresses and played a hero's part. Here was a proper meat eater, eager with friendliness, generous to destruction, with a grit that shaking fear could not shake.

Then, too, he considered the situation cold bloodedly. There was no chance for two. Steadily they were sliding into the heart of the glacier, and it was his greater weight that was dragging the little man down. The little man could stick like a fly. Alone, he could save himself.

"Bully for us!" came the voice from above, down and across the bridge of ice. "Now we'll get out of here in two shakes."

The awful struggle for good cheer and hope in Carson's voice decided Smoke.

"Listen to me," he said steadily, vainly striving to shake the vision of Joy Gastell's face from his brain. "I sent that knife up for you to get out with. Get that? I'm going to chop loose with the jackknife. It's one or both of us. Get that?"

"Wait! For God's sake, wait!" Carson screamed down. "You can't do that! Give me a chance to get you out. Be calm, old horse. We'll make the turn. You'll see, I'm going to dig holes that'll lift a house and barn."

Smoke made no reply. Slowly and gently, fascinated by the sight, he cut with the knife until one of the three strands popped and parted.

"What are you doing?" Carson cried desperately. "If you cut I'll never forgive you—never. I tell you it's two or nothing. We're going to get out. Wait! For God's sake!"

And Smoke, staring at the parted strand, five inches before his eyes, knew fear in all its weakness. He did not want to die. He recoiled from the shimmering abyss beneath him, and his panic brain urged all the preposterous optimism of delay. It was fear that prompted him to compromise.

"All right," he called up. "I'll wait. Do your best. But I tell you, Carson, if we both start slipping again I'm going to cut."

"Huh! Forget it. When we start, old horse, we start up. I'm a porous plaster. I could stick here if it was twice as steep. I'm getting a sizable hole for one heel already. Now, you hush, and let me work."

* * * * * * *

A gasp and a groan and an abrupt slackening of the rope warned him. He began to slip. The movement was very slow. The rope tightened loyally, but he continued to slip. Carson could not hold him and was slipping with him. The digging toe of his farther extended foot encountered vacancy, and he knew that it was over the straightaway fall. And he knew, too, that in another moment his falling body would jerk Carson's after it.

Blindly, desperately, all the vitality and life love of him beaten down in a flashing instant by a shuddering perception of right and wrong, he brought the knife edge across the rope, saw the strands part, felt himself slide more rapidly and then fall.

What happened then he did not know. He was not unconscious, but it happened too quickly, and it was unexpected. Instead of falling to his death his feet almost immediately struck in water, and he sat violently down in water that splashed coolingly on his face.

His first impression was that the crevasse was shallower than he had imagined and that he had safely fetched bottom. But of this he was quickly disabused. The opposite wall was a dozen feet away. He lay in a basin formed in an outjut of the ice wall by melting water that dribbled and trickled over the bulge above and fell sheer down a distance of a dozen feet. This had hollowed out the basin. Where he sat the water was two feet deep, and it was flush with the rim. He peered over the rim and looked down the narrow chasm hundreds of feet to the torrent that foamed along the bottom.

"Oh, why did you?" he heard a wail from above.

"Listen!" he called up. "I'm perfectly safe, sitting in a pool of water up to my neck. And here's both our packs. I'm going to sit on them. There's room for half a dozen here. If you slip stick close and you'll land. In the meantime you hike up and get out. Go to the cabin. Somebody's there. I saw the smoke. Get a rope or anything that will make rope, and come back and fish for me."

"Honest?" came Carson's incredulous voice.

"Cross my heart and hope to die. Now, get a hustle on or I'll catch my death of cold."

Smoke kept himself warm by kicking a channel through the rim with the heel of his shoe. By the time he had drained off the last of the water a call from Carson announced that he had reached the top.

After that Smoke occupied himself with drying his clothes. The late afternoon sun beat warmly in upon him, and he wrung out his garments and spread them about him.

Two hours later, perched naked on the two packs, he heard a voice above that he could not fail to identify.

"Oh, Smoke! Smoke!"

"Hello, Joy Gastell!" he called back. "Where'd you drop from?"

"Are you hurt?"

"Not even any skin off."

"Father's paying the rope down now. Do you see it?"

"Yes, and I've got it," he answered. "Now, wait a couple of minutes, please."

"What's the matter?" came her anxious query after several minutes. "Oh, I know you're hurt."

"No, I'm not. I'm dressing."

"Dressing?"

"Yes. I've been in swimming. Now! Ready? Hoist away!"

He sent up the two packs on the first trip, was subsequently rebuked by Joy Gastell and on the second trip came up himself.

Joy Gastell looked at him with glowing eyes while her father and Carson were busy coiling the rope. "How could you cut loose in that splendid way?" she cried. "It was—it was glorious, that's all."

Smoke waved the compliment away with a deprecatory hand.

"I know all about it," she persisted. "Carson told me. You sacrificed yourself to save me."

"Nothing of the sort," Smoke lied. "I could see that swimming pool right under me all the time."

THE WOMAN'S COLUMN

Washington, Jan. 21—An international romance of thrilling interest culminated this week with the marriage of Miss Cecelia May, the beautiful daughter of Col. and Mrs. Henry May, of this city, to Lieut. Wilhelm von Rath, of the German army, and a former attache of the German embassy in Washington. The first wedding plans of the young couple were disturbed by the breaking out of the war, when Lieut. von Rath was obliged to join his regiment. Miss May was touring Europe at the time and decided to stay in Berlin, where she was presented at court and greatly admired, it is said, by the Kaiser. Lieut. von Rath distinguished himself in the war, recently receiving the Iron Cross for conspicuous gallantry.

Wives of members of the cabinet, of the Senate and the House of Representatives and other men in public life are lending their aid in numbers to form a new organization to be known as "The Woman's National Made in U. S. A. League." Their aim is to arouse American women to buy only home-made products. Heads of women's organizations, wives of Governors, and other noted American women are among the honorary chairmen and patrons.

Chicago, Jan. 21—Qualifying the been as "eternal!" and "indefatigable," Miss Hazel Johnson, a senior in the Northwestern University School of Music, recently rebelled against the too frequent appearance of the Boston vegetable on the college menu and moved to a boarding-house, breaking the dean's rule that co-eds must sleep in the university dormitories. Her action, upheld by the general following of her fellow co-eds, who called her the "Little Spartan," resulted in the appointment of a new caterer.

San Francisco, Jan. 21—Dr. Anna Strong, "the little sister of children," has arrived in San Francisco from Washington to begin the installation of the government's child welfare exhibit at the exposition. Unlike most exhibits of welfare work, Dr. Strong will direct a "living" exhibit here, having children of all ages following out the various welfare methods.

Wichita, Kas., Jan. 12—Mrs. Iva May Warner, according to Judge S. T. Jocelyn, who recently dismissed the suit she had filed for divorce against her ninth husband, has the "bridal habit" and doesn't need a divorce.

Newark, Jan. 21—According to Mrs. Minnie J. Reynolds, of this city, State organizer of the Women's Political Union, equal suffrage will not put many women into office. In Colorado, she says, after 20 years of suffrage, only one per cent. of the officeholders are women.

Fargo, N. D., Jan. 21—Miss Anna Barrett, of Larimore, N. D., is the champion hog raiser of the State. She won the first prize in the pork production contest of North Dakota Agricultural College, her record exceeding by 31 per cent. that of the winner a year ago.

Cincinnati, O., Jan. 21.—College women from all parts of Ohio representing every woman's educational institution in the State, will hold a conference here tomorrow and Saturday. Among the speakers will be Miss Edith Campbell, Miss Emilie W. McVea and others interested in college and school work.

Lexington, Ky., Jan. 21—Mrs. Birdie Pollock Graham, of Santa Barbara, Cal., who is suing her husband, William Miller Graham, the oil magnate, for divorce, was a Bluegrass girl, born and brought up at Paris, Ky., where she is remembered for her beauty and vivacity. Mr. Graham's wealth is estimated at twenty millions.

San Francisco, Cal., Jan. 21—Miss Dorothy Becker, the fastest of the local girl swimmers, will sail next week for Honolulu to take part in a series of events against the best girl swimmers in the Hawaii Islands. Miss Ruth Stacker, champion of the islands, will be her principal opponent.

Chicago, Jan. 21—Miss Dorothy Linn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William R. Linn, who is to be married February 13 to Cyrus McCormick, is famed in Chicago society for the grace of her dancing, and has been the premiere danseuse at many benefit performances.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Jan. 12—The common household bed bug, and how to repulse his abiding love for mankind, came up for discussion recently before the Housekeepers' Co-operative Association, but only after a lively preliminary discussion on the subject. Some members believed it timely, while others averred that such a subject might create the impression that the members of the club needed the information. The matter was finally compromised by listing the discussion under the head of "Household Traditions."

Pandora Pig

(Who Wouldn't Wash.)

Pandora Pig had just one fault; she wasn't cross or mean,
But no one cared for her because she just would not keep clean.

Dirt made no difference at all to her; she didn't mind.
She'd walk right through the biggest hole of mud that she could find.

To scold her was a waste of time; 'twas really a disgrace
The way she used to come to meals with dirty hands and face.

And when they tried to make her wash she'd sit around and mope;
It always did affect her thus to hear them speak of soap.

She said: "It seems a foolish thing to wash myself today,
Because I will be just as bad tomorrow when I play."

Near to Pandora's house there lived a butcher's crippled son;
His parents felt so bad because he could not jump nor run.

And though they got him toys and things, he did not care a fig.
He said, "I want for a playmate a really, truly pig."

His father started right away a playmate pig to find;
Said he, "I do not care, I'll take a pig of ANY kind."

As he passed by Pandora's house he heard something go "Thud!"
It was Pandora playing in the blackest kind of mud.

"Oh-ho, oh-ho!" the butcher said (they always speak like that.)
"Pandora Pig, I'll take you home; run quick and fetch your hat."

And so Pandora went along, as dirty as could be.
"You must be scrubbed," the butcher said, "and scrubbed and scrubbed," said he.

But when he got her home and tried to clean her up he found
She wouldn't wash, but kicked and threw herself upon the ground.

Now no one really knows for sure Pandora Pig's true fate,
But my suspicions in the case I'll hasten to relate.

Soon after this, the butcher man displayed within his store
A finer lot of sausage than he'd ever shown before.

I would not want to say it was Pandora, but I think
You will agree with me she MAY have been the missing link.

I'm not real sure that we can tell just what this tale may mean,
But, anyway, we all agree it's better to keep clean.

Adventures in Matrimony

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

Julius Manning had married the woman of his choice. It was a love match and he had been entirely devoted to her before Mildred appeared on the horizon. Then, as his friends remarked, he became actually "daffy."

If his wife noticed anything unusual in his conduct, she made no sign, but, as the neighbors said, "How could she help seeing how foolish he was making himself?" He devoted every spare minute to the young lady, often to the utter neglect of his wife. He carried Mildred's picture about with him and buttonholed his friends to show it to them in the most shameless fashion. They laughed behind their hands, winked slyly to one another and shook their heads. There was nothing to say.

Anybody could see that the infatuation was all on one side. Perhaps that was the reason why the wife showed no jealousy. Without receiving any encouragement at all, Julius would press the girl to permit him to take her for a ride, leaving his wife at home alone.

Mildred accepted these attentions with utter indifference. She seemed to think mankind had been created solely to bow at her feet, but she cared so little for Manning's company that she had actually been known to go to sleep in the carriage. However, he was hopeful through it all. "I will teach her to love me in time," he thought. "Love begets love." So he devoted himself to her anew, anticipated all her wants and bought her gifts. Sometimes she refused to notice these at all, and if his greatest exertion brought a smile to her face he was happy.

There was a telephone in his teaching room at college, and he had been known to call up and inquire about Mildred's health at times when she was indisposed, when the room was half full of students going and coming to classes. Indeed his obsession had come to be quite a joke on the campus.

Mildred's doctor hurried around the corner or up an alley to avoid being stopped and questioned at length as to the state of the young lady's health, for he used to say, "If once he buttonholes me I am a lost man. I am lucky to break away in half an hour."

Indeed, his infatuation was so universally discussed, that people had been known to refer to it in his wife's presence, but she never expressed herself about the matter, as far as any one knew.

So time wore on. It brought no diminution in the love and attention lavished by Julius Manning on his idol.

One day Mildred was alone in the parlor with her willing slave. He had been talking to her in low tones. He thought she looked at him with a new interest.

"Do you love me, Mildred?" he pleaded.

She did not answer, but she gave no sign of displeasure.

"Speak to me, dear little girl," he whispered, taking her in his arms.

She made no resistance, but nestled her head on his shoulder. He laid his cheek against her hair and resigned himself to the happiness of the moment. Finally he raised her face and looked into her eyes. "Whom do you love? Won't you tell me?" he pleaded.

"Pa-pa," cooed the tiny maiden, smiling beatifically. He hugged her to his heart.

"Oh, Mary!" he called. "She said 'papa' first. Isn't that a triumph?"

Household Hints

GOOD CORN MEAL DISHES

Corn Meal Pancakes—Two cups flour, one-half cup corn meal, 1½ tablespoons baking powder, 1½ teaspoons salt, one-half cup sugar, 1½ cups boiling water, 1¼ cups milk, one egg. Add meal to boiling water, boil five minutes, turn into a bowl, add milk and remaining dry ingredients mixed and sifted, then the egg well beaten. Cook same as pancakes. Serve with syrup.

Sour Milk Corn Bread—Two cups corn meal, two cups sour milk, two tablespoons shortening, two tablespoons sugar (white), 1½ teaspoons salt, two eggs, one teaspoon soda, one tablespoon cold water. Beat eggs well.

There are two ways to mix this bread, one way is this: The meal, milk, salt, butter and sugar are cooked in double boiler about ten minutes; when mixture is cool, the eggs are added, soda dissolved in the water.

Other way: All dry ingredients, including the soda, are mixed together, then the sour milk, eggs well beaten, and butter, are added; omit the cold water. Bake 30 minutes in granite pans.

Corn Meal Mush With Pork—One pound lean pork (part meat, part bone), one cup corn meal, one teaspoon salt, one-half teaspoon powdered sage, and water. Cook park in water until meat can be easily removed from bone. Remove meat, cool broth. Remove the fat, reduce broth to about a quart or add water to bring it up to this amount; now cook the corn meal in it; add the meat finely chopped, and the seasonings; pack in granite bread tins. Cut into slices and fry. Beef may be used instead of pork if preferred.

Corn Meal Rolls—One and one-fourth cups wheat flour, three and three-fourths cups corn meal, three teaspoons baking powder, two tablespoons butter or shortening, one egg, one-half cup milk, one teaspoon salt. Sift together the flour, baking powder and salt, and mix with the meal. Rub butter into dry ingredients, beat egg, add milk, add mixture to dry ingredients, add more milk if necessary. Make a soft dough, roll out on floured board, handle carefully. Cut with a biscuit cutter, fold like Parker House rolls, bake in quick oven.

THINGS WORTH KNOWING

Fasten back and of a child's underdrawers with safety pins under the buttonholes in the back of his bloomers.

When cooking anything containing grease, immediately upon emptying the pan sift cleanser into it. The grease may be easily removed at dish-washing time.

In icy weather—It is economy to have new rubbers; if not, glue on soles a piece of felt which can be renewed as it wears, or paste a few strips of adhesive plaster or friction tape to soles or rubbers. This is for icy walks, but not good when walks are wet.

THE TABLE

Cooked Salad Dressing—Three eggs beaten just a little, six tablespoons cream, three tablespoons butter, two level teaspoons prepared French mustard (not the dry—it is too strong), one teaspoon salt, one third pepper, one-half cup sugar, one tea cup half water and half vinegar. Boil in double boiler, stirring constantly until thick. Do not cook too long or too fast as it will curdle. It thickens after it is cool, so does not have to cook until real thick. The recipe will make one pint.

DRESS WARM AND KEEP FEET DRY

Tells Rheumatism Sufferers to Take Salts and Get Rid of Uric Acid

Rheumatism is no respecter of age, sex, color or rank. If not the most dangerous of human afflictions it is one of the most painful. Those subject to rheumatism should eat less meat, dress as warmly as possible, avoid any undue exposure, and, above all, drink lots of pure water.

Rheumatism is caused by uric acid, which is generated in the bowels and absorbed into the blood. It is the function of the kidneys to filter this acid from the blood and cast it out in the urine; the pores of the skin are also a means of freeing the blood of this impurity. In damp and chilly, cold weather the skin pores are closed thus forcing the kidneys to do double work, they become weak and sluggish and fail to eliminate this uric acid, which keeps accumulating and circulating through the system, eventually settling in the joints and muscles, causing stiffness, soreness and pain called rheumatism.

At the first twinge of rheumatism get from any pharmacy about four ounces of Jad Salts; put a tablespoonful in a glass of water and drink before breakfast each morning for a week. This is said to eliminate uric acid by stimulating the kidneys to normal action, thus ridding the blood of these impurities.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is used with excellent results by thousands of folks who are subject to rheumatism. Here you have a pleasant, effervescent lithia water drink which overcomes uric acid and is beneficial to your kidneys as well.

STRANGE AS IT MAY SEEM

One of the most common contradictions in the average man is to thoughtfully provide an estate to sustain his family after he is gone, and then leave the estate unprotected, in the hands of inexperienced heirs or under the control of a friend who may not be equipped to handle or invest the property.

And even if an individual is competent to act as executor—trustee, he cannot be depended on to serve. He may not survive you; he may become disabled or move away; he may want to travel and not be tied down. No such uncertainties attend the appointment of this responsible Company. Its service is efficient and unfailing.

ALFRED C. ESTES Y. M. C. A. SEC'Y

Announced as Successor of Herbert E. Parker at Annual Dinner Last Night.

WORK SHOWS A DEFICIT

Directors Elected and Diners Hear of Work For Army and Navy From George A. Reeder—Mr. Parker Gives His "Swan Song."

Alfred C. Estes will succeed Herbert E. Parker as the secretary of the Plainfield Young Men's Christian Association. This was announced by President William D. Murray, at the annual meeting and dinner of the organization held in the Y. M. C. A. Auditorium, last night. Mr. Estes has been one of the secretaries of the State executive committee for many years, and is a man of wide experience in the work, giving up his State position for family reasons, as his present position takes him from home much of the time. He is said to be of pleasing personality.

Other features of the dinner were the election of six directors for the ensuing year, a "swan song," by Mr. Parker, who leaves next month, and an address on the work of the Army and Navy Y. M. C. A., by George A. Reeder, one of the secretaries engaged in that work. The new directors are J. H. Manning, James MacClymont, F. R. Stevens, Howard McWilliams, William D. Murray and F. E. Smith, all re-elected.

Following the serving of an excellent dinner, President Murray, who acted as toastmaster, called on Mr. Parker, saying that one sad feature of the evening was the fact that the association had to part with him. He declared that the work Mr. Parker had done had been of the best, and all were sorry to see him go.

Mr. Parker said in opening that his mood was not one of exaltation in the thought that he was leaving, but rather of gratitude for the privilege of spending seven years in Plainfield, which he considers good association soil. He declared that his secretaryship here had been an apprenticeship, and said that in his opinion the main problem is the great problem of the country, so that there was great work for the Y. M. C. A. Here in Plainfield the best days of the association were declared to be in the future, and that he thought the time would come when the association would have a building three times as large as the present one, administering to the colored men and boys, as well as those now reached. He concluded by saying that he hoped the new secretary would get all he asks for and that he would ask for a great deal.

At the conclusion of Mr. Parker's remarks, President Murray read his annual report. It shows that there is a membership of 524, of which 117 are boys and 353 are men. 296 are enrolled in the gymnasium classes, there being nineteen classes per week. Mr. Murray continued "The

PROF. PAUL E. TITSWORTH, OF ALFRED, TO LECTURE

The Women's Society for Christian Work will meet on Wednesday afternoon at the usual hours for work and business.

Professor Paul E. Titsworth, of Alfred University, will deliver his lecture, "The Value of a Man," in the church on Tuesday evening, February 9.

The church building at North Loop is now nearly enclosed, the roof boards being on and the brick work almost completed.

The Woman's Society for Christian Work will give a musicale under the direction of Mrs. Noel G. Evans and Miss Mabel A. Maxson on Tuesday evening, January 26, at 8 o'clock. One of the attractions of the program is a sextette of ladies' voices. At the close a silver offering will be collected, and ice cream and cake will be for sale.

PUBLIC MUSIC LESSONS.

An added feature will be added to the Public Recreation Committee's work in the near future, it being planned to give a course of piano lessons to those desiring instruction. Those interested may secure further information by applying at the office of the committee in the Stillman School building.

Red Letter Votes.

Now for the great Library Contest. For balance of this week at J. H. J. Claus' grocery store, 666 West Third street—ten votes with every 10 cents paid. Hurry up and make them count for your favorite institution. We also give S. and H. Stamps.—Adv. 1 21 2

JUDGE I. P. RUNYON MAY BE RE-APPOINTED

As a Result of Wrangle Among Democrats He is Likely to Hold Job.

So insistent have become the friends of Judge Isaac P. Runyon, now presiding over the Somerset County District Court, that it is said that he still has a chance to be reappointed. Judge Runyon is a Republican, and in the "spoils of war" the place would naturally go to a Democrat, the appointment being made by Governor James F. Fielder. But the Democrats have gotten into more or less of a wrangle over the matter, as was explained last night in the aDily Press, and as a result there is a chance that Mr. Runyon will be renamed as a compromise candidate. He has the almost universal backing of the county bar association, and aside from that a number of well known citizens, both Democrats and Republicans, have interceded with the Governor for Mr. Runyon, urging that his appointment would be the best possible one that can be made.

The present candidates are William Vosseller, who is backed by the faction in the county which Banking and Insurance Commissioner George M. LaMont leads, and the other is George Pace, who has the support of County Chairman DeMond and his friends. It was said earlier in the week that Mr. Pace was to be named, but something has happened to interfere, and as a result Mr. Runyon may still land the place, although he is personally not doing anything to bring it about.

BEAUTIFUL CHURCH WINDOW INSTALLED

Extensive Improvements at First Baptist Church Are Now Complete.

The extensive improvements which were begun at the First Baptist church nearly two years ago were completed yesterday with the installation of the handsome ornamental window in the front of the edifice. This window has a width of sixteen feet and is about twenty feet in heighth and is considered one of the most artistic of the many to be found in this city.

The window is a combination affair, the upper part being a copy of Raphael's Transfiguration of the Christ, while the lower part represents a group of Apostles from Titian's Assumption of the Virgin Mary.

The blending of the colors is beautiful throughout. In order to obtain the sky effect it was necessary to use five and six thicknesses of glass. The central figure of the Christ is most impressive and considerable difficulty was experienced in making it. Three times the head was broken in the firing process. Topping the large window is a small circular d esign with a picture of a dove representing the Holy Spirit, surrounded by angels.

The designer and maker of the window was the Montague Castle London Company, of New York, and it was installed by Walter Apgar under the direction of Charles H. Smith, who has supervised the improvements at the church. Charles W. McCutchen, A. M. Harris and Alexander Gilbert comprised the committee from the church which arranged for the purchase of the window.

"AT HOME" AT WARREN CHAPEL LARGELY ATTENDED

Rev. and Mrs. J. O. McKelvey, held an "at home" in Warren chapel last night which was largely attended by members of the congregation and their friends. Mrs. Joseph Edgar rendered several vocal selections and Miss Try Mattox entertained with recitations.

After the regular program was concluded a general social time was enjoyed and refreshments were served. Mrs. John Higgins was chairman of the refreshment committee.

"DAMON AND PYTHIAS."

Under the auspices and for the benefit of Unity Lodge, No. 102, Knights of Pythias, the famous photo-play, "Damon and Pythias," will be shown at the Plainfield Theatre, Thursday afternoon and evening, February 4. This picture has been pronounced as one of the masterpieces in photography and will no doubt attract large audiences.

JANUARY JURORS GIVE A BANQUET

"Get-Together" Affair in the Waldorf Last Night a Big Success.

INTERESTING SPEECHES

Judge James C. Connolly and Sheriff George Otto Make Addresses—Presentations to Foreman and Clerk—Those Present.

Members of the Union County Grand Jury for the January term of court, gathered at the Waldorf, last night, where a "get-together" meeting and banquet was enjoyed, county officials being the invited guests. J. Arthur Puisford, of Elizabeth, who acted as toastmaster, during the evening made two presentations on behalf of the jurors, one to Foreman George A. Watson, of Cranford, and the other to the clerk, Robert Eaton. Mr. Watson was presented with a handsome fountain pen and the jurors gift to the clerk was a smoking pipe. An excellent menu of appetizing etables was provided by Henry Windham, the banquet being the outstanding feature.

Judge James C. Connolly, of Elizabeth, was a speaker, and he explained the duty of a juror and the interest that should be maintained in court procedure. The judge lauded the present panel on its fitness and declared that meetings of a social nature should be encouraged.

The principal speech of the evening was made by Sheriff George Otto, of Elizabeth, his topic being "Jail

PLAN FOR ANNUAL ALUMNI RECEPTION

P. H. S. Grads to Hold the Affair on February Twenty-second.

Plans are underway for the annual reception and dance of the Plainfield High School Alumni Association, which will be held in the auditorium on Monday evening, February 22. It is probable that the annual business meeting of the association will be held in the library of the High School at 8:30 the same evening, the dance commencing at 9 o'clock.

The annual reception and dance of the association has always been held on the night of Washington's Birthday, until last year, when, on account of the work then in progress at the High School, it was postponed and combined with the commencement dance given to the graduating class of 1914. The practice of making the commencement dance in June an alumni association affair will undoubtedly be continued, while the dance in February will be distinctly one for graduates of the school and their guests.

Admission to the dance will be by ticket, each member of the association being privileged to invite one guest. The surplus from the payment of dues for 1915 will be devoted to the Alumni Association fund, which is used for educational purposes.

With the growth of the school, the demand upon the association fund for continuation of educational pursuits by graduates of the High School has greatly increased. The money is loaned on long term notes without interest. Howard H. Craig is chairman of the committee in charge of the dance.

PATENTS FOR PLAINFIELDERS.

Among the patents granted recently are the following credited to Plainfielders: Henry E. Bickel, dust separator; airbrake apparaus; Clifford E. Dunn, safety razor; Hector V. Lough, bedstead corner bracket, Edgar H. Mumford, device for making castings. John H. V. Bache, of Bound Brook, was granted one for a sanitary tent; Albert J. Beckley, of Westfield, for a stapling machine, and Robert T. Johnson, of Scotch Plains, for a casting furnace.

HUGH RICKETTS ILL.

Hugh Ricketts, of West Front street, who has been ill for some time past, has entered the University Hospital, Philadelphia, for treatment. He will be under the care of Dr. Sticker, a prominent Quaker City specialist.

AGED RESIDENT DIES SUDDENLY

"Uncle Billy" Craig Found Dead in Bed by His Wife Early This Morning.

VICTIM OF APOPLEXY

Stroke Came Upon Him Three Weeks Ago But He Rallied Well and Was About the House Yesterday—Widely Known Here.

William R. Craig, better known as "Uncle Billy" Craig, was found dead in bed at his late home, 1850 Myrtle avenue, this morning. Although Mr. Craig, who was seventy-one years of age, had suffered a severe stroke of apoplexy several weeks ago, he rallied well after the attack and before retiring last night had spent his best day since the affliction had seized him. Several times during the night his wife had gone to his room and he was apparently sleeping soundly. In accordance with her usual custom she went to call him at 7:45 this morning and was startled to find that he did not answer her summonings. Although first appearances would indicate that he was still sleeping, Mrs. Craig's strenuous efforts to arouse him proved futile and she was suddenly confronted with the realization that he was dead. A physician was summoned and he said that the man had been dead for several hours.

A life-long resident of this section, Mr. Craig had become popular among a wide circle of acquaintances. Although well versed in all that pertained to the municipality he was re-

LOCAL WOMAN GETS CITIZENSHIP PAPERS

Miss Olive DeLany One of the Successful Applicants for Naturalization.

Sixty-one applicants for naturalization papers were granted by Judge James C. Connolly, in Elizabeth, this morning, among them being that of Miss Olive Z. DeLany, a trained nurse, of this city. The remainder of the ninety-one were withheld. The petitioners appeared before Naturalization Examiner Carpenter, in the Court of Common Pleas, and a majority of the answers showed intelligence and familiarity with the governmental affairs of the city, county, State and nation.

Miss DeLany is a native of Canada and has been following her profession here for several years. Aside from being the only woman to make application at this session of the court, Miss DeLany had a woman for one of her witnesses. She is Miss Marguerite Dodge, also of this city. The other witness was Harry C. Runyon a local lawyer.

ELKS ARE PLANNING FOR THEIR FIFTH RECEPTION

Several novel features have been arranged for the fifth informal reception and dance of the local Elks' winter series to be held in the Watchung avenue clubhouse next Tuesday night, and those who have attended the previous functions will find something of additional interest in store for them on this occasion.

Dancing, as usual, will be one of the bright features, with music by Van Epps' orchestra with its Victor drummer. Refreshments will be served during the intermissions by the entertainment committee. Attention is called to the fact that the fifth reception is being held Tuesday night instead of Thursday night, the latter day having been selected for all of the foregoing events.

NILS S. R. ANDERSON.

The death of Nils S. R. Anderson, father of Nils Anderson, of Prospect avenue, occurred Thursday morning, at his late residence, 96 West End avenue, Brooklyn. Mr. Anderson is survived by his wife and four sons. Funeral services will be held tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock and interment will be at Cypress Hills cemetery, Long Island. Funeral private.

MUSICIANS TO ORGANIZE.

B. A. Paroubek, of this city, has received a charter from the American Federation of Musicians for the local Musical Union and a meeting of those interested in the project will be held in the Trades' Council Hall, Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

BAKER FIGURES IN AUTO CRASH

Wagon and Machine Came Together at Right Angles on West Seventh Street.

ONE MAN IN HOSPITAL

Nathan Lewis, of West Third Street, the Only One Hurt—His Horse Killed—Auto and Wagon Damaged.

One man is in Muhlenberg Hospital, a horse is dead and an automobile and wagon are badly damaged as the result of a collision on West Seventh street, at the junction of Monroe avenue, at dusk last night. Nathan Lewis, a West Third street baker, was driving his delivery wagon south on Monroe avenue at 6 o'clock and an automobile owned and driven by Robert M. Silber, of 365 Main street, Orange, was traveling in a westerly direction on West Seventh street. Owing to a hedge at the corner the view of both drivers was completely obstructed and neither saw the other until the vehicles came together at right angles.

The impact was a heavy one and the horse was hurled a distance of several yards. When Mr. Silber stopped his car he found the equine lying at the side of the road with the baker wagon on top of it and Lewis on top of the wagon. Lewis was struggling to extricate himself from the wreckage and appeared to be badly hurt.

Chief of Police Kiely was notified and together with Sergeant Maurice

KING'S DAUGHTERS' DONATION PARTY

Ninth Annual Affair Held at The Day Nursery Yesterday.

The ninth annual birthday party and donation tea was held yesterday afternoon and evening, at The Day Nursery under the auspices of the City Union of King's Daughters, and was largely attended by members and friends of the organization. The rooms of the nursery were thronged with visitors, each one bringing something for the storeroom. The donations were generous, comprising canned fruit, vegetables, jellies, vegetables and dry groceries; also money, the offering at the door netting a substantial sum.

The reception committee comprising officers and other members of The King's Daughters included Mrs. Nelson A. Miller, president; Mrs. Frank W. Jones, Mrs. A. M. Most, Mrs. Stuart H. Patterson, Mrs. J. A. Peterkin, Mrs. DeWitt C. Ivins, Mrs. Lamar VanSyckel, Mrs O. L. Jenkins and Mrs. Robinson.

Members of the Cup Bearers and In His Name Circles assisted in serving refreshments during the afternoon and evening, the young women taking turns in having charge of the table.

The guests during their visit to The Day Nursery also took occasion to inspect the place and learn something of the work that is being done there for the children of the city.

MRS. WALTER L. RANDALL GIVEN A SURPRISE PARTY

A party of friends surprised Mrs. Walter L. Randall at her home, 27 Stone street, last night. The company met at Greenbrook road and Somerset street and proceeded to the Randall home. The surprise was complete. The evening was spent enjoying selections on the Victrola, dancing and card playing, after which refreshments were served.

Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. Hervey Ferguson, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Watts, Mr. and Mrs. Walter M. Dennis and sons, Walter and Ralph; Mr. and Mrs. George Rilling, Miss Lena Rilling, Charles F. Duncan, O. P. Crane, of Westfield, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Siedner and son, Walter; Richard Sardabock. Mrs. Randall received a number of gifts, including a sum of gold.

ENTERTAINS HOME DEPT.

Mrs. Julius Williams, of West Front street, entertained the Home Department visitors of Trinity Reformed church, at the regular quarterly business meeting, yesterday afternoon. The business for the quarter was transacted and was followed by a social hour. Refreshments were served. The hostess was assisted by Mrs. Henry VanName, Mrs. Arthur Williams, Miss Louise Williams and Miss M. E. Howlett.

TRUST CO. HONORS ORVILLE T. WARING

Presented With Loving Cup on His Seventy-fifth Birthday Anniversary.

After Orville T. Waring had been re-elected president of the Plainfield Trust Company at a meting of the directors last night, he was given a pleasant surprise when Charles W. McCutchen on behalf of the directors presented him with a handsome silver loving cup. The presentation was a mark of esteem for faithful services and also in honor of his reaching his seventy-fifth birthday, the anniversary occurring yesterday. Mr. Waring was completely surprised. Mr. McCutchen recalled in his well chosen remarks the long and honored service of Mr. Waring and he and his fellow-directors also took occasion to congratulate him on the occasion of his birthday.

Mr. Waring was born at Saratoga, N. Y., coming to Plainfield in 1877. He was organizer of the New York branch of the Standard Oil Company and for many years has been a director of the New Jersey company. Since coming to this city he has always been identified with the best interests of Plainfield. When The Plainfield Trust Company was established here in 1904, Mr. Waring was chosen its president and he has been re-elected to that position every year since that time. He is held in the highest esteem by his fellow directors in the trust company. The cup presented to Mr. Waring is a large one and is appropriately inscribed. Following the presentation, Mr. Waring made a response in which he thanked the directors for their kind remembrance.

The officers elected last night were: President, Orville T. Waring; vice-presidents, Augustus V. Heely and J. Herbert Case; secretary-treasurer, DeWitt Hubbell; assistant secretary-treasurer, F. Irving Walsh; assistant treasurer, A. H. Kirby. Former State Senator Ernest R. Ackerman, who was elected a director at the annual meeting last week, was also present at the organization meeting. It was expected that a vice-president to succeed the late Henry A. McGee would be chosen, but this matter was laid over for the present time.

CELEBRATES DOUBLE EVENT WHILE DETAINED AT HOME

J. V. E. Vanderhoef, of Prospect place, who has been detained at home the past two weeks by illness, is reported as getting along nicely. Wednesday was his birthday and wedding anniversary and both Mrs. Vanderhoef and he received many messages of congratulations and wishes for his speedy recovery to health. What Mr. Vanderhoef appreciated more than anything else was a postal shower from his associates at the Woodhull & Martin store by whom he is held in high esteem.

Mr. Vanderhoef's illness was the result of a peculiar accident. He was moving trunks and ruptured a blood vessel.

SUBMARINE SINKS ENGLISH LINER

Durward Torpedoed While on Way to Rotterdam—Crew Rescued by Pilot Boat.

HAND-TO-HAND FIGHT

Both French and German Statements Say That Harmannsweilerkoff Battle Continues With Great Violence.

London, Jan. 22.—It was officially announced today that the English steamship Durward, bound from Leith to Rotterdam, was torpedoed and sunk by a German submarine, yesterday, twenty-two miles northwest of the Bus Lightship. The crew was rescued by a Dutch pilot boat.

Amsterdam, Jan. 22.—The Telegraaf announces that the German submarine U-13 has sunk the British steamer Durward of 1,301 tons' register. The message from the Hook of Holland says the Durward was twenty-four miles out when the submarine approached her. The submarine took the boats containing the Durward's crew to Maas Lightship.

Paris, Jan. 22.—The French war office gave out the following statement at 3 o'clock this afternoon:

"In Belgium the enemy has violently bombarded Nieuport. Our infantry has made some slight progress to the east of the highway of Lomzaertzyde. Between Ypres and the Oise our artillery has conducted successful operations against earthworks, batteries of artillery and infantry concentrating there.

"From the Oise to the Argonnes the situation on the outskirts of Soissons is unchanged. Near Berry Au Bac a trench has been retaken by us.

"In the region of Perthes the enemy made an attack without success, during the night of January 20 and January 21 to the norwest of Beausejour. Between the Meuse and the Mosselle, to the southeast of St. Mihiel, in the forest of Apremont, a bombardment of extreme violence prevented us from holding possession of the German trenches captured yesterday on a front of 150 yards long.

"Northwest of Pont A Mousson in the forest of Le Pretre the enemy recaptured a portion of the trenches taken by us on January 20. We are now maintaining our positions on all the rest of the front there.

"In Alsace an infantry battle, which has taken place in the region of Harismannsweilerkopf continues with great violence, the fighting being body to body. Before Dannemarie our artillery dispersed the enemy's troops reassembling there."

Berlin (via wireless), Jan. 22.—The following statement was given out at German headquarters today:

"In the western theatre of war continuous rain renders impossible all important fighting between the coast and the La Basse Canal. Artillery duels are occurring at Arras. Yesterday we abandoned and blew up one of the trenches we took Wednes-

DUNELLEN

All the Happenings of the Day In Plainfield's Hustling Suburb.

Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Dusei, of Walnut street, spent yesterday in New York.

The condition of Mrs. Alfred Skinner, of Prospect avenue, who has been ill, remains about the same.

There will be a cake sale in the hardware store of Smalley Brothers' tomorrow. The sale, which is under the auspices of the Boy Scouts of Troop 2, will start at 8 o'clock in the morning and continue until 6 in the evening. Help the scouts along.

MR. AND MRS. CRAIG ENTERTAIN.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Craig, of Lincoln avenue, entertained on Wednesday evening, James Cunningham and sister, Miss Anna, of Somerville; Patrick Tierney, of Nome, Alaska; Miss Lillian Garretson, of Front street, and Mr. and Mrs. William A. Craig, of Second street. Mr. Tierney was the guest of honor. He is a former resident of Somerville. In 98 he was seized with the craze for gold and went to Alaska, where he has made a fortune in prospecting. Mr. Tierney gave each woman of the party a nugget of gold valued at between $8 and $10 a piece.

BIG CONTRACT.

The Smith Auto Express is fulfilling a contract of carting a 24-ton printing press for the Hall Press Works to a concern on William street, New York. Some of the parts of this large press alone weigh four tons. Four trips will be necessary to completely transport the press.

Miss Jennie Ryan, daughter of Councilman and Mrs. R. M. Ryan, has returned from Brooklyn, where she spent several weeks with her aunt, Mrs. Jennie Donovan.

Mrs. Thomas Humble, of North avenue, has the grip.

Postmaster Henry S. Garretson and Cashier Arthur J. Hamley were visitors in New York yesterday.

John McFadden, Francis Teeling and Edward Hannon, the star players of last year's local baseball team, are planning to secure jobs with the American Bridge Company at Trenton so as to land positions on the company's team, which is entered in the Delaware River League.

Mrs. H. F. Townley, of Madison avenue, has been entertaining company from out of town.

Theodore Tinsman has accepted a position as receiving clerk with the Saurer Motor Truck Company and will commence his duties on Monday.

Mrs. Reko Mingo, of North avenue, who has been having considerable trouble with her eyes, was taken to Muhlenberg Hospital at Plainfield for treatment yesterday afternoon.

Mrs. George Vail, of Dunellen avenue, and daughter, Mrs. George Romond, of Plainfield, spent yesterday afternoon in Westfield as the guests of Mrs. Lynus Hetfield, a former resident of this vicinity.

Lewis Schneider, of Front street, has entered the employ of Contractor A. H. Burdick.

Mrs. A. F. Samson, of New Market road, entertained the Afternoon Card Club this afternoon.

HEARING TOMORROW.

Isaac V. Smalley will be given a hearing tomorrow before City Judge W. G. DeMeza at Plainfield on a complaint made by the Smith Auto Express Company, alleging that he moved Herbert DeHart from the Craig house on Front street, Plainfield, to Mariners place, the same city, on Monday of this week, without a license. The action of the Smith Auto Express recalls to mind that they were made the defendants before Recorder David S. Campbell in the Borough Hall several months ago by Isaac V. Smalley, as marshal of the borough, who charged them with running two trucks with one license.

J. T. Rupell is laid up with rheumatism again.

The board of directors of the Dunellen Building and Loan Association met last evening at the office of Secretary George W. Day.

Blinkhorn Photo-plays Corporation offers Charles Dickens' novel, "The Chimes," in three reels of motion pictures, in the local theatre this evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Johnson, of New Market road, are entertaining Mrs. Randolph Giles, of Los Angeles, California.

Mr. and Mrs. LeRoy Scandell, of Front street, are the parents of a daughter, which arrived last night.

REMOVED TO HOSPITAL.

The condition of J. Newton Apgar, who was stricken with appendicitis Wednesday night, was such this morning that his physicians, Doctors Platt and Longbotham, deemed an immediate operation imperative. He was removed to the Muhlenberg Hospital at Plainfield by ambulance at 9 o'clock.

Recorder David S. Campbell, who was taken suddenly ill Wednesday night, is improved today.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Muller, of Lincoln avenue, will entertain the Saturday Evening Card Club, tomorrow night.

DID NOT ASSIST.

George Rinehart, of Penfield place, wishes to deny the statement made that he assisted in extricating the auto truck which was stuck on Prospect avenue, Wednesday night.

'Plains & Fanwood.

The twentieth anniversary of the founding of the local lodge of Jr. O. U. A. M., Twilight Council, was fittingly observed last night, when nearly a hundred people attended a dance in Excelsior Hall. Music was furnished by an out-of-town orchestra and after enjoying all of the latest steps refreshments were served.

The members of the Fanwood Fire Company are already making plans for the observance of the twenty-fifth anniversary of that body and to that end a committee has been appointed to take charge of the matter. The company was organized on November 18, 1890, six years before the incorporating of the borough, and in that time has done excellent work on numerous occasions. At the start it had a large truck and ladder wagon drawn by a team of horses and later the wagon was pulled by hand until recently when a hose cart was purchased. The company owns a large firehouse that is the only social centre in the borough and beginning with a dozen or so members it now embraces all of the men in the borough.

Many tickets have been sold for the comic opera, "Pirate of Penzance," to be presented in the Westfield Playhouse by the Westfield Golf Club, on Tuesday evening. About twenty-five local people are members of the club and prominent in its activities. Miss Hazel Gardiner, of Martine avenue, and Reed Holliday, a resident until a month ago, are members of the cast.

The young people of Scotch Plains will hold their regular social in the Sunday-school of the Baptist church this evening.

Dr. H. K. Carroll will direct the weekly prayer meeting in the Methodist church this evening.

Mrs. S. G. VanHoesen, of North avenue, has returned home from visiting friends in Bridgeton.

After being detained at his home on Springfield road for the past three weeks owing to a broken ankle, William Stansberry is now around on crutches.

Beginning with the forcing of all hackmen at the local railroad station the last article of the borough ordinance covering such matters has become enforced and the drivers abide by the same rules as are in force in other towns. This was made necessary after the complaining of some individual at a petty infringement.

Now that the eighth grade of School No. 1 has organized it will hold monthly meetings. At the last meeting colors of maroon and white were chosen and dues were fixed at five cents a month as it was found that the amount from that source would cover any expenses that would arise from the graduation exercises.

The Girls' Thursday Evening Sewing Class met last night with Miss Haskard, of Grand street.

The condition of Mrs. E. J. Reeder, president of the Ladies' Aid Society of the Methodist church, does not improve and the society has definitely decided to postpone its social to have been held next Friday evening.

South Plainfield.

A surprise party was given to John Dolan, on Wednesday evening, by a number of friends at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Harlow. Music and games were the features. The Misses Lulu and Anna Lammers, Nellie and Joseph Harlow played several selections on the piano. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Harlow, Mr. and Mrs. Emil Bittner, the Misses May and Nellie Barlow, Anna and Lulu Lammers, Elizabeth and Margaret McGuire, Elizabeth and Nellie Gearr, May Duffy, Laura Teenle, Florence Gordon, Winifred Saverd, Nettie Smith, Katherine Richards, of Plainfield, and Harry Lammers, John Hogan, Frank Phillips, John McCaffrey, Daniel Sofield, Clifford Brown, Paul Geary, Robert Hamilton, William Ball, Michael Saverd, R. Campbell, William Savage, of Plainfield; J. Patterson, of Plainfield; H. Boylan, of Plainfield; Joseph Harlow and John Geary.

At a meeting of the Middlesex Volunteer Fire Company held in the firehouse, this week, the following officers were elected for the year: President, Frank E. Faulks; vice-president, Edward TenEyck; secretary, Charles Brantingham; recording secretary, Harry Manning; treasurer, Harry Phillips; chief, William Hamilton; assistant chief, Robert Horn, Sr.; foreman, John Thornton. William Hamilton, Charles Brantingham, Edward TenEyck, Harry Phillips and John Thornton were re-elected.

Miss Mary Caffrey, of Wilkes Barre, Pa., who has been spending a few weeks with Mr. and Mrs. William Hamilton, is visiting Mr. and Mrs. P. J. McDonough, of Plainfield.

Mrs. Robert Ritter has returned home after visiting out-of-town friends.

Mrs. A. Soper has returned home after spending a day with her daughter, Mrs. George Schenck, of New Market.

Watchung.

Twenty-six young people were entertained Wednesday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William D. Mogey, of Interhaven avenue. The affair was given to introduce their nephew, Walter Pritchard, recently of Los Angeles, Cal. The evening was pleasantly spent dancing and playing games. A collation was served.

Mrs. Louise Coutts, of New York city, has been the guest of her sister, Mrs. Charles A. Eaton, of Sunbright Farm, on Valley road.

Douglas W. Demler will conduct the prayer meeting at Wilson chapel this evening. The topic will be "Bold Beginnings."

What the members of the Watchung Chemical Engine Company thought would be a hard night's work when the alarm rang last night, and the bright reflection of a large fire, which appeared in the Warrenville district, proved only to be a drill. After speeding to the boundary line between Warrenville and Martinsville the firemen discovered no fire except the reflection in the distance. Upon returning to fire headquarters it was learned that the fire was that of a large barn at Duke place in Raritan.

CAN NOW TELEPHONE FROM COAST TO COAST

San Francisco, Jan. 22.—This city moved yesterday to within talking distance of New York.

By the completion of the new direct overland telephone line between here and Denver officials of the Pacific Telephone Company were able to talk to officials of the New York company.

The new line has been finished for a month and conversations have been held, but the achievement will be celebrated next Monday by a formal opening of the San Francisco-New York service when Mayor Rolph will speak with Mayor Mitchell.

FEAR VOILENCE AT STRIKER'S FUNERAL

Roosevelt Residents Yesterday Held Indignation Meeting.

Roosevelt, Jan. 22—Fearing a demonstration when the double funeral of the two victims of the insurrection at the Clark & Williams plant takes place tomorrow, the Middlesex county authorities have placed extra men on guard in the foreign quarters. An indignation meeting was called yesterday afternoon when influential residents of this place voiced their sentiments regarding the conduct of the deputies who shot down the defenseless strikers. A committee of five was appointed to lay the whole matter before the Governor with the request that he make a thorough investigation.

Although it was reported in New Brunswick that the twenty-two deputies arested Tuesday night would be re-arrested last night on a second charge of manslaughter, because of the death of Carman Patty, up to noon today no official action had been taken. Several New York papers have charged that the addresses given by the deputies when they were arraigned before Judge [illegible] were faked and an investigation is now under way.

Roosevelt, yesterday, had its quietest day since the strike, there being no acts of violence recorded and the streets being practically deserted.

The facts concerning the hiring of the deputies became known today. The arrangements for them were made at a conference in New Brunswick, which was attended by Vice-President Pierson and Gifford, of the American Agricultural and Chemical Company, Judge Daly and Mayor Joseph A. Hermann, of the Borough of Roosevelt. Judge Daly told the factory officials that he saw nothing to do with policing the strike district and that it was up to Sheriff Edward F. Draughton and Mayor Hermann. The sheriff was called into the conference. Mayor Hermann told the conferees that he could keep the peace in the streets, but would not attempt to man the company's two plants here. The result of the conference was that the two officials demanded protection from the sheriff for their plants, holding the Mayor to his agreement to police the streets.

PARISHES TO HOLD SPECIAL SERVICES

Preparatory to the Consecration of the New Bishop.

The consecration of the Very Reverend Paul Clement Matthems as Bishop of the Diocese of New Jersey, will take place at St. Mary's church, Burlington, on Monday next, St. Paul's Day. All parishes in the diocese are directed to observe the day by a celebration of the holy communion and prayers for the new bishop. This appointment will be observed at Grace church on Sunday morning at 10:30 o'clock.

The service will combine a commemoration of the conversion of St Paul with the consecration of a Bishop in Apostolic succession to the Diocese of New Jersey. The occasion is so unusual and unique that the interest of all parishioners will without doubt be enlisted. The rector, Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, will preach a sermon appropriate to the occasion.

Similar services will be held at the Church of the Heavenly Rest, St. Stephen's church and Holy Cross church, the borough, being in charge of the rectors of these parishes.

BARN BURNS WHILE FIREMEN ENJOY BANQUET

Somerville, Jan. 22—One of the big barns on the 20,000-acre estate of James B. Duke, near here, was burned last night. The building was a handsome structure of rough stone and contained hundreds of tons of hay. The blaze illuminated the country for miles around.

The fire started at about 8 o'clock, when the firemen of the Somerville department were at a banquet. The men scattered at the first alarm and were soon at the fire with their apparatus and prevented the spread of the flames to the house of Superintendent David Smith and other costly buildings. A barn that stood on the site of the one destroyed was burned some years ago, and the structure now in ruins was believed to be fireproof. The fire was well under way before it was discovered. The loss is estimated at $25,000.

Why do so many mothers take Wood Brook milk? Perhaps they have noticed the difference in the doctor's bills, if they are wise economists. But a mother's first thought is the children, and it does not take her long to discover that Wood Brook milk is health insurance for the children.

MANY ATTEND FUNERAL SERVICE OF JOHN P. LAIRE

The funeral of John P. Laire was held at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon at his late home on Fairview avenue, the borough. There was a large attendance of relatives and friends, including representatives from Jerusalem Lodge, No. 26, F. & A. M., of which Mr. Laire was a member. Rev. John Y. Broek, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, officiated, and he was assisted by Rev. Dr. Philip B. Strong, pastor of the First Baptist church, who made a prayer.

There were many beautiful floral tributes. The burial was at Clinton and the pall-bearers were H. E. Gayle, who was a partner of Mr. Laire in business; A. M. Griffin, Fred E. Smith, John DeMott, Mayor Robert Clerk, Jr., of the borough, and B. Frank Coriell.

WAR NEWS

day southwest of Berry Au Bac. It has been partly destroyed by the collapsing of a factory wall.

"A French attack north of Verdun was easily repulsed. After battles on Wednesday south of St. Mihiel small French detachments still held out in the neighborhood of our positions. By an advance into the region before our front we cleared it of French as far as our old positions.

"The battle for Croix Des Larmes, northwest of Pont A Mousson, continues. A strong French force recaptured part of the position there, but the enemy was later repulsed with heavy losses.

"In the Vosges, north of Sennheim, we drove the enemy out of the heights of Harmannswellerkopf and took two officers and 125 men.

"In the eastern theatre of war the situation is unchanged. Our attack along a branch of the Szucha has progressed slowly. There is nothing new on the east bank of the Pilica."

Petrograd, Jan. 22.—The absence of official news as to the fighting between the Russian and Austro Hungarian forces in the Carpathians between Galicia and Hungary is due to bad weather, says the Russky Invalid, the semi-official newspaper. The Daklin and Uzhek passes are firmly held by the Russians.

The Reich reports that Yussuf Pasha has headed a peace party in Constantinople, which has gained many adherents among Turkish officials.

The Roumanian troops will enter Transylvania about the beginning of February, says the Reich. The movement will not constitute the initiation of an aggressive war against Austria, but will be a protective measure to prevent the situation in Transylvania becoming a menace to Roumania.

WHAT TRENTON THINKS OF LOCAL GIRLS' FIVE

Plainfield Y. W. C. A. Team Will Meet Undefeated Capital Cityites.

With a record of four consecutive victories and not a single defeat, the representative basketball team of the Trenton Y. W. C. A. seems destined to make a record on the court this season. Thus far the club is credited with triumphs over Perth Amboy and Newark on the capital city runways, while the team has also annexed conquests at Freehold and Phillipsburg. The team still has eight more contests to play, five straight at home and the last three on the schedule on foreign soil.

The most important contest of the season is the next contest on the list, that with the Plainfield Y. W. C. A., which will be played in the Trenton gymnasium on East Hanover street on February 6. The Trenton and Plainfield teams are regarded as two of the foremost girl clubs in this section, and there is always a great struggle for the supremacy when these rivals meet on the floor of battle.

Miss Hubbard, the physical directress, and Miss Balderston, captain of the Trenton quintet, have perfected a system of signals for the team and they look for the Trenton team to carry off the New Jersey State championship this season. Practice is indulged in daily and the club has already proved its class by its four wins.

The schedule for the balance of the season follows:

February 6—Plainfield, at Trenton.

February 12—Temple University, of Philadelphia, at Trenton.

February 20—Phillipsburg, at Trenton.

February 27—South Orange, at Trenton (afternoon).

March 5—Freehold, at Trenton.

March 13—Perth Amboy at Perth Amboy.

March 20—South Orange, at South Orange.

March 27—Temple University, at Philadelphia.

OFF FOR THE "SHE-SHORE."

The members of the Y. M. C. A. basketball squad will leave this afternoon on the 4:36 train for Asbury Park, where they will play the Crescent A. A. aggregation. Those who will take the trip are Captain "Al" Brynairski, "Bill" Taylor, Ashley Burner, Joe Gavett, Cutey" Glover, Jack Ricketts and Frank Dunning, Jr. The local players will be entertained over night by their rivals.

PEACOCKS TOOK ALL GAMES FROM HAWKS

NARROW ESCAPE FOR HOPE WHEN EXCELSIORS RALLY

The Hope Chapel junior basketball team won a hard fought victory over the Excelsior A. C. last night by the score of 26 to 23. The Hope players held the Excelsior team to one field goal in the initial period of play, the score at the end of the half being 10 to 2.

The Excelsior players outscored their opponents in the last half by five points but were still three points in the rear when the final whistle blew. The score follows:

INTEREST GROWING IN TRAP SHOOTING EVENTS

The Climax Gun Club shoot, to be held tomorrow, for the purpose of defraying the expense of installing a new Ideal Leggett trap, is only a forerunner of the grand opening shoot to be held February 12 (Lincoln's Birthday). A hearty invitation is extended to all shooters.

A large attendance is expected at both of these shoots, as the interest in this line of sport is growing steadily in this locality. The January shoot is just as important as the one to be held in February, for the success of the latter depends greatly on the result of the former. The Climax Gun Club grounds are being repaired and a new clubhouse is now in the course of construction.

CLAIM JUNIOR TITLE.

The A. H. A.'s, a basketball team composed of North Plainfield basketeers, hereby lays claim to the junior basketball championship of this vicinity. All teams wishing to dispute this title may schedule games by applying to Roy Stewart, captain, 38 Lincoln place.

OFFENSE COST HIM $5.

Charged with disorderly conduct in committing a public nuisance on East Third street, Samuel Fields, colored, was arraigned before Judge DeMeza in the city court this morning and fined $5.

Mrs. James Monroe Hilpot and son, Erwin, of Metuchen, have returned home after having spent a few days as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Erwin Hilpot, of East Fifth street.

SOME SPEED!

Jake Beckley was well along in his thirties when Tommy Leach broke into the big league. Diminutive Tom came heralded as a speed marvel, and all were anxious to see how fleet he was on the bases.

His first time at bat Leach was passed to first, where Beckley was playing. Jake played quite a distance from the bag, but no one could guess the reason until Leach started to steal.

Then the players of both teams were amazed to see Beckley rushing for second a step ahead of Leach. Jake slid and reached the bag first. He got up, dusted his knickerbockers and proudly exclaimed:

"Oh, I don't know! These bushers may be fast, but they haven't got all the speed on earth!"

LOBERT JOINS THE GIANTS.

Pitcher Al Demaree One of the Men to Go to Phillies.

Hans Lobert will be with the New York Giants this season, and he is expected to plug up the hole at third base. He did not do as well last season with the Philadelphia National league team as he had in previous years, but he is still a good hitter and a fast man on the bases.

Al Demaree, who is a cartoonist as well as a pitcher, is one of the men turned over by Manager McGraw in payment for Lobert. Demaree was purchased by the Giants from the Mobile club in the fall of 1912 and that year pitched and won the final game that gave the Giants the pennant. During the 1913 campaign Demaree blossomed out as one of the Giants' regular pitchers and performed brilliantly and consistently in the box for McGraw. He pitched in one of the world's series games against the Athletics in Philadelphia, but met defeat.

However, Demaree did not show up so well last year. He is somewhat frail and could only be counted on to pitch one game in every four days, and sometimes McGraw would keep him on the bench for more than a week after he pitched in a hard game.

For seven or eight innings Demaree is perhaps one of the best pitchers in the National league. In many of the games that he dropped last season he had the opposing team beaten until the eighth session began, and then he seemed to lose everything he had.

Magnates Are Economizing.

Major league magnates will carry their policy of economy even to the training camps and back again. With few exceptions the crop of rookies will be most moderate as compared to other seasons. Already many managers have set about paring down the surplus. Roger Bresnahan has asked for waivers on no less than eighteen. The exhibition schedules of the northern trips are being arranged with the view of saving as much transportation and traveling expenses as possible.

THE DACIA INCIDENT.

Just because the United States and British authorities seem to be unable to agree on the Dacia incident at the present time, there is no reason for believing that the entire question will not be amicably adjusted. Any other solution of the matter is unthinkable. It would be a crime against the English-speaking race for Great Britain and the United States to become involved in a serious quarrel over the rights of neutrals, and England especially, with a great war already on her hands, has good reason to do everything within her power—even to the extent of important concessions—in order to avoid so deplorable an issue at the present time.

Unfortunately international agreements as to the right of belligerents to search the ships of neutrals, in order to prevent contraband from reaching the enemy, are not as definite as they ought to be. In spite of the confusion and conflict of view, England is naturally disposed to regard unceasing vigilance as imperative, while on the other hand all neutrals are very properly determined to insist that their rights be respected and that no serious obstructions shall be placed in the path of their foreign trade.

This subject calls for careful study at some future convention of the nations at The Hague in a time of calm. The best interests of all concerned demand more definite regulations as well as more distinct provisions for the redress of grievances. Meanwhile an amicable adjustment of the present difference between England and the United States is earnestly to be desired not merely in our own interests but for the sake of the whole world.

When a lot of hired thugs and gunmen, who give fictitious addresses when they are arrested, are hired as deputy sheriffs, and shoot down peaceful and unarmed residents, it is time for the people of New Jersey to enter a mighty protest. The killing of two striking workmen at Roosevelt on Wednesday was without the slightest extenuating circumstances. The men were unarmed, and therefore could not possibly have made threats of a serious character to the group of plug-uglies and thugs whom the sheriff of Middlesex county had empowered to assist in the "enforcement of the law." We hope that the Middlesex county grand jury will make a thorough investigation of the matter, and that the prosecutor will do all in his power to put the men who did the shooting behind the bars. Deputy sheriffs sworn in for strike duty and railroad detectives seem to think that the power they gain by their titles permits them to perform all sorts of atrocities.

Countless opinions have been expressed as to the rights and wrongs of the great European war, but few have been as individual or as entertaining as that of the "colored brother" who, standing not long since in the crowd before a bulletin board, was heard to say: "I'm for de Kaiser because de Kaiser says 'God is with me,' and when a man says dat I stans for dat man. And de Germans is got de most money, too." Thereupon a bystander cut in: "Now you are getting beyond your depth. Go back to religion. When you talk religion we are interested." So the black man went back to "religion," continuing: "People says de Kaiser is to blame for dis war, but I tell you de Bible says der's got to be wars and rumors of wars." Where such a diverting and unconventional discussion of the topic would have ended was unfortunately left to vain conjecture when the attendant policeman, pushing and thrusting until the dusky orator was separated from his listeners, exclaimed: "Aw, go and hire a hall!"

The selection of Benjamin W. Evans as the new clerk of the Board of Education will meet with general approval by the people of the city. He has long been identified with school work here, and has proven capable and efficient in the positions he has occupied. His training will peculiarly fit him for the position, and if Mr. Conger must go, we know of no better selection that could be made for his successor. The Board of Education is to be congratulated, as well as Mr. Evans. As for Mr. Conger, during the time he has been here, his uniform courtesy to the newspapers, in aiding them in Board of Education matters, makes us regret in many ways that he is to leave at the end of the school year.

Governor Whitman, of New York, is beginning to learn already that reform is incompatible with machine politics. The Governor's legislative program is bitterly assailed by the organization and a big fight, one on the order of that directed against Governor Hughes, is threatened.

Billy Sunday was more noted for speed than hitting in his baseball days, but there is nothing wrong with his batting average now. In Philadelphia 1,300 hit the trail in one day in response to his urging.

Dr. H. M. Maxson, supervising principal of the Plainfield public schools will be the contributing editor for tomorrow. His subject will be "Universal Peace."

Reform." Mr. Otto outlined his proposed plans for bettering conditions in the Union county jail and expressed a wish that influential residents of Union county would co-operate with him in bringing about the improvement. The speaker maintained that prisoners sent to Elizabeth for a term of months should be put to work and if no labor was obtainable the time should be spent in academic study. The sheriff stated that the present methods of handling inmates at the county jail were crude and that there is much room for improvement. Mr. Otto said that men sent to jail should not be allowed to remain in idleness, as is the case at the present time, but should be given to understand that they would have earned their board while there by working for the county.

He maintained that too many of the prisoners sent to Elizabeth believe that the county owes them a living and that they are entitled to loaf around when sentenced to jail. This impression is a wrong one, according to the speaker, and in his opinion there is no better way to make the troublesome characters realize that they are prisoners, not "boarders," than to make them work and study.

Union County Prosecutor Alfred A. Stein and Chief of Police Kiely were also down on the speakers' list, but were unable to be present. Assistant Prosecutor Martin O'Connor attended the dinner and made a short, impromptu after dinner address of a humorous nature.

The members of the jury are: Geore A. Watson, foreman, Cranford; George W. Dowers, Roselle Park; James E. Johnston, Fanwood township; Charles H. Bent, Sr., Fanwood township; John A. Kervick, Elizabeth; DeWitt C. Ivins, Plainfield; Joseph P. Eilbacher, Elizabeth; Maurice A. Chaillet, Rahway; John B. Ross, Rahway; Edward F. Miller, Elizabeth; Duncan W. Taylor, Plainfield; Egbert E. Osterman, Elizabeth; Charles C. Denton, Elizabeth; Frederick Green, Summit; J. Arthur Pulsford, Elizabeth; Walter B. Johnson, Garwood; Frederick W. Aschenback, Elizabeth; Otto Wimmer, Elizabeth; Albert J. Beckly, Westfield; Peter S. Servis, Elizabeth; Walter H. Cole, Elizabeth, and Hyman Adelberg, Plainfield.

Great Semi-Annual Shoe Sale

January 18 we begin the clearance of Women's Fine Shoes to make room for Spring Goods.

Three Reasons Why You Should Be Interested:—

First—the shoes offered in this sale are this season's models from many of the best factories in existence.

Second—the prices are irresistable in that you can save, in many cases, as much as two dollars on a single pair.

Third—because the department is in charge of salespersons who exhaust every means to see that you are comfortably fitted and perfectly satisfied.

AGED RESIDENT DIES

tiring in character and never sought public distinction. Through real estate speculations and thrift, he had acquired wealth in his early life and has been retired for thirty-five years. Until stricken with the attack of apoplexy he was a familiar figure about town and always had a cheerful word for those whom he met.

He is survived by four sons, George, of Dunellen; William A., Robert S. and Arthur, of this city, the latter being a patrolman on the local police force. A sister, Mrs. Ramsey Blair, and a brother, James, both of this city, also survive. The funeral service will be held at the late residence Monday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, with Dr. Philip B. Strong in charge, assisted by the Rev. E. R. Brown, of the Dunellen Presbyterian church.

Mr. Craig came to this country from Scotland with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Allen Craig and located in Jersey City, when he was six years old, where they lived for ten years. The family then purchased the William Dunn farm in Netherwood, and moved to that place. After seven years in the East End, Mr. Craig's parents purchased the Jasper Cadmus farm on Rock avenue, near Green brook, now known as Debele's farm.

In 1870 he married Miss Katherine Waldron, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. James Waldron, then living at East Front and Washington streets. He became interested in the express business and for a number of years was associated with the late Peter Hoagland in the transfer business in this city. Up to the time of his retirement he was one of the best known expressmen at the local railroad depot.

BAKER IN AUTO CRASH

Higgins and the ambulance, he went to the scene of the accident. When the Chief arrived Lewis declared that he was going to die and pleaded to be removed to the hospital at once. After arriving at that institution a thorough examination was made of the victim's hurts and it was found that his injuries were not of a serious nature. He was badly cut and bruised and will be confined to the hospital for several days.

Silber was taken into custody on a technical charge of reckless driving and when arraigned before Judge DeMeza last night, was held in $200 bail for examination next Thursday morning in the city court, when it is thought Lewis will have sufficiently recovered to appear as a witness.

Commenting on the accident this morning, Chief Kiely said that both drivers were blameless and it was unavoidable. He declared that the conditions surrounding the crash further substantiate the contention that wagons, as well as automobiles, should have both head and tail lights after dark. According to Chief Kiely the automobile had head and tail lights, but the wagon had only a tail light, making it impossible for Silber to see the horse come up Monroe avenue from behind the hedge.

The horse's leg was broken and the animal's head was crushed. It was shot by Sergeant Higgins. This is the second collision in which Lewis has figured in the last few months, he having collided with Walter Apgar's automobile on West Front street, near Grant avenue, a short time ago.

The windshield of the auto was smashed and the mud-guards bent, while the bakery wagon was completely demolished.

LADIES' AID SOCIETY HOLD SEWING MEETING

Mrs. M. H. Ewart, of Fairview avenue, entertained the Sewing Circle of the Ladies' Aid Society of the First Methodist church at her home yesterday afternoon. She was assisted by Mrs. Frank Rowley, Mrs. James Love and Mrs. Morris Sutphen. The hostess furnished the material and the members of the circle sewed in the interests of the visiting committee of the North Plainfield Parent-Tteacher Association.

Blouses and other articles were made and at some future time the society will hold a sale of these articles, the prices being placed at the cost of making. Refreshments were served during the afternoon.

RECREATION NOTES

The Dramatic Club will meet tonight at the Washington School. There will be a rehearsal of the "Mishaps of Minerva."

The colored people will enjoy their usual social evening tonight at the Washington School.

The Italian Athletic and Dramatic Clubs will meet tonight at the Lincoln School.

The weekly Municipal Dance will be held tomorrow night at the Washington School.

BUYING MORE HORSES.

The men, believed to be agents for the French army, are again buying horses in the borough this afternoon. Nags of very description have been brought to Stonewall Jackson's sale stables on upper Somerset street, some of them coming from as far as Morristown, and the French agents have been busy since noon picking out the animals suiting their purpose. At a similar sale held two weeks ago at Jackson's place, twenty-one horses were purchased. These were shipped to the other side from Jersey City.

GIVEN A SURPRISE PARTY.

Mrs. Benjamin Kline, of West Front street, was given a surprise party at her home last night. The affair was arranged by Mrs. Kline's sisters, the Misses Beatrice and Estelle Friedman, of Brooklyn, who have been visiting here. The evening was spent in dancing and a feature was an informal program of vocal and instrumental music. Refreshments were served.

HELEN M. SHEEHAN.

Helen M. Sheehan, aged nearly three years, only child of Mr. and Mrs. Owen Sheehan, of 270 Jackson avenue, this city, died this morning. The funeral will be held at 11 o'clock tomorrow morning and will be private. The burial will be in St. Mary's cemetery.

MARIE HARDING.

Marie Harding, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Harding, Jr., of Laramie road, died this morning. The funeral will be held this afternoon and the interment will be in St. Mary's cemetery.

REV. ALLEN W. M'CURDY ADDRESSES MCALL AUXILIARY

One of the most interesting meetings ever held by the Plainfield Auxiliary working for the McAll Mission in France, took the form of a tea at the home of Mrs. Isaac L. Miller on Watchung avenue, yesterday afternoon. Mrs. Samuel T. Carter, the president, welcomed back Mrs. Frederick G. Mead, the former president, after a long absence. Rev. Allen W. McCurdy, of the Morningside Presbyterian church, New York, gave the address of the afternoon, emphasizing the need for vigorous Christian work in every country as well as France.

Mrs. F. O. Herring, Mrs. A. V. D. Honeyman and Mrs. Frederick Conlin assisted in the dining-room, where Mrs. Frederick G. Mead and Mrs. John Gray Foster poured. Miss Barbara Fleming, Miss Katharine Brown, Miss Hope Ivins and Miss Katharine Titus assisted them in serving. The meeting was largely attended by members of the auxiliary and friends.

MR. VAN CLEEF'S FUNERAL.

The funeral service of Abraham VanCleef, who died suddenly at his home on Elm place, Tuesday night, was held this morning at the late residence and was largely attended by relatives and friends. Rev. J. Y. Broek, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, of which Mr. VanCleef was a member, officiated. The burial was in Somerville.

UNIQUE CORSET DISPLAY.

The Warner Brothers' Company, of New York, has an elaborate display of the newest Redfern corsets in the large show window at A. E. Force & Co.'s store, on West Front street, and the women of Plainfield and vicinity are invited to call and see the new models during the week. The color scheme is olue and gold and is very attractive.

SUSPENDED SENTENCE.

Recorder F. W. Hand, of the borough court, gave William Sewell, colored, of Plainfield, avenue, a suspended sentence this morning on the charge of stealing a carting license from John T. Smith, a colored cartman, who was formerly in partnership with Sewell. Both men appeared in court this morning.

DEMOCRATS PLAN FOR AN AGGRESSIVE CAMPAIGN

Congressman William E. Tuttle, Jr., of Westfield; Congressman Eugene Kinkead, of Jersey City; Thomas F. Martin, minority leader in the Assembly, and George M. LaMonte, State Banking and Insurance Commissioner, will attend the meeting of the Union County Democratic Committee, at Elizabeth tonight, when plans will be discussed for carrying on an aggressive campaign throughout the county in the interest of Democracy.

It is proposed to hold a meeting once a month in Elizabeth, as usual, and in addition to hold a meeting at some other point in the county. The members of Democratic clubs as well as district election officers will be invited to these meetings and other ways and means of increasing the interest in the party will be adopted from time to time.

A NOVELTY AT THE RITZ.

The management of The Ritz has arranged to have cabaret dancing on Saturday nights. This proved a very popular attraction in the summer and early fall, and a great many have requested its resumption. The privilege of the floor is extended to patrons of The Ritz and excellent music will be furnished. Dancing will be under the direction of Daniel M. McCormack and John Doyle, and they will demonstrate the latest steps in the One-Step, Hesitation, Lame Duck Walk, Canter Walk and Fox Trot, and will also give a descriptive demonstration of the Polka Brazilienne.

The latter selection is an especially interesting one, the poem being one of the greatest examples of emotional feeling ever written.

BATTLESHIP EXPLOSION KILLS FOUR U. S. SAILORS

Washington, Jan. 22.—As a result of a boiler explosion on the United States ship San Diego early today, four are dead and nine injured. The information was received at the Navy Department forwarded from Rear Admiral Howard. He reports that the San Diego was proceeding towards Guaymas, on the west coast of Mexico, in the Gulf of Mexico, when the explosion occurred.

The message from Admiral Howard reads: "The San Diego completed full power trial and made 21.45 knots. Just at completion tube in forward boiler ruptured on account of low water. Four seamen dead, four seriously and five slightly wounded.

TWO HAVE NARROW ESCAPE WHEN TRAIN HITS TRUCK

Somerville, Jan. 22.—Two men narrowly escaped death and a team of horses was killed at the South Somerville crossing of the Lehigh Valley Railroad, Wednesday night, when a freight train struck the team, after the horses had become frightened by the lights on the crossing gates and started to run away down the tracks.

The horses were drawing a truck filled with household furniture. The truck was wrecked and the furniture was strewn along the tracks. One of the men was hurled twenty feet and escaped uninjured. He was so badly frightened that he ran away from the scene as soon as he regained his feet and has not since been located. The second man also disappeared and the railroad officials have been unable to ascertain his name.

The team was owned by F. J. Hahr, a real estate promoter, of New York city.

HEARING ON LITERACY TEST.

Washington, Jan. 22.—More than 400 representatives of foreign organizations in this country and delegates from labor organizations gathered today to air their views on the immigration bill, in a public hearing before President Wilson in the east room of the White House. Representative Gallivan, of Massachusetts, led the forces opposed to the literacy test. Secretary Morrission of the Aemrican Federation of Labor, opposed the veto.

MEMORIAL TABLET TO BE PLACED IN ELKS' HOME

Mrs. Frederick Sandford, of Sycamore avenue, has placed an order with a large New York concern for a bronze memorial tablet to be placed in the local Elks' club house in memory of her late husband. It will bear a suitable inscription and will occupy a position in the wall of the lodge room. The tablet will cost about $600.

Mr. Sandford was one of the original members of Plainfield lodge and maintained an active interest in its affairs until the time of his death on May 11, 1914. The new club house has been so constructed as to permit the erection of memorial tablets of any size, and Mr. Sandford's will be the first. A special lodge of sorrow will be conducted when the presentation is made.

ENGLAND TRAINS HER WOMEN NOW

Volunteers Assume Duties of Men at Front.

CONDITIONS incidental to the war have resulted in the formation in London of a new police auxiliary force of women, known as the women's police volunteers, who will soon become familiar sights in the streets there. Dressed in neat blue uniforms, they have already begun their duties, which are at present concerned mostly with the welfare of women and children. The headquarters of the force is in Cannon Row, near Scotland Yard.

The formation of a woman's squad in the London police force is being followed by the organization in England of a women's volunteer reserve for such military duties as signaling, dispatch riding, telegraphing, motoring and camp cooking, thus replacing men who could be more usefully employed on the firing line. It is proposed to arm these women "for their own defense in the last extremity."

Not only have officers of the regular army volunteered their services to teach the new members, but several drill halls have been turned over to the volunteer reserve on special nights of the week.

It is expected that the women's volunteer reserve will in time be an organization fully as important and as popular as that of the boy scouts. That corps, too, started in a small way, but has now become a national need, and it is believed that this will soon rival that in importance and in the history of good deeds accomplished.

The primary object of the women's volunteer reserve is not to fight, but to organize a disciplined body of women, skilled in first aid, cooking, signaling, motorcycling, for the carrying of dispatches, care of horses and expert in marksmanship—in a word, a body that would be ready and willing to act in any emergency.

In the signaling classes, in which are enrolled professional telegraphists, the instruction includes that which is given in Morse and semaphore signaling by flags and, when possible, by sound. Camp cooking is another branch in which certificates are given for proficiency in open air cooking, surmounting its manifest difficulties. Cyclists must be able to carry their dispatches over rough roads; riders must be able to take care of their horses. Carpentering and kindred craft work are also included.

The new movement, which already includes hundreds of busy London women, and all London women seem to have every moment occupied in some form of war work, does not stop at the boundaries of the capital. An equal amount of enthusiasm is displayed in the country.

Branches have been opened in several centers where there is a large population of working girls.

So in case of the invasion of the country or in any other individual crisis it is believed that there will be ready at hand an organization of women who will not lose their heads in a panic; who will have good health, clear heads and calm nerves; women who will have learned the value of self dependence, comradeship and self control; women who can co-operate with the military and civil authorities, and in event of a coast alarm or raid the unprotected women and little children may have their courage upheld by the presence of experienced members of their own sex.

When the world war has become a matter of history it is believed that from the women's volunteer reserve will be formed a great social body, which will not cease its efforts toward the sane life, but will become, in lieu of a better term, a vast recreation club, and that British foresight is in this instance, as in many others, a quality to be counted on is proved by the fact that already a philanthropic woman has offered a large tract of land for a permanent camp, a gift which, it is believed, will inspire several similar ones.

IN THE SPORTING SPOTLIGHT

FEAR SAENGERBUND HALL WILL NOT HOLD THE MOB EXPECTED AT NORTH PLAINFIELD - PLAINFIELD HIGH SCHOOL STRUGGLE

All roads lead to Saengerbund Hall tomorrow afternoon, where the initial Interscholastic League game between the teams of Plainfield and North Plainfield High Schools, is due to be decided. Cohorts of the respective institutions will flock to the Somerset street rendezvous in round numbers and those who expect to view the struggle from an advantageous point of view will have to "shop early" in their quest for seating accommodations. This year's series between the two greatest rivals in the county has awakened more than usual interest and the battle will no doubt be bitterly contested. Each school has organized a cheering squad that is due to keep things humming from 2 o'clock until 5 o'clock. This afternoon the combatants put on the finishing touches in their home quarters and both captains claim that their teams have polished off the rough edges and are ready for the fray.

Captain Abrams, of North Plainfield, is relying largely on the shooting ability of Townley and Conroy and the boroughites' familiarity with the home court. Captain McNamee, of Plainfield, has a squad of passers that would be hard to duplicate in schoolboy circles and expects his guards to play a prominent part. As far as the forwards are concerned, North Plainfield seems to have a slight advantage; Plainfield probably has a shade in the guarding, and the center position advantage, of course, sways in VanMater's direction, because of his experience in former league contests.

Both teams well know the big advantage a first game decision brings and each contender is out to annex the jump-off verdict. Every one of the regulars on both sides are in fine fettle for the engagements and the defeated team will have no excuse to offer at the culmination of the fight. When interviewed this morning, supporters of the rival teams admitted that the outcome was a toss-up at the present time and if both teams are in their best of form the issue will be waged in a nip and tuck style.

The following lineups were announced today:

P. H. S.	N. P. H. S.
McNamee (Capt.)	Townley

Rosenson	Conroy

Chamberlain	VanMater

Peacock	Abrams (Capt.)

Considerable apprehension has been felt concerning the possibility of all the rooters not being able to get into Saengerbund Hall. Last year the Somerset street hall was packed to its capacity and the results excited some criticism from the public safety constituents. This year the attendance figures will be even larger.

The officials named by the managers, coaches and captains at a recent meeting are James J. McNamee, of this city, to referee, and Ralph Buckley, of Rahway, to umpire. Timers and scorers will be made known shortly before game time.

As far as the records are concerned the boroughites appear to have an edge on their rivals, having won eleven out of fourteen starts, while the Plainfielders were copping seven out of eleven. Two of the three North Plainfield reverses were administered by Woodbridge, a team that was beaten by a score of 69 to 15 by P. H. S. On the other hand, the boroughites smothered Somerville High School, the latter squad having trimmed Plainfield in the opening game of the season. The other three Plainfield defeats, however, were administered by Dickinson High School, of Jersey City; Passaic High School and Rahway High School, on foreign courts, and if North Plainfield had met these quintets under similar conditions the result would probably have been defeat. The third N. P. H. S. defeat was administered by the Alumni.

Swimming News and Notes

Written for the Daily Press by

LOUIS P. HANSEN.

The watermen of the Pennsylvania University administered an overwhelming defeat to City College, of New York, Friday night, winning every event on the dual meet program, and running up scores of 46 to 7 in swimming and 25 to 0 in water polo.

The meet brought to light some new swimming stars, and Pennsylvania begins to loom up far stronger than was first anticipated at the beginning of the intercollegiate swimming season, and should bear watching during the rest of the season.

Hughes, Masten and Shryock were the particular stars on this occasion. Masten won the 50-yard swim in the fast time of 2:44, while Shryock won the century in 60 3-5 seconds.

Shriber won the plunge for distance, with 71 feet 6 inches to his credit.

The recently formed association of Pittsburg swimming instructors is considering the adoption of new methods to improve conditions in the district and bring about more rapid progress among the racing men. Although Pittsburgh probably has turned out more swimmers than any city in the Union during the last three years, none has so far attained championship calibre, and the instructors feel the need of some change.

Frank Sullivan, the Princeton coach of swimming, states confidently that the Tiger water polo team will this year be 50 per cent. stronger than the champion sextet of 1914, and that Bob Nourse, the new centre forward, is as good, if not a better, all-around player than Hessenbruck and Battles, the most prolific scorers of the last two years. The statement comes as a surprisee, for early reports indicated that Princeton was hopelessly crippled both in swimming and in water polo.

Clement Brown, of the Hamilton Club, of Chicago, is the first find of 1915 in the swimming line. His performance in the one-mile championship of the Central District stamps him as the most promising candidate for the classic distance ever developed in this country.

An inexperienced lad of eighteen, he was engaging in his first important contest when he faced Perry McGillivray in the title race, yet he fought the latter stubbornly from start to finish and was at his shoulder at the line. McGillivray's time was 24 minutes 9 4-5 seconds, 23 seconds faster than the former district record: Brown's, 24 minutes 10 3-5 seconds.

To appreciate fully the calibre of the newcomer it is only necessary to compare his recently established mark with Bud Goodwin's American standard of 25 minutes 18 2-5 seconds for an eighty-yard pool. Even considering the respective length of baths used—the race was held in a 60-foot one—one finds Brown's figures the better by nearly two seconds.

At the rate he has been improving the Chicagoan should very soon be able to attack with chances of success C. M. Daniels' national record of 23 minutes 40 2-5 seconds for a 20-yard pool.

The swimming team of the Montreal A. A. A., headed by George Hodgson and Frank McGill, the Canadian champions, will meet Yale on Saturday at New Haven. The regulation collegiate program, even to water polo, will obtain, and although the visitors are likely to score heavily in the individual swims, their weakness in diving and plunging, as well as Yale's unusual strength in the relay race, should throw victory to the Blue.

One of the best rules yet evolved for the game of collegiate water polo has been suggested by Frank Sullivan, swimming coach at Princton. Sullivan believes that by ordering the suspension, without substitution, of any players guilty of three "roughwork" fouls, objectionable tactics can be eliminated altogether. He points out that referees are always averse to expelling players, even for flagrant offences, because it cripples a team hopelessly, and those violently inclined, knowing this, take advantage. On the other hand, he says, if the chief official is compelled by rule to put ou the three-time offender, he will have no alternative, and the men will soon learn to check their aggressiveness rather than submit their teams to a penalty that practically means defeat.

The meet between Townsend Harris Hall and Lawrenceville, at Lawrenceville, on January 23, will have especial interest owing to the approach of the interscholastic championships, which are to be held next month at Princeton. Several of the New Jersey boys are entered for the title events. Among the most promising candidates are the sprinter, H. C. Franzheim, Jr.; the 220 yards, L. S. Luke, and the fancy diver, J. N. Bucler.

One of the most noticeable features of the New York A. C. water carnival last Wednesday was the number of lads ranging in age between eleven and sixteen competing in the handicap events. Among the contestants in fancy diving, for instance, there were at least three schoolboys—Robert Galbraith, of Commerce; Clayton Parker, of De Witt Clinton, and J. N. Bueler, of Lawrenceville—whose skill, form and versatility would have earned them prizes in national championships a very few years ago. Such exhibitions as were witnessed in the Mercury Foot natatorium speak loudly of the sensational progress being made in aquatics.

Negotiations between Harvard and the local colleges have come to maturity, and the Crimson swimmers will pay a visit next month, meeting Columbia on February 20 and City College on Washington's Birthday.

Henry McAleenan, the eleven-year-old brother of the intercollegiate diving champion, promises to follow closely in the footsteps of his brother. He has the same supple, free action of the Mercury Foot star, and is far more finished in form than was the latter at the same age. Great things are predicted for him.

At a meeting of the New York A. C. board of governors, held Sunday, it was decided to accept the challenge of the Montreal A. A. swimming team for a dual clash, and the Canadian watermen are now booked to face the local stars in the Mercury Foot pool on Friday next.

The meet promises to be one of the most interesting of the indoor season because of the presence of the Canadian squad of two sterling swimmers—George Hodgson and Frank McGill.

Hodgson has not been defeated at distances above 100 yards since he scored such a brilliant double victory at the Olympic games of 1912 in Stockholm, winning both the 400 and 1,500-meter swimming races in world's record time. McGill is the present 50 and 100-yard champion of the Dominion, and report has it that he is sprinting in great form.

Against this sterling pair the New York A. C. will probably start Walter Ramme and Herbert Vollmer for the century swim, and Joe Wheatley and Jim Reilly or Nick Nerich for the furlong contest. On past performances a slight advantage might be conceded to the local boys, but neither Hodgson nor McGill has competed in this country since early in 1913, so there is no telling how much they have improved.

The list of events tentatively adopted includes 50, 100 and 220-yard swims, 200-yard relay race for teams of four men each to cover fifty yards; fancy diving and a game of water polo, under the rules of the Amateur Athletic Union.

It is not likely that the visitors will have candidates good enough to win the relay and diving events from the Mercury Foot stars, but speculation is rife as to the outcome of the water polo match, as the Canadians have never played an American team, at least not since the obtaining style of game was introduced here. Nothing is thus known of their ability.

Owing to the great interest shown by the fair sex in the New York Athletic Club water carnival of last week, the house committee has announced that ladies accompanied by club members will again be admitted to the natatorium on Friday night for the Montreal-New York meet.

Rahway	11	25	981

Plainfield Senior Elk pinners lost a fine chance of gaining ground in the Elks' League last night, when they dropped three games to the Elizabeth team on the Watchung avenue drives. All of the local team rolled below regular form and were not dangerous in any of the games, the smallest margin between any two scores being thirty points. Because of this triple defeat the local quintet comes very near tying Rahway for last place, being only two games ahead of that crew.

Both teams started the match with poor scores, Maloney, of the visitors, scoring a 182, while Chief Kiely could register only 149. Blatz rolled at his worst and made the lowest count of the match, when he hit for 129. Vail fell one point below the score made by Kiely, which was followed by a 178 made by Captain Nash. Campbell totalled the best mark for Plainfield in this game, getting a 197. Clauss' 201 helped to increase the visitors' team score, while the other individual marks made in this game were 171, 133 and 163. The scores of this game were 850 to 801.

Vail's 202, Campbell's 198 and Kiely's 194 were the best made in the second game by the local pinners, but Elizabeth won by 30 pins when Maloney started off with 214, high score for the match, and Clauss chalked up a 208. Bock finished the game with a 190. The last game was won by the largest margin of the match, the scores being 953 to 892. Blatz scored a 191 for the locals, while Kiely and Nash made 187. Clauss rolled scores of 201, 208 and 192.

PATERSON TAKES TWO; TIES NEW BRUNSWICK

Two Elks' League matches were bowled last night and a tie has again been established for first place between the New Brunswick and Paterson teams. This was accomplished when the Paterson five, on its own alleys, got two games out of three from the Hoboken team. The Silk City pin-knights dropped the first game of this match by one pin. A victory in this contest would have enabled them to occupy first place alone.

The scores:

Y. M. C. A. GAME.

The St. John's five, of New Brunswick, will be the attraction at the Y. M. C. A. tomorrow night and a good game is looked for as the visitors have one game over the association players this season, having won a 32 to 21 game at New Brunswick last week.

HOPE VS. ELIZABETH.

The Progressive Five, of Elizabeth, will be the opponent of Hope Chapel on the Fourth street court tomorrow night.

Progress, Newark	4	17	.191	906

Close competition was had last night in an Eagles' League bowling match on the White Palace alleys, Newark, the Plainfield quintet capturing two games out of three from the Progress pin nights, of Newark. In the first game the visitors had a rather easy victory, winning by a margin of ninety-one pins with 846, but the second game was won by only sixteen pins with a score of 792. The Newarkers came through with 906 in the final game and had a lead of thirty-one pins. Musetta was high for the Progress team with 205. Miller led the visitors with 208. The Somerville team was to have rolled last night in an Eagles' League match at Rahway, but the affair was postponed. The scores in the match on the White Palace alleys follows:

N. P. H. S. 1914 PLAYERS AT LAST GET INSIGNIAS

Although they are almost a year behind time, the monograms won by the North Plainfield High School championship basketball team for the season of 1913-14, were awarded by Manager Duclos VanMater, yesterday. There was much trouble in securing the letters, but Van Mater kept after the matter and has at last landed them. They are small but are of an entirely different design from any that have ever been given before.

Those who received the letters for work last season are Captain Ashley Burner, Duclos VanMater, Roy Love, Hyman Abrams, Frank Dunning, Addison Newkirk, Ronald Conroy and Warren Townley.

NO GAME TONIGHT.

The game between the North Plainfield High School girls' basketball team and the Alumni, which was to be played in Saengerbund Hall tonight, has been postponed.

JUNIOR ELK MATCH.

The New Brunswick and Elizabeth teams, of the Junior Elk Bowling League, will meet tonight on the latter's alleys.

C. D. BOICE WINNER OF TEN PIN GAMES

With His Handicap of 30 per Game, He Scores a Total of 527.

Charles D. Boice took first honors in the weekly competition of the handicap ten-pin tournament at the Park Club, last night. His handicap of 30 pins per game enabled him to score a total of 527 for the three games, which was 11 pins ahead of the score of Dudley Strong, second highest. His score was 516.

Long was again placed 15 pins below scratch and made a score of 490. Baurer pressed Strong hard for honors, falling one pin short of the latter's mark, scoring a total of 515. There were eleven who took part in the competition. The tourney will be held again next Friday night.

HAVE YOU A "SCREEN" FACE?

UNUSUAL HONORS AWAIT THE POSSESSOR OF THESE QUALIFICATIONS

Must be American-born
Must be beautiful
Must be intelligent—naturally bright
Must have had a college or high school education
Must have well-proportioned figure
Must wear clothes well
Must dress stylishly
Must have accomplishments that tend to further social prestige
Must have personality
Must take a lively interest in current topics
Must be endowed with dramatic instinct
Must be ambitious, healthy, nature-loving

AND the first requisite, don't forget:

Must have that "screen" face (i. e., an expressive, mobile countenance, one whose features photograph well, so as to be ideal for photoplay purposes.

Here Are Types of Women Who Have Achieved Fame in Photodrama. They Possess the Ideal "Screen" Face. Have You Similar Features?

Ivy Close, Who Triumphed Over 8,000 Rivals in the London "Mirror's" Beauty Contest and Is Now Exciting the Admiration of Film Spectators.

Below—Mary Ainslee, a Native Californian of French and Irish Extraction, Noted as a "Movie" Actress.

HAVE YOU a "screen" face?

If so, you are eligible to fill the unique position of what in effect amounts to being America's "uncrowned queen."

As Maid of America, which will be your official title, in case of selection for the honor, you will be sent forth in a luxurious Pullman apartment car, surrounded by every comfort that you could possibly enjoy in a faultlessly appointed home, to explore the highways and byways of the wonderful land of your birth, seeing its most interesting sights, meeting its foremost citizens, being made the recipient of receptions by women's clubs and other organizations, figuring in interviews in the great daily newspapers and figuring, also, in a strictly "figurative" sense, in a vast, 5,000,000-foot motion-photo serial, which is to picture all the distinguishing characteristics of the various localities visited.

All this without one kopek of expense to you, mind you!

We rather think that we are justified in believing that you are thoroughly interested by this time.

So we shan't be cruel and keep you on tenterhooks. We'll give you the facts, and when you have absorbed them, you will find that there is absolutely no "catch" in the proposition. You will find that it will revert back to that ancient adage anent a face being ones fortune—providing you have the ideal "screen" face.

Prominent manufacturers, whose business interests represent a combined capitalization of more than $100,000,000, have decided to give practical expression to a sentiment, put forward to date in the fits and starts of merely forensic effort, in favor of trade expansion in the United States by the establishment of annual open-shop gala day to be devoted to business stimulation and to be known as Made-in-the-U. S. A. Day.

To crystalize this sentiment into a mobile, cumulative force that shall automatically bring fruition to their laudable plan, these manufacturers have resolved on a half-million-dollar publicity campaign, which sum they have already subscribed.

This campaign is to be made to utilize every known avenue to arousing public interest, and, aside from providing for the co-operation of the press, already an aggressive factor in the movement, is to take advantage, also, of that new factor in molding thought—the motion picture.

Now, with the subject of all this agitation being of commercial stripe, and consequently prone to fail of the necessary unanimous support of a people immersed in the routine of their various and specialized interests, the committee on general arrangements of the newly-formed Made-in-the-U. S. A. Day Association in New York realized that some method must be evolved, some medium utilized that will cause a general rallying to a standard that, as will be appreciated after deeper cogitation, apotheosizes that which intimately affects all branches of human endeavor, all walks of life—i. e., not commercial supremacy merely in the braggart jingo-patriot's sense, but national commercial self-sustenancy.

We are independent as to monarchial oppression, but are we free commercially?

The war now raging in Europe has supplied the answer—and it is an emphatic negative, as soaring prices and extirpated imports evidence.

Regardless of the lesson that the war is teaching us, does, for instance, the bookworm bother about the butcher's problems, the actor about the agriculturalist's, the painter about the plasterer's, or vice-versa?

Does the mechanic spend sleepless nights worrying about the future of the planter, or the yachtsman about the twine-maker's complaints, even though his sails were so much ballast without the rope?

And there are the mills that make the sails possible, those that make the books possible—also make possible what not outside of the realm of the factories and mines and furrowed fields? And so on can be pursued comparison showing inter-relation—and lack of development in all the divisions of productivity that can be enumerated, with a bare exception or two.

As opaque walls separating these various divisions of mankind's work is the comprehension of this interrelation of interests in the majority of cases, and to batter down these walls and flood all departments of labor and all fields of industry with the light of understanding that spells commercial—and, incidentally, social—liberation from the thrall of conditions such as the war has brought about—that, in its broader definition, is what is known as the Made-in-the-U. S. A. spirit. And to bring about the general understanding just outlined is the first mission (and a crystalization of the long regnant Made-in-America spirit) of the pioneers of the Made-in-the-U, S. A. Day movement.

So, to attract universal interest, it was apparent from the first to these men that there must be a "ballyho"—that is, a magnet that has drawing power beyond the concentration of knit brows, of intellects whose vision is blind to all save individual purpose—drawing power that impels attention by dint of elemental force.

In other words, the sort of magnet required would have to be one that would be an ideal antidote to the "tiredness" of "tired" business men.

And like an inspiration came the thought—Woman!

Instant as was this thought, so was the action taken to select the woman. In truth, the brief period intervening between the decision to send forth a typical American girl to expound, as Maid of America, the principles of a Made-in-the-U. S. A. Day and the date set for the beginning of her triumphant tournee—early in the new year—is so short that nothing but instant action would suffice.

And therefore it behooves you, Miss Young America, who reads this, to take instant action, too—that is, to send in your photo, accompanied with a statement of qualifications, as per instructions hereinafter given—inasmuch as the general committee of the Made-in-the-U. S. A. Day association have decided that the method of selection by photo is the best where so little time and so extensive a task are involved.

Before proceeding, let us enlighten you as to what constitutes a "screen" face. A "screen" face is one that is adaptable to the requirements of photo-drama—that is, one which has features that are mobile and can express emotion. It is a face that will photograph well.

A so-called neutral, or reposeful, phlegmatic face, without contrasts, without accentuated coloring, however cultivated the intellect back of it, is impossible from the photo-drama producer's viewpoint. Your eyes must "talk," your general expression mirror any great inward emotion that the situation in a play you were acting in, or a crisis in real life, would call forth.

You must have luster in your hair as well as in your eyes, and the appeal of that indefinable force, personality, must hover about you like an aura.

The reproductions on this page are those of women who possess the ideal "screen" face, and truly their faces have proven their fortunes. They are among the foremost "movie" actresses of the day. And, because of the very nature of your duties—and pleasures—in connection with the tour of America as the evangel of the Made-in-the-U. S. A. Day gospel, you will achieve a renown as great as theirs in filmdom—and greater, even, in the flesh, i. e., as a personal and leading actor in a great historic drama that is to be played throughout the country with the object of adding to our calendar a great new national day, "different" and more important than all our holidays.

Of course, there are naturally other requirements you must measure up to. Here, in toto, are the magical "musts" that will win you the title of Maid of America, and all the unusual honors that go with that title:

Must be American-born.
Must be beautiful.
Must have had college or high school education.
Must have perfect figure.
Must dress stylishly, must wear clothes well.
Must have accomplishments that tend to further social prestige.
Must take interest in current topics.
Must have personality.
Must be endowed with a dramatic instinct.
Must be intelligent—naturally bright.
Must be healthy, active, nature-loving.
And—the first requisite (don't forget)—must have that "screen" face.

All the photos, with your name and address on the back, and accompanied with a statement giving your age, height, weight, the color of your hair and eyes and truthful affirmations as to possessing any of the "musts" in the above tabulation, should be sent to "Chairman Maid of America Contest Committee, eighth floor, Leavitt Building, New York City." They will be judged by a committee comprised of artists and Sunday editors, presided over by James Montgomery Flagg, the noted illustrator, whose type of American girl is accepted by thousands as an ideal delineation.

And now a few more words as to the tour and your part in the filming operations:

The tour will embrace forty weeks. The monster film of 5,000,000 feet, above referred to, will be known as "America," and will be shown in weekly installments in the principal cities of the United States. A studio car, now being completed, will accompany the Maid of America on her expedition, and here the developing, printing, assembling and shipping will be undertaken.

It will be seen that much valuable advance publicity will accrue to the campaign headed by the Maid of America through the showing of these films, and because of their serial nature, they will be a potent force in keeping the topic fresh in the public mind long after her departure.

In the meantime, in conformity to the general committee's plan, patriotic citizens everywhere will be constrained on to strike while the iron is hot—to take advantage of the ballots with the wording "Are you in favor of an annual national open-shop gala day to be known as Made-in-the-U. S. A. Day?" by voting "yes." A veritable deluge of these ballots will follow in the wake of the Maid of America's visit, and the press of the cities visited is counted on to give them further vogue by running daily printed forms of ballots, or publishing them at stated intervals, until the local organized commercial interests have arranged with their representative at Washington to act in response to the apparent unanimity of his constituents.

In all sections of the big serial "America" film will appear the Maid of America in the guise of a composite spectator for the great American public, who later will view the wonderful scenes depicted with the same fight of interest in their eyes as will sparkle in those of the beautiful propagandist of the Made-in-the-U. S. A. Day movement.

In conclusion, let us assure the prospective victor in this contest for the greatest honor that could possibly be thrust on a daughter of America that she will find everything arranged for her reception wherever she goes by a committee of "boosters" who will journey ahead and co-operate with the commercial organizations and newspapers of the towns to be visited by her. This party will be in charge of J. Arthur Nelson, a prominent California business man, who conceived the idea of a Made-in-the-U. S. A. Day a year ago and has labored unceasingly to secure its establishment.

Who will be the one to be hailed as the Maid of America, and, as such, be the feted queen of all America—the toast of millionaire captains of industry, the despair of lovelorn youth, the envy of thousands of her sex?

Will it be YOU?

If one could only know beforehand, you sigh—

But this is not the time for dreaming; this is a case where truth is stranger and more wonderful than fiction.

In this case you dream when it's all over—and seems truly like a dream in its wonderous light of retrospect.

Send along your photo, quickly—and be patient. You will know soon.

PLANNING AERIAL DASH TO LONDON

German Zeppelin Works Busy Night and Day.

CARRY POWERFUL BOMBS.

Capacity of Factory Is One Machine For Every Three Weeks—Dreadnoughts of Air Equipped With Rapid Firers and One Big Gun—Thirty-one Built In All.

Germany is slowly but steadily preparing to make her threatened aerial attack on London and on the eastern coast of England, even without the aid of the German navy, in the judgment of observers of the continued activity at the Zeppelin works at Friedrichshafen.

At this factory, on Lake Constance, more than 1,000 workmen since the beginning of the war have been employed in the construction of dirigible balloons instead of the normal working force of 400 men. In place of the usual working period of eight hours a day the men, who are all experts, have been divided into day and night shifts of twelve hours each, so that more than 500 are always engaged. All the finished materials and fittings, as well as sections of the airship envelopes, arrive from other parts of Germany ready made, and the workmen at Friedrichshafen have only to put them together. This makes it possible to build a Zeppelin in three weeks.

Carry Destructive Bombs.

The latest and strongest Zeppelin ever built sailed to the north direct from the Friedrichshafen works, without any previous trial trips. It is considerably longer than its predecessors, and its motive power consisted of three motors of 800 horsepower. It carried a crew of thirty officers and men. In a special basket this Zeppelin carried fifty torpedo bombs, each said to be capable of as much damage as the shells of the famous sixteen inch guns. One of these bombs during a trial near Friedrichshafen penetrated the earth five yards. Zeppelins built since the beginning of the war have been similarly armed. Dreadnought Zeppelins were launched Aug. 15, Sept. 3 and 24, Oct. 15 and Nov. 5, and two others of the same type at the beginning of August, making a total of seven.

These formidable aerial vessels are said to be able to resist successfully any aeroplane attack. They can "sail" with a weight of two or three tons. They have seventeen to eighteen independent gas compartments and water planes that will allow them to land on water, if necessary, and continue their flight later. At Friedrichshafen they are called "marine airships," and in small letters on their hulls are printed the significant words, "Meant for London."

Thirty-one Built, All Told.

Officially in Germany there have been built up to the present time thirty-one Zeppelins, but only the most recent dozen count with the military authorities. The older ships are employed in dropping casual bombs on towns, but otherwise doing the work of captive balloons, their places as scouts having been taken by aeroplanes. The new airships are being kept in reserve, it is asserted, for the raid on England, and especially London.

The German staff and Count Zeppelin are understood to hold the opinion that eighteen to twenty Zeppelins of the latest type are necessary for a successful attack on London, and this number is expected to be ready early next year.

All the latest airships carry several machine guns and special platforms and one large gun each.

Aged Man's Estate Put In Trust Because He Fears Relatives.

Martin Green, a retired civil engineer, eighty-four years old, in a declaration of trust has turned over to Frank H. Hamblin of Worcester, Mass., his entire estate, valued at $1,942,763, of which $1,234,000 is in stocks and securities of national banks and corporations. Mr. Hamblin receives absolute power over the estate, is not held responsible for any losses and need give no accounting of his trust.

The instrument declares that the trustee is to decide how much money Mr. Green is to have for the support of himself and his wife. Mr. Green says he created the trust as a protective measure and to avoid a recurrence of alleged ill treatment from members of his family.

New Betrothal Plan.

The suggestion that engaged persons live under the same roof for two months before marriage, made by Mrs. Havelock Ellis, English lecturer, aroused considerable interest among students of marriage problems. "There is more of the atmosphere of the comic opera than of sanctity about marriage of the present day," Mrs. Ellis told an audience in Chicago.

Gets First Victoria Cross.

The first Victoria cross awarded in this war went to Sergeant Major White of the army service corps for carrying away his wounded captain in a hot rifle fire. He also got a medal in the Boer war.

The Submarine

Hid in a deep sea cave I lie
Mid the drift of the silent years,
And I laugh at the pride of human power
And the sorrow of human tears—

For I know I hold in my heart of fire
A strength so cruel and vast
I can blight the earth and air and sky
Like flame from the furnace blast.

When I slip along through peaceful seas
And peer with my Cyclops eye,
No stately ship that ever was built,
Though never so fast she fly

Can race with me; I strike in the dark
Below her water line;
I am ruthless, cold as the sword fin shark,
Like my brother, the floating mine.

Drenched with the salt sea brine I bide
The menace of the sea;
A grim, gray wolf, my fangs I hide,
And man is afraid of me!

FARM PRODUCTS OF 1914 ARE WORTH TEN BILLIONS

Astounding Figures Reported by Secretary of Agriculture.

American farms during the year 1914 eclipsed all records for combined value of their products, with a total of almost $10,000,000,000. Secretary Houston of the department of agriculture announced that the value of all farm crops, farm animal products and farm animals, sold and slaughtered, aggregated $9,872,936,000. That was $83,000,000 more than the grand total for 1913, the previous record year, and more than double the value of all farm products in 1899.

Crops in 1914 were valued at $6,044,480,000, and the estimated total value of the animal products and of the farm animals sold and slaughtered was $3,828,456,000. The value of crop production last year was slightly less than in 1913 on account of the reduced value of the cotton crop brought about principally by the European war. The corn and wheat crops, however, were the most valuable ever produced in the United States, bringing the year's crop value total to only $88,279,000 less than the total for last year, despite the loss of more than $300,000,000 in the value of the cotton crop.

"The estimated value of the animal products of the farm in 1914," said the Agricultural Outlook, "is distinctly higher than in 1913, which was itself a record year in the value of this class of products. This is due to general but slight increases in production, except for sheep and swine, and in prices more especially to a small increase in the average price of eggs, and to a more considerable increase in the farm price of cattle and calves sold and slaughtered."

The values of the principal farm crops last year was: Corn, $1,702,599,000; wheat, $878,680,000; hay, $779,068,000; cotton, $519,616,000; oats, $499,431,000; potatoes, $198,609,000; barley, $105,903,000; tobacco, $101,411,000; sweet potatoes, $41,294,000; rye, $37,018,000; sugar beets, $27,950,000; rice, $21,849,000 flaxseed, $19,540,000, and buckwheat, $12,892,000.

PLAN A LAWYERLESS COURT.

Chicago Has Scheme to Reduce the Cost of Suing.

A court of convenience, where the people may plead their own cases, has been established in Chicago as a branch of the municipal court, Chief Justice Harry Olson announced. Its aim will be to simplify justice and reduce the cost of "going to law."

"No lawyers will be needed to obtain justice," Judge Olson said. "The complainant will present his own case, and the defendant will voice his own defense.

"Technicalities will be eliminated from decisions, and much injustice may be averted."

The court will at first consider cases in which amounts less than $50 are involved. Later its scope will be broadened.

STYLES MAKE FOR IDLENESS.

Capricious Women Blamed In Part For Unemployment Problem.

Speakers at the sessions of the national conference on the unemployed in Philadelphia made these among other suggestions as to ways by which workers could have steady employment:

American women should help to provide steady employment for thousands of workers by being less insistent in demanding ever changing styles. Miss Juliet Stuart Poynset of Boston, the speaker, said that caprice on the part of women who refused to wear last year's dresses and hats made it impossible for manufacturers to provide steady employment for their workers because they never know what to make until the last minute.

NOW FISHING FOR CATS.

This Is the Latest Municipal Industry In Atlantic City.

There have been so many cat operas and back fence serenades in Atlantic City, N. J., of late that peaceful slumber is next to impossible.

The city fathers have decided in consequence to war on toms and tabbies, and fish peddlers have been ordered to the front. These peddlers will go about the streets wailing, "Fresh feesh, fresh feesh!" and the cats are expected to appear, leap on the peddler carts and have nets thrown over them.

The cat catchers will get 10 cents for every tom and tabby brought to the pound.

EAT LESS MEAT IF BACK HURTS

Take a Glass of Salts to Flush Kidneys if Bladder Bothers You.

Eating meat regularly eventually produces kidney trouble in some form or other, says a well-known authority, because the uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked; get sluggish; clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region; rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity; also to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts cannot injure anyone; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to keep the kidneys and urinary organs clean, thus avoiding serious kidney disease.

DEATH PENALTY BARBAROUS.

Capital punishment is one that every enlightened, thinking person should consider who believes that the Divine law, "Thou shalt not kill," applies to and is equally binding on the State as on the individual, and that the infliction of the death penalty is barbarous, and ineffective in preventing crime, and violates the sacredness of human life.

Realizing that the removal of this blot, "the death penalty," from our twentieth century civilization must come from an enlightened public sentiment, and that in order to create an awakening of the public conscience respecting the unrealized horror of capital punishment, it is necessary that those opposed to this outgrown barbarity should, in every way, register in telling form their earnest protest against this medieval form of punishment. In taking up the subject of capital punishment we are forced to ask why we, members of God's great family with intellects keen enough to discern right and wrong, permit the unfortunate members of society to be executed. On what principles of philosophy or religion can the State justify the policy of depriving a human being of a heaven-given life and his future possibility of reform?

By executing the sentence of capital punishment does not the State commit an act which, committed by an individual, it condemns, which act is irrevocable and in many instances has been inflicted upon persons who have afterwards been found innocent. In which instances the State stands convicted not merely of blunder, but of crime. A recent pardon granted by the Board of Pardons of this State to a man convicted of murder and twice sentenced to death, whose innocence after several years was established, shows the future possibility of the State making similar mistakes. Can the human mind conceive of an act more shocking than the State taking the life of an innocent person?

The argument advanced in favor of capital punishment is, that it purports to protect society by preventing the criminal from repeating his crime, and by acting as a deterrent to other prospective criminals. The fact that the commitments for murder has increased in the States inflicting the death penalty proves that this savage method of punishment is a pronounced failure in these respects. As a deterrent to other murders likewise, captital punishment has proved a single failure, as may be seen by comparing the criminal statistics of the States where the punishment is in force with the following ones, namely: Wisconsin, Michigan, Maine and Rhode Island, where it has been abolished and life imprisonment substituted.

Is it not a fact then, that the reasoning that argues for condemning and executing the murder is false reasoning, spring from a false conception of justice?

If, in the above mentioned States, the more humane form of punishment has effectually satisfied the object of the law, I ask, why cannot New Jersey, in safety to society, eliminate from her statutes this relic of barbarism? As an instance of the horror of capital punishment, we recall the recent execution at Trenton of a sixteen-year-old boy, of questioned mental balance. What a shocking thing! Consider for a moment, you who believe in the death penalty, the thought that a mere child, a weakling of society, a subject of help and sympathy rather then condemnation should be legally put to death. Think of it! That the enlightened people of this State will tolerate a law that will allow such inhuman and brutal work.

In the light of this deplorable incident, and others of similar character, brought about by capital punishment, so incompatible with our present standard of civilization and humanity, I seriously inquire, how can the Christian element of society, professing to revere a God of mercy and justice, and who supplicate and rely on those Divine attributes, remain passive, or withhold compassion from our weaker brother, who, in many cases, is born with pre-natal criminal tendencies, or is often the product of an evil environment.

As nature has not given to everyone the same excellencies of mind and strength, would it not be charitable for those who have been singularly blessed to show mercy to those less fortunate? Having faith in the humanitarianism of the people of New Jersey, and their willingness to abolish an inhuman law when its enormity is once realized, I believe they will demand that the old law, "Life for life," shall be superseded by one more merciful, worthy of the present status of culture.

To bring about this desired reform, I shall urge the enactment of a bill at the present session of the Legislature substituting life imprisonment as the penalty for murder. This, I believe, will do justice to the criminal and justice to society.

"Vanity Fair" Fashions for Young Girls---A GIMBEL Innovation

Sweet, girlish simplicity—the keynote

When a famous Paris dressmaker was asked what his impression was of the young girls of America—he simply shrugged his shoulders and said, "I have not seen any young girls since I have been in New York." That was a little more than a year ago. Since then we have given much thought to this remark and decided that we would turn the tide of Fashions for The Younger Generation. And we are confident that mothers will agree with us and that the young girls themselves will heartily endorse these fashions, for they are in tune with the new models for women and yet they have that simplicity which makes young girls more lovely.

A. C. ESTES Y. M. SECRETARY

best physical director the association has had is now in charge," speaking of Mr. Meermans. He then said in part:

"During the year a petition signed by one hundred colored men asked for the organization of an association for them. The Women's Auxiliary has been very helpful, taking care of the Friday night Bible class supper and making a substantial contribution to the boys' summer camp. The association is grateful to them.

"As in other years, the building has been used by many other organizations, such as the Community Christmas Committee, the Tuberculosis League, Playground Commission, social meetings of church Bible classes. The use of the building has been extended to all men out of work whether members of the association or not and they have been made welcome.

"Our principal work this year as in the past has been along religious lines. Shop meetings at noon have been conducted in five different shops. One hundred and forty-nine men and boys are enrolled in Bible classes. This includes the important group of High School students who take supper at the association building Friday nights and hold their classes following the supper; it also includes a teacher training class of 28 men, all of whom are teachers in Sunday-school classes. We have continued to contribute to the foreign work of the international committee, which is our part in the foreign mission work of the world. We have also contributed to the State executive committee and the international committee.

"The boys' work has continued to occupy a large part of our attention. 38 boys and leaders attended the State camp. On Friday nights a group of 65 street boys have the use of the gymnasium and pool under proper supervision and without any cost to them. These boys numbering 65 were made happy at Christmas time by gifts of books from Alexander Grosset.

"Financially it has been a hard year and we have not been successful in making both ends meet. Our income as shown by our treasurer's report is briefly as follows: Memberships, $3,051.32; subscriptions, $3,515.17; from other sources, $3,489.49, a total of $10,569.98. Our expenses have been $11,044.35, leaving a deficit for the year of $988.37.

"The most serious trouble we have had during the year is the resignations of our general secretary, Mr. Parker, and our boys' work secretary, Mr. Bingeman. Mr. Parker goes from us with our good wishes, after seven years of faithful service, not only for the association but for the community.

"We are glad to be able to announce that both of these positions have been filled. Edwin Glaentzer is now our secretary for borys' work. He comes to us a graduate of Syracuse University, recently living in Ridgewood, thoroughly qualified, we believe, for the work which he has undertaken."

Mr. Murray then announced the selection of Mr. Estes.

Mr. Reeder, when introduced, said that the first work akin to that of the Y. M. C. A. in the army began in the Civil War, when a Christian committee was formed to work among the soldiers. There was nothing more done until the outbreak of the Spanish-American War, when a cry went up from East to West, asking who would guard the troops from the camp temptations,and Y. M. C. A. officials consulted with the President and Secretary of War, after which an army branch was established at the camp at Chickamaugua. He told of some of the experiences of Y. M. C. A. men with the army of occupation both in Cuba and the Philippines. Following the war there was a period of investigation, which brought out the fact that the enlisted man was marked for a prey for every evil influence. After some years the work has been so developed that new buildings are provided for the Y. M. C. A. at every army post, many of them paid for by wealthy Americans interested in the work. The government also helps.

When trouble broke out on the Mexican border every army secretary at once offered his services to go to the front with the regular troops and within forty-eight hours after the first order of the Secretary of War there were secretaries on the way, fully equipped to carry on the work. Since March, 1911, there have been Y. M. C. A.'s established at Texas City, Vera Cruz and Galveston. The secretaries try to be brothers, counselors, advisers, to furnish athletic supplies and conduct religious services for the men in the ranks. They teach them to fight the liquor habit and aid in every other way they can.

The association work is being carried on among the fighting forces abroad. In the great concentration camp in Canada, six buildings are in use, with 72 secretaries. In France, with the Indian troops, the secretaries are writing letters home in Hindu, are teaching the Hindu's a little French and doing everything else they can to make them more comfortable in a strange land. In Germany the city associations have been practically discontinued, as eighty per cent. of the secretaries have been compelled to go to the front, but they are continuing their work in the ranks. With the British army, branches have been established at 500 points, with 3,000 secretaries, most of whom are volunteers.

CHAPTER XV.

The Starving Tribe.

THE way led steeply up through deep, powdery snow that was unmarred by sled track or moccasin impression. Smoke, in the lead, pressed the fragile crystals down under his fat, short snowshoes. The task required lungs and muscle, and he flung himself into it with all his strength.

Behind, on the surface he packed, strained the string of six dogs, the steam jets of their breathing attesting their labor and the lowness of the temperature. Between the wheel dog and the sled toiled Shorty, his weight divided between the guiding gee pole and the haul, for he was pulling with the dogs. Every half hour he and Smoke exchanged places, for the snowshoe work was even more arduous than that of the gee pole.

This was their sixth day out from the lively camp of Mucluc, on the Yukon. And now they were breasting the big divide past the Bald buttes, where the way would lead them down Porcupine creek to the middle reaches of Milk river. Higher up Milk river, it was fairly rumored, were deposits of copper. And this was their goal—a hill of pure copper half a mile to the right and up the first creek after Milk river issued from a deep gorge to flow across a heavily timbered stretch of bottom.

Smoke was in the lead, and the small scattered spruce trees were becoming scarcer and smaller when he saw one, dead and bone dry, that stood in their path. There was no need for speech. His glance to Shorty was acknowledged by a stentorian "Whoa!" The dogs stood in the traces till they saw Shorty begin to undo the sled lashings and Smoke attack the dead spruce with an ax, whereupon the animals dropped in the snow and curled into balls, the bush of each tail curved to cover four padded feet and an ice rimmed muzzle.

In twenty minutes from the time they halted the meal was ready to eat.

"About forty below," Shorty mumbled through a mouthful of beans. "Hope it don't get colder—or warmer neither. It's just right for trail breakin'."

Smoke did not answer. His own mouth full of beans, he had chanced to glance at the lead dog lying half a dozen feet away. That gray, frosty wolf was gazing at him with the infinite wistfulness and yearning that glimmer and haze so often in the eyes of northland dogs. Smoke knew it well, but never got over the unfathomable wonder of it.

As if to shake off the hypnotism he set down his plate and coffee cup, went to the sled and began opening the dried fish sack.

"Hey!" Shorty expostulated. "What 're you doin'?"

"Breaking all law, custom, precedent and trail usage," Smoke replied. "I'm going to feed the dogs in the middle of the day—just this once. Bright there has been talking to me, telling me all untellable things with those eyes of him."

Shorty laughed skeptically. "Oh, if it's a hunch, go to it. A man's always got to follow his hunches."

"It isn't a hunch, Shorty. Bright just sort of got on my imagination for a couple of twists. He told me more in one minute with those eyes of his than I could read in the books in a thousand years. His eyes were a-crawl with the secrets of life. They were just squirming and wriggling there. The trouble is I almost got them, and then I didn't. I'm no wiser than I was before, but I was near them."

"Boiled down into simple American, you got a hunch," Shorty insisted. "Somethin's goin' to happen before the day is out. You'll see. An' them dried fish'll have a bearin'."

"You've got to show me," said Smoke.

"No, I ain't. The day'll take care of itself an' show you. Now, listen to what I'm tellin' you. I got a hunch myself out of your hunch. I'll bet eleven ounces against three ornery toothpicks I'm right."

"You bet the toothpicks, and I'll bet the ounces," Smoke returned.

"Nope. That'd be plain robbery. I win. I know a hunch when it tickles me. Before the day's out somethin' 'll happen, an' them fish'll have a meanin'."

An hour later they cleared the divide, dipped down past the Bald buttes through a sharp elbow canyon and took the steep, open slope that dropped into Porcupine creek. Shorty, in the lead, stopped abruptly, and Smoke whoaed the dogs. Beneath them, coming up, was a procession of humans, scattered and draggled, a quarter of a mile long.

"They move like it was a funeral," Shorty noted.

"They've no dogs," said Smoke.

"Yep; there's a couple of men pullin' on a sled."

"See that fellow fall down? There's something the matter, Shorty, and there must be 200 of them."

"Look at 'em stagger as if they was soused. There goes another."

"It's a whole tribe. There are children there."

"Smoke, I win," Shorty proclaimed. "A hunch is a hunch, an' you can't beat it. There she comes. Look at her—surgin' up like a lot of corpses."

The mass of Indians at sight of the two men had raised a weird cry of joy and accelerated its pace.

"They're sure tolerable woozy," commented Shorty. "See 'em fallin' down in lumps an' bunches."

"Look at the face of that first one," Smoke said. "It's starvation—that's what's the matter with them. They've eaten their dogs."

"What'll we do? Run for it?"

"And leave the sled and dogs?" Smoke demanded reproachfully.

"They'll sure eat us if we don't. They look hungry enough for it. Hello, old skeeziks! What's wrong with you? Don't look at that dog that way. No cookin' pot for him—savvy?"

The forerunners were arriving and crowding about them, moaning and plainting in an unfamiliar jargon. To Smoke the picture was grotesque and horrible. It was famine unmistakable. Their faces, hollow cheeked and skin stretched, were so many death's heads. More and more arrived and crowded about until Smoke and Shorty were hemmed in by the wild crew. Their ragged garments of skin and fur were cut and slashed away, and Smoke knew the reason for it when he saw a wizened child on a squaw's back that sucked and chewed a strip of filthy fur.

"Keep off there—keep back!" Shorty yelled, falling back on English after futile attempts with the little Indian he did know.

Bucks and squaws and children tottered and swayed on shaking legs and continued to urge in, their mad eyes swimming with weakness and burning with ravenous desire. A woman, moaning, staggered past Shorty and fell with spread and grasping arms on the sled. An old man followed her, panting and gasping, with trembling hands striving to cast off the sled lashings and get at the grub sacks beneath. A young man with a naked knife tried to rush in, but was flung back by Smoke. The whole mass pressed in upon them, and the fight was on.

At first Smoke and Shorty shoved and thrust and threw back. Then they used the butt of the dog whip and their fists on the food mad crowd. And all this against a background of moaning and wailing women and children. Here and there in a dozen places the sled lashings were cut. Men crawled in on their bellies, regardless of a rain of kicks and blows, and tried to drag out the grub. These had to be picked up bodily and flung back. And such was their weakness that they fell continually under the slightest pressures or shoves. Yet they made no attempt to injure the two men who defended the sled.

It was the utter weakness of the Indians that saved Smoke and Shorty from being overborne. In five minutes the wall of upstanding, on-struggling Indians had been changed to heaps of fallen ones, that moaned and gibbered in the snow and cried and sniveled as their staring, swimming eyes focused on the grub that meant life to them and that brought the slaver to their lips. And behind it all arose the wailing of the women and children.

"Me Carluk. Me good Siwash."

"This is terrible," Smoke muttered.

"I'm all het up," Shorty replied. "I'm real sweaty. An' now what 're we goin' to do with this ambulance outfit?"

Smoke shook his head, and then the problem was solved for him. An Indian crawled forward, his one eye fixed on Smoke instead of on the sled, and in it Smoke could see the struggle of sanity to assert itself. Shorty remembered having punched the other eye, which was already swollen shut. The Indian raised himself on his elbow and spoke:

"Me Carluk. Me good Siwash. Me savvy Boston man plenty. Me plenty hungry. All people plenty hungry. All people no savvy Boston man. Me savvy. Me eat grub now. All people eat grub now. We buy 'm grub. Got 'm plenty gold. No got 'm grub. Summer salmon no come Milk river. Winter caribou no come. No grub. Me make 'm talk all people. Me tell 'm plenty Boston man come Yukon. Boston man have plenty grub. Boston man like 'm gold. We take 'm gold, go Yukon, Boston man give 'm grub. Plenty gold. Me savvy Boston man like 'm gold."

He began fumbling with wasted fingers at the drawstring of a pouch he took from his belt.

"Too much make 'm noise," Shorty broke in distractedly. "You tell 'm squaw, you tell 'm papoose, shut 'm up mouth."

Carluk turned and addressed the wailing women. Other bucks, listening, raised their voices authoritatively, and slowly the squaws stilled and stilled the children near to them. Carluk paused from fumbling the drawstrings and held up his fingers many times.

"Him people make 'm die," he said.

And Smoke, following the count, knew that seventy-five of the tribe had starved to death.

"Me buy 'm grub," Carluk said as he got the pouch open and drew out a large chunk of heavy metal. Others were following his example, and on every side appeared similar chunks. Shorty stared.

"Great jiminy!" he cried. "Copper! Raw, red copper! An' they think it's gold!"

"And the poor devils banked everything on it," Smoke muttered. "Look at it. The chunk there weighs forty pounds. They've got hundreds of pounds of it, and they've carried it when they didn't have strength enough to drag themselves. Look here, Shorty. We've got to feed them."

"Huh! Sounds easy. But how about statistics? You an' me has a month's grub, which is six meals times thirty, which is 180 meals. Here's 200 Indians, with real, full grown appetites. How can we give 'm one meal even?"

"There's the dog grub," Smoke answered. "A couple of hundred pounds of dried salmon ought to help out. We've got to do it. They've pinned their faith on the white man, you know."

"Sure, an' we can't throw 'm down," Shorty agreed. "An' we got two nasty jobs cut out for us, each just about twicet as nasty as the other. One of us has got to make a run of it to Mucluc an' raise a relief. The other has to stay here an' run the hospital an' most likely be eaten. Don't let it slip your noodle that we've been six days gettin' here, an', travelin' light an' all played out, it can't be made back in less 'n three days."

For a minute Smoke pondered the miles of the way they had come, visioning the miles in terms of time measured by his capacity for exertion. "I can get there tomorrow night," he announced.

"All right," Shorty acquiesced cheerfully. "An, I'll stay an' be eaten."

"But I'm going to take one fish each for the dogs," Smoke explained, "and one meal for myself."

"An' you'll sure need it if you make Mucluc tomorrow night."

Smoke, through the medium of Carluk, stated the program. "Make fires, long fires, plenty fires," he concluded. "Plenty Boston man stop Mucluc. Boston man much good. Boston man plenty grub. Five sleeps I come back plenty grub. This man, his name Shorty, very good friend of mine. He stop here. He big boss—savvy?"

Carluk nodded and interpreted.

"All grub stop here. Shorty, he give 'm grub. He boss—savvy?"

Carluk interpreted, and nods and guttural cries of agreement proceeded from the men.

Smoke remained and managed until the full swing of the arrangement was under way. Those who were able crawled or staggered in the collecting of firewood. Long Indian fires were built that accommodated all. Shorty, aided by a dozen assistants, with a short club handy for the rapping of hungry knuckles, plunged into the cooking.

First, a tiny piece of bacon was distributed all around and, next, a spoonful of sugar to cloy the edge of their razor appetites. Soon on a circle of fires drawn about Shorty many pots of beans were boiling, and he, with a wrathful eye for what he called the renigers, was frying and apportioning the thinnest of flapjacks.

"Me for the big cookin'," was his farewell to Smoke. "You just keep a-hikin'. Trot all the way there an' run all the way back. It'll take you today an' tomorrow to get there, and you can't be back inside three days more. Tomorrow they'll eat the last of the dogfish, an' then there'll be nary a scrap for three days. You gotta keep a-comin', Smoke; you gotta keep a-comin'."

CHIC AND TAILOR-MADE.

Wider and wider grew the tunic and shorter and shorter the underskirt, until at last the latter has disappeared entirely and the tunic in some cases five yards around have been lengthened and made the one and only skirt. Covert cloth has returned to popularity, and one sees many smartly tailored suits made of this neat material. Of such was the suit above closed with spherical buttons covered with the cloth, closing coat and belt. The coat also on new lines has a distinct flare below the hips and is severely tailored. At the bottom the hem appears to be turned up and merely pressed into place, the upper edge standing away from the skirt.

MAKE YOURS A PUBLIC SERVICE STORE

This is the age of service. The rewards of today go to the men who give the most in return.

Translated for you, Mr. Merchant, this means that the customers are certain to patronize the store that will give them what they want when they want it.

Cut prices may bring some trade, but better service will bring more.

This is the age when people are reading the advertising in their daily newspapers because they are finding it a distinct part of the service they expect their newspapers to give.

When a nationally distributed article of merit is advertised in the newspapers a demand for it sets in right away.

People want to see it and, if satisfied, want to buy it.

They are going to turn to the store that lets them know it has the article. That store will be giving them the service they want at that particular moment.

If it is a good article they are going to remember the store where they got it and will come back to that store again.

Co-operate with the manufacturers who come into the newspapers of your town to exploit their goods and you will be building business for yourself.

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

In the newest World Film Corporation release, "The Wishing Ring," to be shown at Proctor's Theatre, next Monday and Tuesday, January

Scene from the "Wishing Ring," to be Seen at Proctor Theatre, January 25 and 26.

25 and 26, there is a Mr. Annesley, who owns a rose garden. Into that beautiful place comes Sally, whose father is a poor parson. Sally wants some beautiful roses for the church altar and she cannot see how one should not take the beautiful flowers from where they grow when they are needed in the church. She starts away with these roses but she is stopped by the gardener who is really the Earl's son. How he becomes the gardener, is a long story which can be briefly summed up this way. Giles, for that's his name, has been in the hands of a tutor, because he abused his liberties while at school. Giles does not like his tutor and runs away from him to join his friend Annesley just at the time that the gardener of the rose bower has quit. Without further talk, Giles is placed in charge of the garden, and in his capacity of keeper of the roses he meets Sally. This is a case of love at first sight, and in time Sally is able to bring Giles and his father together. This is the result of her wish made on a ring that Giles bought for her from the gypsies. Other things happen and the dainty story ends happily as it should, with Giles and his father reconciled, and Sally happy that she will not need to worry for any more roses for her father's altar.

Household Hints

THINGS WORTH KNOWING

Black silk soutache braid, cut the desired length, makes a nice cord for elderly people's nose glasses. The soutache can be bought in bolts at 25 cents each, and the cord can be renewed from time to time.

If you have meat to boil and want to go out for the morning or afternoon, don't let it keep you at home. Take a large size kettle (not too large, according to the size of meat), place a saucer or small plate in bottom of kettle, lay meat on same with a piece of fat (if the meat hasn't any), cover meat well with water, have gas low, but not so low that it goes out. If the water all boils away the saucer keeps meat from burning, but lets it brown nicely in the fat.

SIMPLE HOME REMEDIES

When baby bumps his head, rub salt butter on the spot. It will stop swelling and keep place from turning black and blue.

If sweet oil be applied to the skin after a blow or bruise, it will not turn black and blue.

For Cold and Croup—Now that winter is here, the children are constantly bothered with colds on the lungs and croup. A good remedy: Buy 5 cents' worth of Scotch snuff. Take a cloth large enough to cover the desired spot, grease it well with fresh lard, next sprinkle with some of the snuff; heat and put on the place; immediate relief.

A mustard plaster will not blister if the part to be plastered is first rubbed with vaseline and a coating left on the skin.

The dark circle around the neck may be removed by nightly rubbing with lemon juice and discarding high, stiff neckwear.

THE TABLE

Good Soup for Sick People Who Cannot Take Other Nourishment—Brown two tablespoons butter in a pan; crumb up stale bread and stir in butter until browned. Pour over one cup water. Season with salt and cook until it boils. Very nourishing.

Creamed Dried Beef—Use one-half pound dried beef. If very salty, freshen by placing in cold water; bring to the boiling point and drain. Put two tablespoons butter in frying pan and when melted add two tablespoons flour; mix until smooth, then add milk, making a cream sauce. Bring to a boil, add beef, half teaspoon of extract of beef, and one-eighth teaspoon white pepper. Serve on toasted squares of bread from which the center has been removed.

Luncheon Dish—Mothers will find that combining a can of clams and a can of oysters, in the usual way one makes oyster soup, will be something really tempting and appetizing at the noon lunch when the children hurry in from school and the cold.

Meat Croquettes—Take two cups cold roast beef or lamb chopped fine with one dozen oysters, one cup bread crumbs soaked in water, one-half cup hot milk, one saltspoon each of prepared mustard, grated nutmeg and pepper, one even teaspoon salt, butter size of an egg melted in the hot milk, and one-half cup gravy, which is nearly always left over with the roast. Stir in one beaten egg at the last and form into croquettes. Dip them into an egg which has been beaten with one teaspoon of cold water. Roll in fine bread crumbs and fry in hot drippings or butter and lard mixed.

Salad Sticks Are Worth Sampling—Cut your dough into finger-shaped strips, leaving a little space between fingers as they bake. When nearly done remove from oven, spread quickly with melted butter and grated cheese, sprinkle lightly with salt and paprika, return to oven to brown. These are nice to serve hot with salad. If the cheese were spread on at first, it would be overcooked.

Animal Jingles
FOR LITTLE FOLKS
BY ALICE CREW GALL

Theodore Squirrel and Horatio Black

(One Was Industrious; the Other Lazy.)

Theodore Squirrel was the eldest of three,
And a nice little squirrel he was, too.
He lived with his folks in an old hollow tree,
As almost all squirrel children do.

He frisked in the sunshine and scampered around,
And played with his brothers all day.
He gathered the nuts which fell to the ground,
And thriftily put them away.

For his mother once told him, "Now, Theodore, dear,
You must gather up nuts while you can,
And store them away before Winter gets here.
You'll find that's an excellent plan."

In a tree right near by lived a lazy young squirrel.
Named Horatio Black, and all day
His mother would scold him (he wasn't real bad),
But he all the time wanted to play.

She gave him a basket and sent him away
To gather some nuts in the wood.
But Horatio said, "I'd so much rather play,"
So he played just as hard as he could.

One morning soon after when Theodore Squirrel
Looked out from his tree-house he found
That snow through the air was beginning to whirl
And to lie in a sheet on the ground.

Then Theodore said: "I'm glad that I worked
And put my nuts safely away.
I could never have had any food if I'd shirked.
NOW I've nothing to do but to play."

And Horatio Black looked out on the snow
And jumped up right quick out of bed.
"Oh, good gracious me! I must hurry and go
A-nutting," Horatio said.

So he ran to the wood and looked all around;
Then he cried and he screamed and he kicked.
There wasn't a nut to be seen on the ground,
For every last one had been picked.

So Theodore Squirrel in the top of his tree
Ate nuts the whole winter through,
Because he had minded his mother, you see;
That's surely the best thing to do.

If there is a moral to this tale, it's surely this, I'd say:
That boys and girls, like little squirrels, should work as well as play

Adventures in Matrimony
BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

"That's a fine looking man who just passed. Who is he?" asked the stranger.

"That man is Professor Knowles, one of the brightest men in the university. Did you notice that he is blind?" replied the minister.

"Blind! No. He didn't walk like a blind man," and he turned to look.

"He rarely goes out without one of his children, and holding a little hand he walks off with the stride that is natural to him," replied the minister.

"Then he hasn't been blind long?"

"No. He is the head of the department of chemistry and a very brilliant man. One day about five years ago he was alone in his private laboratory bending over a crucible. The experiment was nearing completion when the thing exploded. Students in the next room heard the noise and ran in; he was lying on the floor. They thought he was dead at first, for he was unconscious. He was badly cut about the face. They carried him to the hospital and the cuts soon healed, but he was totally blind."

"How terrible," said his friend. "He has children, you say?"

"Yes, three of them; they were mere babies. His wife is a very pretty, dressy woman. She was a leader in society, belonged to two clubs, besides the musical society which she organized. She is an accomplished musician. I tell you, she's the stuff," said the minister enthusiastically. "She has never attended a club meeting since the accident, and society knows her no more. She has been eyes to that man.

"During the dark days following the accident he talked of resigning his professorship. She would not hear of it. She knew his whole heart was in his work and that he needed that interest in life more than ever, so she persuaded him to wait and see if she could not help him enough to make it possible to continue the work. She took up the study of chemistry with him for a teacher; she learned to perform experiments with the greatest accuracy. They go together to his laboratory and she is his hands and eyes. His work has not suffered at all. He has published a book, too, dictating it to her.

"The children almost quarrel as to which is to lead him when they walk. Positively, it is the happiest family I know. In the evening they gather in the big living room and she plays and sings for him or reads aloud.

"If any mention is made of his blindness, he laughs and says: 'I have four pairs of eyes; what more do I need?' He has done his part by never allowing his loss to sadden him. He is the life of the house, just as he was before the accident.

"'There's a great advantage in being blind,' he often says. 'A man is allowed to stay at home and enjoy his life.' He always hated social functions."

"How does he handle his classroom work?" asked his companion.

"He is a lecturer, and for experiments before the class he always has had an assistant," replied the minister.

"Is his wife sensitive about his blindness?"

"No, she seems perfectly happy. You know nothing makes a woman happier than the thought that she is necessary to her husband, and they are ideally mated."

German Valley. and Chester

James M. Frost, who lives near Chester, is building a house to take the place of the one destroyed by fire last summer.

Abram Meyer, of Chester, has purchased an automobile.

Morris County Forest, No. 2, Tall Cedars of Lebanon, will hold a general round-up in Masonic Hall, Hackettstown, tonight. It is expected that at least forty candidates will be present for the degree work. Many members of the forest at Chester and German Valley will attend.

An all-day meeting of the Woman's Aid Society of the Chester Congregational church was held Wednesday in the local chapel.

John H. Holthusen has taken employment on the Hardin farm near Chester for the coming season.

Postmaster Ernest Zapplin, of German Valley, has his new office building nearly ready for occupancy.

Morris Barkman, of Illinois, is visiting his mother, Mrs. Melinda Barkman, who lives near German Valley. This is Mr. Barkman's first visit East in eleven years.

Bound Brook.

Miss Gladys Bush returned to her home at Herndon, Va., yesterday, after spending several days at the home of Miss Clara Gano.

Mr. and Mrs. Leigh S. Bache, of Beechwood Heights, have gone to Detroit, Mich., for a few weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Botti are receiving congratulations on the birth of a son, who arrived at their home this week.

Westfield.

The park commissioners have decided to have the lake open for skating until 11 o'clock and Sunday afternoons when the ice is in condition.

The graduating class of the Westfield High School this year, will number forty pupils, the largest in the history of the school.

Joseph R. Connolly has been chosen president of the Westfield Sinking Fund Commission. N. H. Griswold, of the People's National Bank, is secretary of the Commission.

N. P. H. S. NOTES.

The regular bi-monthly sewing meeting of the Sigma Gamma Kappa, of North Plainfield High School, will be held in the parlors of the Y. W. C. A., this afternoon.

Richard Schroeder, of the senior class, who has been absent for the past week on account of illness, returned to school yesterday.

The regular mid-year examinations of the High School will start next Tuesday afternoon, and all examinations in studies which occur in the first period will be held then; those of the second period will be held Wednesday morning, of the third period Thursday morning, the fourth period Thursday afternoon, the fifth period, Friday morning, and the sixth period, Friday afternoon.

Not many students as yet have handed in their names as candidates for the debating team of the High School, which will take part in the series of interscholastic debates held under the supervision of Rutgers College, and before any tryouts for the team are held Mr. Earley wants to have a large number of candidates to pick from.

The laboratory work of the chemistry department, which has been somewhat delayed on account of the large number of students taking chemistry this year, has once more been put on a regular schedule. The two chemistry classes have been divided into three sections and each section now has a certain afternoon for its laboratory work.

The first spelling contest, which is to be held the last part of this month, will consist of 100 words that will be chosen from the first thirty-two lessons in the High School speller. Each of the lessons in the speller contains twenty-five words.

Captain Abrams and Manager Van Mater, of the basketball team, delivered speeches this morning to the High School students during the chapel exercises urging everybody to be out to tomorrow's game and also saying some other things of interest concerning basketball.

The North Plainfield High School basketball schedule at the present time shows that fourteen games have been played and out of this number only three have been lost. At the same time last year the average of the team was exactly the same, the same number of games having been won and lost.

ON FURNITURE OF GUARANTEED RELIABILITY—TAKE ADVANTAGE OF THIS SALE

Please remember that the goods offered are our regular stock—goods embraced in our January inventory—of course, many are odd pieces, but all are of desirable style and warranted for durability. We have never gone in for "made to order sale goods," the kind that look good for a while, but lose their attractiveness when the newness wears off; such "make believes" never find a place on the KIRCH floors. It is this safeguard, as well as the bona fide reductions, that has made KIRCH'S January Clearance Sales the standard by which other sales are judged. Each day finds our floors aglow with fresh surprises, as our warehouses are drawn on for reinforcements to take the place of those that have gone before. Below we list a few of the hundreds of notable money saving offerings for tomorrow.

NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS.

Notice is hereby given that the Board of Education will meet on Monday, February 1, 1915, at 8 p. m., at the Board room in the High School building, corner Plain Street and Arlington Avenue, in the City of Plainfield, at which time and place the said Board of Education will receive sealed proposals for furnishing 2000 tons, more or less, of the best anthracite buckwheat coal for steaming and heating purposes.

Forms of bidding will be required to specify in their bids the name of the coal and shippers of same.

The coal to be non-clinking, thoroughly screened over a sieve fine enough to make our fall dust and small particles of coal, and to be of quality acceptable to the Board of Education or their agent.

All coal to be placed in the coal bins in the High School without any extra expense to the Board for handling or trimming the coal in the bins, and to be delivered at such time as the Board may direct.

Bids to specify whether long or short tons are to be delivered.

All proposals to be sealed and endorsed "Proposals for Coal," and addressed to the Secretary of the Board.

No proposals will be opened prior to 8 p. m. Monday, February 1, 1915, and none will be received later than that hour.

Bidders may attend the meeting of the Board on February 1, 1915, and submit their bids in person, but in writing, if desired.

The Board of Education reserves the right to reject any or all bids.

For the Board of Education.

B. VAIL HEDGES, Secretary.

STRANGE AS IT MAY SEEM

One of the most common contradictions in the average man is to thoughtfully provide an estate to sustain his family after he is gone, and then leave the estate unprotected, in the hands of inexperienced heirs or under the control of a friend who may not be equipped to handle or invest the property.

And even if an individual is competent to act as executor—trustee, he cannot be depended on to serve. He may not survive you; he may become disabled or move away; he may want to travel and not be tied down. No such uncertainties attend the appointment of this responsible Company. Its service is efficient and unfailing.

SUGGESTS STUDY OF CONSOLIDATION

Mayor Calkins Writes Interesting Letter to William Jeffery on Subject.

PROBLEMS TO SOLVE

City Executive Says That Without Annexation of Territory Special Legislation Must Be Secured to Overcome Many Difficulties.

Mayor Leighton Calkins, believing that there is an impression that he is indifferent to the subject of the proposed consolidation of the city and borough, has written to William Jeffery, president of the Board of Trade, explaining his position in the matter.

The Mayor's statement serves to show that he has an open mind as to the ways and means of bringing the merger about and indicates that he is opposed to going to the expense of an election without first having in advance a draft of the proposed legislation. A copy of the Mayor's letter to Mr. Jeffery is as follows:

"I understand that the impression prevails in some quarters, though mildly rather than acutely, that because I did not mention consolidation in my message I am indifferent on the subject. On the contrary, I believe and always have believed that Plainfield and North Plainfield ought to be one politically as they are geographically. The project, however, is one which will take considerable time to realize; and I had so much on my mind with respect to business-like machinery and methods for the administration of our affairs as we are at present organized, that there was neither time nor space for any adequate discussion of a matter of such great importance. It seemed better to me to defer the question for a special occasion, the more so perhaps because I have never had the opportunity as yet to give the problem any thorough study.

"Although I believe in consolidation, I am quite open-minded as to ways and means. Off-hand I should say that it might be a mistake to insist on getting the voters of Plainfield to go on record, even to the extent of a bare expression of opinion, without first drafting in advance, at least an outline of the legislation which must first be secured in order to make consolidation workable. I do not mean that we need necessarily secure all necessary legislation in advance of voting on the question. What I mean is that if we are to consolidate without annexing the territory of North Plainfield as a part of Union county, perhaps we ought first to figure out the details, at least in the rough. New Jersey laws do not provide any machinery for the government of cities located partly in one county and partly in another. If we consolidate without annexation, many difficult questions would arise and many intricate legal problems in relation to the law on schools, taxation, public safety, public health and other matters. I can conceive that the taxpayers of Plainfield might be nearly unanimous in favor of the principle of consolidation, and yet overwhelmingly against it if a vote on the question were forced by the Council at the present time without first preparing some carefully thought out plan for the legislation which will be necessary to meet all the business requirements. It is a good deal as if a self-constituted bondholders' committee should invite all the holders of securities of a corporation to deposit them, or at least to vote in favor of a reorganization or of a general scaling of securities, without simultaneously filing with the depositary some specific or general outline of a plan of reorganization.

"Sooner or later, if we consolidate, some plan must be worked out. Sooner or later, the legal machinery must be provided. Sooner or later, the practical details must be studied by experts and provided for. I suggest that this phase of the question be given consideration before any of our civic bodies, all of which I am sure have the best interests of the city at heart, go so far as to request the Plainfield Common Council to go on record as either favoring or opposing a vote in Plainfield on this very important question.

"I may be wrong about this, but if I am the best way for me to find it out is to state my views, so far as formed and for what they may be worth, cordially inviting criticism and dissent."

MANUAL TRAINING EXHIBIT PLANNED

Meeting Held in Elizabeth for the Discussion of the Subject.

Members of the Union County Manual Training Teachers' Association, of which Charles Bostwick, of the Plainfield School, is president, met in the office of County Superintendent of Schools Johnson, in Elizabeth, Thursday, for the discussion of subjects pertaining to that course of study in the schools. The meeting of the Manual Training Teachers' Association was held in the office of the county superintendent.

Miss Flora Hicks, teacher of sewing at Roselle Park and Springfield, led in a discussion of the subject of "Possible Arrangements of Time and Subject Matter given in Sewing in the Two Upper Grades of the High School." This was one of the interesting features of the program and all of the teachers who are interested in sewing participated in the discussion. It was recommended that a course of study be drafted in order that the work in sewing might be more uniform throughout the county. It was generally agreed that the varied project should be left entirely with the local teacher, but there were certain fundamental grades so that pupils when they were transferred from one district to the other might be able to take up the work where it had been left in the school from which they had been transferred.

Kenneth Carman, supervisor of Manual Training in Westfield, discussed the subject of "Consideration of Hand Work for Boys in the Upper Grades Other than Bench Work in Wood," which was interesting to all the manual training teachers who are interested in shop work. Mr. Carman spoke particularly about work which migat be done by the boys at home in repairing their houses, laying concrete walks, screening porches and other work which would bring into practical appliance the instructions which they were receiving in the school shop.

This was followed by a general discussion on a proposed spring exhibition of manual training work of the county, but owing to the shortness of time a further discussion was laid over until the next regular meeting.

THREATS CAUSE MORE MEN TO LEAVE WORK

Demonstration Expected at Funerals of Victims at Roosevelt Today.

Roosevelt, Jan. 23.—Further complications were added to the strike situation today, when a number of employes of the Williams & Clark, the Liebig & Co. and Armour Fertilizer Company plants, who have continued at work despite the strike, received letters telling them that their homes would be dynamited if they did not leave their tasks. At the earnest entreaty of their wives a number of men decided to stop work for a while. When this information was imparted to the officials of the plants their issued an ultimatum that any man who left his post would be discharged. This appeared to accelerate the decision of the threatened employes who quit in a body. They are principally engineers, oilers and firemen.

Roosevelt, Jan. 23.—Firemen, oilers and engineers employed by the Williams and Clark plant walked out this morning in response to the entreaties of their wives. This action followed the receipt of letters by the men threatening the destruction of their homes by dynamite if they continued to work.

The thirty-one deputies arrested at the Liebig plant last night are in the Middlesex county jail at New Brunswick on charges of first-degree murder, an unbailable offense. An extra guard has been placed on thte jail to prevent any possible outbreak by strike sympathizers.

The bodies of the two victims shot in Tuesday morning's riot will be placed on view in Van Ness' hall this afternoon. It is expected that 2,000 strikers, and their friends will be present at the funeral and some sort of demonstration is looked for.

It is now certain that Federal authorities will take action following the treatment accorded Federal Inspector Patrick T. Gill, who was denied admission to the yards of the Liebig plant while the deputies were being identified last night.

ENTERTAINED FRIENDS.

Miss Avis Laing, of Fairview avenue, entertained a number of her friends at a "500" party in her home, last night. Musical selections were enjoyed and refreshments were served.

DECISION RENDERED IN WESTFIELD CASE

Automobile Awarded to Wife of Bankrupt, Following Year's Litigation.

Disposition of a civil case, decision in which has been pending for more than a year, was made by Judge Edwin G. Adams in the United States District Court, yesterday, in favor of Josephine Coffin, of Westfield, the latter being represented in the proceedings by Swackhamer & Bird, of this city. The suit was brought by the trustee of the estate of William H. Coffin, also of Westfield, to determine the possession of an automobile, which through the decision was awarded to Josephine Coffin.

In the summer of 1913, William H. Coffin, who was said to be in straightened circumstances, sold the automobile in question to his wife for a consideration of $600. It was maintained that the license on the machine was not transferred to the new owner and that the automobile was left on the premises occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Coffin at that time.

According to the testimony presented in the matter, Mrs. Coffin found that her husband was being pressed by his creditors and feared that financial failure might result in the attachment of the auto as his property, so she consulted the local law firm. She was advised to remove the machine from the premises to a Westfield garage.

When bankruptcy proceedings were instituted Mr. and Mrs. Coffin were hailed to court for examination concerning the assets, particularly the automobile. Bilder & Bilder, of Newark, represented the trustee.

SEPARATE HEARING IN TAX PETITION

Plainfield Ice & Supply Company's Appeal to Be Heard Next Week.

After considering the merits of an appeal lodged by the Plainfield Ice and Supply Company for a reduction in taxes on property located on North avenue, near Berckman street, and on Madison avenue, near West Third street, the Union County Board for the Equalization of Taxes yesterday afternoon decided to lay the mater over until next Wednesday night, when the petition will be discussed further. This adjournment is granted for the purpose of allowing the company to secure proper counsel and to prepare the necessary credentials. The hearing will be of a private nature and the decision will conclude the work of the Board in Plainfield for the year.

Yesterday afternoon reductions totalling $5,000 were granted to the Plainfield Construction Company for buildings located on Sherman and Plainfield avenues. Mrs. Rachael Frazee, of 210 West Sixth street, was granted a reduction of $500 on property.

Other appeals disposed of yesterday follow:

Nathan Meyer, of 121 Watchung avenue, was granted a reduction of $400 on personal property; Thomas Cortas, a reduction of $100 on personal property; Peter Neuman, of 505 Watchung avenue, $1,000 on land; Arthur Ransome, 929 Woodland avenue, $500 on buildings; Dorsey Hyde, 1,287 Denmark road, $850 off land; Benjamin Tuzo, Terrill road, $300 off land; Adelaide W. Ayers, $400 reduction on automobile; estate of E. T. B. Hazell, East Sevond street, $200 off personal property; Margaret Cook, Cushing road, $300 off land, $100 off buildings; R. D. Williams, Darrow avenue, reduction of $800.

ASSEMBLYMAN RUNYON'S PLEA SAVED CYCLE THIEF

Elizabeth, Jan. 23—A plea for leniency made by Assemblyman William N. Runyon, was the means of saving John Edward Steele, a Plainfield youth, from a jail term, yesterday, in the Court of Quarter Sessions, for the theft of a motorcycle belonging to Elvoy Giles, of Plainfield.

As it was Steele's first offense the court said he would permit Steele to go under a suspended sentence and be on probation for one year. The motorcycle has been returned to the owner.

BOSWELL BOLEN SURPRISED.

Friends of Boswell Bolen from Somerville visited him at his home on Westervelt avenue, last night, the affair being in the nature of a surprise party. Music and games featured the evening.

'DADDY AND SON' NIGHT OBSERVED

Men's Club of Congregational Church Give a Dutch Supper.

TOAST TO MOTHERS

Rev. William Boult, John M. Whiton and A. M. Harris Speakers at a Novel Gathering of Fathers and Sons in Parish House.

The Men's Club of the Congregational church, gave a Dutch supper in the parish house, last night, the event being known as 'Daddy and Son Night." There were about eighty fathers, young men and boys present and the affair was a great success throughout. The repast was served by a committee composed of women of the church of which Mrs. Joseph Fuller was chairman, and there were several interesting speeches by prominent men of this city.

A. M. Neilson, president of the Men's Club, acted in the capacity of toastmaster, introducing the speakers of the evening, who were J. M. Whiton, superintendent of the Congregational Sunday-school; Arthur M. Harris, superintendent of the First Baptist Sunday-school, and Rev. William T. Boult, pastor of the Congregational church, Bound Brook. Mr. Whiton proposed a toast to the mothers and sisters and then gave a short talk on the love of a mother, the influential qualities of a sister upon a brother and visa versa, and also spoke of the sacred memory that lingers for one's mother after she has been taken from this life.

Rev. William T. Boult spoke on the subject of "Character," which he said was the greatest asset of a young man. Young men are judged in this world by their character and their success in life is due to the living of a good life in their youth. Mr. Boult took the instance of the modern play in which the hero, with the pleasing face and daring mood, is cheered and applauded, while the villian is hissed, jeered and generally repelled. The speaker said that it was exactly the same in every day life and the man with the good character is always the winner in the end. Mr. Harris spoke on the topic of Searching," and gave many helpful hints to the young people present. He said that very early in life the child begins to search and continues this practice throughout life. In athletics, business and all other phases of life all persons are continually searching. He encouraged the young men to search the Scriptures to get the good out of them and also to build character.

The committee of women that had charge of the supper consisted of Mrs. Joseph Fuller, chairman; Mrs. William Runyon, Mrs. George Robinson, Mrs. Joseph Moon, Mrs. Anthony LaBoyteaux, Hiss Ethel Miller, Miss Thelma Curtis, Miss Nellie Winckler, Mrs. Everett Morgan, Miss Alce Morgan, Miss Beth Martin. During the evening Miss Martin rendered selections on the piano and singing was enjoyed between courses. The men's committee consisted of James MacClymont, Everett Morgan and Alex Millar.

MRS. MARY ADELAIDE TERRY PASSED AWAY THIS MORNING

Mrs. Mary Adelaide Terry, widow of Noah Terry, died at her home on Terrill road, this morning, at the age of seventy. Her death was due to heart failure, a disease from which she had long been a sufferer.

She was well known in this city, having been a resident here for many years, the family living on the David Hand property in Netherwood. She was a member of the First M. E. church and took an active interest in the affairs of the church. Mrs. Terry came here from Bound Brook, where she is also well known.

Surviving her are three sons, Carman and William, of Terrill road, and George, of Chicago, and one daughter, Mrs. Edward Guest. Notice of the funeral will be made known later.

THIRD ANNUAL BALL.

Under the auspices of Plainfield Typographical Union, No. 399, the third annual ball will be held in Sebring's Auditorium, Monday night, February 22, Washington's Birthday. Halbfoerster's orchestra, of Elizabeth, will furnish the music. The committee of arrangements announces a competition waltz as one of the features of the evening. Robert F. Scott, Harry C. Thomas, Andrew Shampanore, Winferd C. Cram and Thomas Heron comprise the committee.

REINSTATEMENT FOR CAPT. H. B. KITCHELL

Movement Now on Foot to Again Place Him at the Head.

Within the next few weeks Captain Harry B. Kitchell, formerly of Company K, in this city, will again be in command of Company F, First Battalion, Second Regiment, N. G. N. J. At the meeting of the company in Elizabeth, Tuesday night, the members unanimously voted to have their former captain reinstated and this will be done in the near future.

Captain Kitchell resigned from the National Guard early in the summer of 1914, following reports of charges against him, and since that time Company F has been without a commander, the organization being in charge of First Lieutenant H. C. Robins. It seems, however, that the resignation of Captain Kitchell was never acted upon, and it has been decided to reinstate the officer.

Captain Kitchell was the first commander of this organization, and under his tutelage the new company progressed rapidly, and soon earned the reputation of being one of the best infantry companies in the State. He is considered one of the best military instructors in the State, and he is a strict disciplinarian.

He enlisted as a private in Company W, Second Infantry, on February 27, 1901, and on March 16, of the same year, he became a commissary sergeant. He was promoted to the rank of second lieutenant on May 28, 1902, and became captain on March 18, 1907. He became captain of Company F on February 20, 1912.

With the reinstatement of Captain Kitchell, Company F will again become the first company in the First Battalion. Since being without a commander, the organization has been fourth company in Major Martin's command.

PLANNING TO ATTEND Y. W. C. A. CONVENTION

Local Members Will Take Part in Metropolitan Meeting.

The monthly business meeting of the Sigma Gamma Kappa, of the North Plainfield High School, was held at the Y. W. C. A., yesterday afternoon, in combination with the regular bi-monthly sewing circle of the society, and after the meeting a very enjoyable social time was spent.

During the business meeting Miss Aller, of the Y. W. C. A. board, announced an invitation from the Yonkers Y. W. C. A., inviting the North Plainfield society to take part in a convention to be held at that place, Saturday, February 6. A large number of High School clubs, which are run in connection with Y. W. C. A.'s of New York and vicinity, will meet at Yonkers at that time.

Miss Aller and Miss Goddard, also of the Y. W. C. A. board, will accompany the girls on the trip and the delegation will leave Plainfield on the 7:55 train, arriving in Yonkers just in time for the convention, which starts at 9:45. The presidents of all the different clubs will make speeches during the convention and other matters in relation to the clubs will be discussed.

After the convention a large party has been planned for and all those who attend are sure to have a most enjoyable time.

MISS CAROLYNE DENTZ SURPRISED BY HER FRIENDS

A delightful surprise party was tendered Miss Carolyn Dentz last evening at her home on Duer street when about thirty of her friends called to spend the evening. The affair was arranged by Mrs. Frank Leivers and Robert Dentz, of this city, and George Bungert, of Newark. The evening was spent in playing games, singing and dancing the latest dances by the strains of a Victrola.

A feature of the evening was a "Virginia Reel" that was enjoyed by those present. Several vocal solos were rendered by the guests. Mrs. J. Dentz and Miss Mildred Smith rendered piano solos. The home was attractively decorated in red and green. At a late hour refreshments were served and the guests departed after an evening of pleasure. Guests were present from Newark and this city.

DESCRIBES SOUTH AMERICAN CITIES

Rev. Dr. W. T. Stuchell Gives Second in Series of Three Lectures.

Rio de Janerio with is wonderful bay, conceded to be the finest in the world, was the subject of a delightful lecture, the second in a series of three, given by Rev. Dr. W. T. Stuchell in Columbus Auditorium last night for the benefit of the Pastor's Aid Society of the First Presbyterian church. The lecture was illustrated with beautiful stereopticon and motion pictures taken by Dr. Stuchell himself, some of them being the only ones in existence.

Views in Bahia, the third largest city in South America, were shown, and Dr. Stuchell gave a most fascinating talk explaining in detail the various pictures in his valuable collection. One especially interesting picture was that of "Avenida Centrale," said to be the finest street in the world. A total of 567 buildings were destroyed to make this avenue which is one and one-eighth mile in length. Along this pavement are oval centres in the centre of which are beautiful Brazillian trees. The thoroughfare through the use of gas and electric light is as light at night as during the brightest day. Dr. Stuchell showed many views in an arounding this section with the well known "Sugar Loaf Mountain" in the distance.

Another remarkable view was that of a swinging bridge, the first one ever taken. It is a remarkable piece of engineering work and Dr. Stuchell has been sought for a copy of it by motion picture concerns. The lecturer in describing the bay at Rio de Janeiro said that one could get an idea of its beauty if they could imagine the Yosemite Valley filled at the bottom with water. This would illustrate some of the character of the bay. It is so large that it is capable of taking care of all the ships in the world.

Dr. Stuchell also gave an entertaining talk regarding the natives of South America and their peculiar customs. He said that it was difficult to secure much information while thraveling through that country as everybody is intensely interested in business and have little time to devote to strangers who seek knowledge of the country. The third lecture will be given next Friday night at the same place.

T. A. B. SOCIETIES PLAN GALA EVENT

Elizabeth and Plainfield Bodies to Celebrate Monday Night.

Elaborate plans are being made by the St. Mary's T. A. B. Society for the fraternal visit to be made to the clubhouse of the Elizabeth T. A. B. Society, Monday night, the leading feature being a bowling contest between the county seat and Queen City representatives. The local members and their lady friends will be headed by the fife and drum corps under the direction of Major Frank Donnelly.

A five-man bowling series followed by a social hour is in store for the locals. The "Tabs" have lined up their strongest bowlers for the occasion, as the Elizabeth team is considered the strongest in the county.

Special trolley cars will leave the hall on West Fourth street at 7 o'clock. On arriving at Elizabeth they will be met by the T. A. B. Society, of that place, whn a parade will take place. As the "Tabs" have been noted for doing things right and always giving its friends an enjoyable evening, they therefore expect to make this one "gala" night for all who attend.

MANY HEARD WELL KNOWN ELOCUTIONIST IN P. H. S.

A large and appreciative audience attended the elocution recital in the Plainfield High School Auditorium, last night, the affair being one of the finest of this nature ever held here. Edward A. Meade, widely known as an elocutionist, delivered a masterly interpretation of Charles Rann Kennedy's play, "The Servant in the House," and the great prose poem, "The Wine Press, by Alfred Noyes.

He displayed a rare acquaintance with the two examples of literature and the manner in which they were delivered excited much favorable comment and applause from his listeners.

RUSSIAN ADVANCE IS DRIVEN BACK

Germans Force Cossacks to Retire From Vicinity of Thorn by Hot Fire.

ALLIES NEAR LA BASSEE

Paris Report is That City Has Been Occupied—Fierce Battle in Alsace Continues—Austrian Premier Said to Have Resigned.

Petrograd, Jan. 23.—Under a murderous fire from a German infantry regiment, a Cossack advance guard of the great Russian army has been forced to retire from before Thorn, it is admitted here. The Germans brought light artillery into position to support the riflemen. The Cossacks were permitted to advance to within a short distance from the German intrenchments. Then a galling rifle and cannon fire was poured into their ranks.

The outposts having clasned, Petrograd confidently awaits news of the beginning of one of the greatest battles fought in northern Poland since the beginning of the war. Military experts look for more rapid Russian development in this northern region than elsewhere, for along the Polish rivers the opposing armies have dug themselves in and neither appears to be able to make marked progress, while in Transylvania Austria has summoned all available troops to hold back the Russians in that quarter, where the Grand Duke is now proceeding with caution.

The Germans will make a stand near Kikol, about twenty-three miles southeast of Thorn, it is now believed, and a general engagement all along the forty mile battle line will begin there.

Russian scouts today reported that the army of General Francois, moving from the Mlawa region to attack the rear of the Russian army moving on Thorn is making slow progress. Heavy reinforcements, however, are coming to Francois' aid and it is thought possible he is awaiting the arrival of these fresh troops before moving his main bodies.

Russian resistance before Warsaw appears to be matched by that of the Austro-German forces before Cracow. The action on the latter front has been reduced to artillery duels, which continue with unabated fury.

Unfavorable conditions in Bukowina continue to interfere with operations to the east, the War Office declares. Although the Msucovite forces hold all the passes in the Carpathians, effectually sealing up Hungary on the north, east and south, they are unable to penetrate further into Hungary at this time on account of the snow, which offers an obstacle practically insurmountable to the transport of artillery. The Russians in great force are awaiting the first favorable weather for a thrust.

According to a dispatch from Bucharest, the Austrian and Russian main forces are now within six miles of each other in the vicinity of Dorna Watra near the Transylvanian border and a battle is hourly expected. The Russians are seeking to carry out an enveloping movement in the Bistritz Valley.

Paris, Jan. 23.—It is believed that the Allies now occupy La Bassee, says the Matin. The Germans, concentrating great forces in the St. Hubert region, attempted last Monday to pierce the British line there. They attacked in massed formation, which the British checked with a murderous fire. Fierce conflicts occurred on Wednesday between St. Hubert and LaBassee, which ended with a perceptible advance by the Allies in the vicinity of Lens.

The French War Office gave out the fallowing statement at 3 o'clock this afternoon:

"The activity of our infantry on almost the entire front has been devoted to the repair of damages caused in our field works by the bad weather during the preceding days. We have advanced 100 yards in the region of Lambaertyzide.

"In the sectors of Ypres, Arras, Albert, Roye and Soissons there have been artillery combats in the course of which we gained the advantage at several points. Berry Au Bac has been violently bombarded by the Germans.

"In the Argonne the Germans have been completely checked at Fountaine Madame. As was stated last night, an attack by the enemy near St. Hubert has developed into an infantry combat, which has not yet ended. According to latest reports we are maintaining our positions everywhere along the Meuse.

"In Alsace an artillery combat continues in the region of Harimannsweilerkopf. The conflict in the forest is very severe and the fighting is uninterrupted."

Rome, Jan. 23.—Count Steurgkh,

BOARD OF TRADE PLANS FOR BOROUGH'S CELEBRATION

The committee composed of William P. Deering, F. H. Fuller and J. E. Dix, that was appointed at the last regular monthly meeting of the Board of Trade to consider the feasability of appropriately celebrating the twenty-ninth anniversary of Dunellen's formation, on March 23, held a meeting in the Borough Hall last evening.

After discussing the proposition the members of the committee unanimously declared themselves in favor of celebrating the event.

According to tentative plans of the committee the affair will be held on the evening of March 23 in either the W. G. Holton Hall or the local theatre. The citizens who lived in Dunellen at the time it separated from Piscataway township and are subsequently acquainted with its growth will be asked to make five or ten minute speeches on various subjects, including separation proceedings; formation of the Board of Education; the relation of the Central Railroad to the growth of the borough, and on subjects of a similar nature. The citizens will be asked to assist in making the first celebration of the borough's birthday a never-to-be-forgotten event. Some will be asked to assist with the music; some will be asked to assist in decorating the hall or theatre, while others will be asked to furnish cakes, coffee, etc.

The Sidney Williams house on Fairview avenue, recently vacated by Mr. and Mrs. John Cope, has been repainted.

Mrs. Peter Schneiderwind, of Prospect avenue, spent yesterday at Dewey Park the guest of Mrs. Charles Doty.

Miss Blanche Teeling, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Teeling, of Dunellen avenue, who underwent an operation a few weeks ago, is getting along nicely.

James McMahon, of Railroad avenue, has the rheumatism.

Rev. E. R. Brown was a visitor in New York, yesterday.

The condition of Mrs. J. H. Schneidler, who submitted to an operation in the Muhlenberg Hospital, at Plainfield, on Thursday, is said to be very satisfactory.

TENNIS CLUB DANCE.

The Crescent Tennis Club is making arrangements for a dance to be held in the local theatre on either the 14th or 15th of next month. There will be sixty or more couples present.

Verna Tinsman, the young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Tinsman, of Front street, was ill with a high fever yesterday.

MR. APGAR DOING WELL.

Contractor J. Newton Apgar underwent an operation for appendicitis at Muhlenberg Hospital, Plainfield, yesterday morning. The operation was performed by Dr. Endicott. After the operation Mrs. Apgar was told by the physicians that her husband's condition, owing to complications, was serious. She was, however, assured that he had a good chance for recovery. Dr. Endicott, it is said, has not lost an appendicitis case in twenty-seven years. Mr. Apgar was somewhat easier last night and his condition this morning was as satisfactory as could be expected under the circumstances.

MRS. S. R. TITSWORTH ILL.

Mrs. S. R. Titsworth, of New Market road, was taken seriously ill last evening. Mr. Titsworth, who is just recovering from the grip, sat up with her all night.

Alfred Leland, son of Mr. and Mrs. Erwin B. Leland, of Columbia street, was taken ill last night.

George Miller, of New Market road, has returned from Waldron, N. Y., where he and his family have been visiting his father. Mr. Miller leaves his family at Waldron for a longer visit.

Thomas Beck, of Jackson avenue, is recovering from an attack of the grip.

Burgess Tallamy, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred B. Tallamy, of North avenue, has the cramps.

Everett Carman, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Carman, of Jackson avenue, who has been threatened with pneumonia, is very much better.

William LeRoy and Kenneth Beck, sons of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Beck, of Jackson avenue, who have pink eyes, are better.

MISSES ECKEHT ENTERTAIN.

The Misses Marguerite and Olive Eckert, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Eckert, of Washington avenue, entertained a few of their friends at their home Tuesday evening. The time was pleasantly spent in playing games after which a dainty repast was served. Among those present were Miss Helen Bunnell, Miss Elizabeth Reusch, Miss Nora Bird and Miss Irma Baldwin.

RECORDER NOT SO WELL.

Recorder David S. Campbell was not so well last evening. The setback was caused, it is believed, by Mr. Campbell becoming apprised, despite the precaution of his family, of the death of W. R. Craig.

John Grindlay, of Grove street, has taken over the paper route of John Daniels.

'Plains & Fanwood.

The Rev. Oscar S. Michaels will have charge of the services at the All Saints' Episcopal church tomorrow and at the 11 o'clock service will take as the subject of his sermon, "Why Have We a Regularly Set Apart Episcopate?" and "Why Are We Episcopalians?" Sunday-school will meet at 10 o'clock.

Robert Thrane, of Paterson road, has consented to give another musical in the Fanwood firehouse and announces that it will be held on Friday evening, January 29. Mr. Thrane, assisted by his wife and a violinist from New York, successfully entertained a crowded house last spring. He is a violin-cello player and a member of the Philharmonic Society, of New York, consisting of seventy-five pieces, and Mrs. Thrane is a piano player. It is possible that Miss Knaben, a former grand opera singer and at present a guest of Mr. and Mrs. Thrane, will contribute to the evening's entertainment.

After much trouble with property owners on that thoroughfare and in some cases the matter being taken into court by the residents, it is probable that Springfield road, between Scotch Plains and Westfield, will be widened in order to eliminate several bad turns and grades. This improvement is listed among others that the Board of Freeholders has announced that it intends undertaking during the coming summer. It will necessitate the appropriating of ten feet and ranging to twenty feet of land of property owners that have frontage on that street and it was in an effort to prevent this that many appeared before Judge Vail in Newark last year to protest.

The Baptist church services will be conducted by the Rev. J. Madison Hare tomorrow at the usual hours: Bible school, 9:30; morning service at 10:45, and B. Y. P. U. meeting at 7:45.

A cake sale under the auspices of the Altar Guild, of the Episcopal church, is in progress at the home of Mrs. Frederick Sherwood, this afternoon.

Miss Mary T. Merrill, kindergarten teacher in School No. 1, was recently re-elected president of the Union County Kindergarten Teachers' Association.

As secretary of the Fanwood Township Sunday-school Association, Rutgers Nielson has just completed making his rounds of all of the Sunday-schools in the township and receiving the yearly reports.

William Sisserson will have charge of the service in the Willow Grove chapel tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock.

The services at the Methodist church will be at the usual hours tomorrow, with Dr. H. K. Carroll in charge of both the morning and evening services. Sunday-school will hold session at 3 o'clock in the afternoon and the Epworth League will meet at 7:15 in the evening.

An apron and necktie social will be held on Monday night in the church parlors of the Scotch Plains Baptist church. An invitation is extended to the general public

Watchung.

Rev. D. H. McNeil, of Princeton, will have charge of the morning and evening services tomorrow in the Mary E. Wilson Memorial Union church. Sunday-school will be held at the usual hour.

Martin A. Korff, of Plainfield, will give an illustrated lecture in the chapel, Monday evening, on "New York, the Great Gate for Immigrants."

About forty members of the Junior Christian Endeavor were given a social yesterday afternoon in the chapel. After two hours of good fun, refreshments were served by Mrs. William Demler, Mrs. William Patte and Miss Helen S. Schmidt.

The prayer service at Wilson chapel last evening was in charge of Douglas W. Demler. The topic was "Bold Beginnings." A quartet composed of the Misses Carol Hughes, Daisy Schmidt, Lucy Douglas and Grace Titus, rendered selections.

Bound Brook.

The Bound Brook Board of Health hs organized by the election of the following officers: President, George H. Packer; medical director, Dr. C. R. Fisher; health officer and register of vital statistics, Charles McNabb; secretary, William Schure. John Reed is also a member of the Board. Report of the year of 1914 were 45 marriages, 19 American born, 26 foreign; births, 158, American parentage 26; foreign 132; deaths, 73.

Raymond Shipley, assistant baggagemaster at the Central Railroad station, and Miss Blanche Ross, of Plainfield, were married on Thursday night.

Norman, Percy and Harold Harney, of this place, attended the annual reception of the Kirkman Athletic Association, in Brooklyn, last night.

A union mass meeting will be held in the Reformed church this evening at 8 o'clock. Mr. Tullar will lead the singing and Dr. Laws will preach.

The services in the Presbyterian church, tomorrow, will be as follows: Sunday-school at 10 a. m., Bible Brotherhood at 10:15, morning worship at 11 o'clock, sermon by Rev. C. J. Culp; union evangelistic services at 7:30 p. m.

The services in the Congregational church tomorrow will be as follows: Sunday-school at 10 a. m., morning worship at 11 o'clock, sermon by Rev. William T. Boult, subject, "How Jesus Saves."

Mrs. George Oakly Smalley entertained a number of friends at her home on Hamilton street, yesterday afternoon, in honor of Miss Effie Mae Miller, at which time her engagement was announced to Francis Rogers Parkin, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Milton Beam, of "Redlands," Bound Brook.

INSTALLED OFFICERS.

Owing to their inability to be present at the last meeting of the Woman's Relief Corps, auxiliary of the Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., the following officers of that organization were installed at the session held last evening: Secretary, Miss Martha Summers; chaplain, Mrs. Sarah Mattox; press correspondent, Mrs. Mary Randolph. Plans were made for holding a lunch box social to be held Thursday night, February 4, at the home of Mrs. Kitchell, of West Front street.

CHRISTIAN FIELD.

H. L. DeForest is the teacher of a young men's Bible class at the Crescent Avenue church which meets after the morning service on Sunday. The class is studying the book of Mark.

The morning service at All Souls' church will hereafter be held at 10:30 o'clock Sunday morning instead of 10:45 o'clock.

George Bungard, of Newark, is visiting Mrs. John Dentz, of Duer street.

The Misses Murray, of 2 Grove street, have removed to West Front street near Grant avenue.

HARRY THAW IS ON HIS WAY TO NEW YORK

New Hampshire Officials Release Famous Prisoner Today.

Concord, N. H., Jan. 23.—Harry Thaw was turned over to Sheriff Hornbeck, of Dutches county, N. Y., about noon, after a court hearing of only five minutes, when Deputy Attorney General of New York State Franklin Kennedy presented the mandate of the United States Supreme Court ordering his surrender to the New York authorities. Sheriff Drew, of Manchester, handed the prisoner over to his fellof officer from New York. The prisoner is to leave here on the 2:25 train for Boston, under guard, proceeding later to New York city, where he will be lodged in the Tombs prison.

Manchester, N. H., Jan. 23—Sheriff Drew and Deputy Sheriff Stevens left here this morning for Concord, with Harry K. Thaw. The latter appeared to be in an excellent humor. Former District Attorney Jerome passed through here at 9:24 this morning enroute to Concord. He stated that he would probably return with his prisoner by way of Boston, reaching the Hub city at 4:30 p. m.

SISTER MARY FLORENCE.

Sister Mary Florence, one of the Sisters of Mercy at Mt. St. Mary College, died at that institution yesterday. Surviving are her parents and one brother, in Philadelphia, and a sister, Sister Mary Gerald, of the same order, stationed at South Amboy. The funeral will be held Monday morning, requiem mass being celebrated at the college chapel at 10 o'clock. The interment will be made in St. Mary's cemetery.

TEACHERS PROTEST.

Members of the New Brunswick Teachers' Club have lodged a united protest against certain phases of the law regarding the State Teachers' Retirement Fund and have petitioned the executive committee of the New Jersey Teachers' Association in the stand. It is alleged that no attempt has been made to fulfill certain clauses cited in the law.

WOMEN'S BIBLE CLASS.

The women's Bible class which was formed at the Crescent Avenue church, last week, will meet tomorrow immediately following the morning preaching service. Miss Caroline L. Palmer is the teacher. The class is now studying the book of Matthew. All women interested are invited to join the class.

HIT BY A CARRIAGE.

While going for the 7:55 train this morning Stephen Wynoski was hit by a cab owned by the Plainfield Cab Company at West Fifth street and Park avenue. The pedestrian was only slightly injured and was able to continue on his way. Meyer Mechanic was the driver of the cab.

ISLAND OF CYPRUS.

Once Famed For Its Forests, It Has Had a Stirring History.

Cyprus is an island in the Mediterranean which has figured largely in the history of Europe. Famed in antiquity for its forests, today, except for the pine woods on the summits of its historic mountain, it is largely bare and treeless. From Egypt came monarchs to find timber for their fleets, and from Athens and Rome men to work its rich copper mines. The Apostle Paul visited Cyprus in his first great missionary journey, and Mark went there later with Barnabas.

At the division of the Roman empire Cyprus went to the Byzantine emperors. In the twelfth century England took the island and sold it to the Knights Templars, who in turn sold it to the king of Jerusalem. In 1570 the Turks sent 60,000 men against Cyprus. Nicosia, its capital, was taken after a forty-five day siege, and 20,000 people were put to the sword. In 1878 England and Turkey entered into an agreement whereby Turkey retained sovereignty over the island, while England took charge of its administration.

Cyprus is 148 miles long, from forty to fifty miles wide and is about 3,600 square miles in area, with a fertile plain separating northern and southern mountain ranges. The island produces copper, gold, silver, asbestos, gypsum, red jasper, cotton, wheat, barley, tobacco, silk and fruits. Wine is its best known product. The water supply is meager, but the climate is healthy.—National Geographic Society's Bulletin.

ANNOUNCE ENGAGEMENT OF MISS ALETA F. SPENCER

Mr. and Mrs. A. Gibby Spencer, of Grove street, announced the engagement of their daughter, Aleta Frances, to R. Dudley Green, son of Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Green, of Westfield, last night. The affair was arranged by Miss Roberta Spencer, a sister of the bride-elect. The announcement was made in a most novel way, a cobwew game being arranged for the purpose. The guests were given a string and all pulled at the same time. The cobweb was broken and on of each string was a small horn containing a limerick. Those present were then compelled to write a poem and they were read by the Rev. Charles H. Kuet, rector of the Holy Cross church,. When the one written by Mr. Green was read, congratulations were at once in order. Games were played during the evening and an informal program of instrumetnal music.

Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. A. Gibby Spencer, Mrs. R. D. Gibby, Mrs. Hattie Demler, Rev. C. H. Kues and the Misses Helen George, Ruth and Kathrn Day, Gladys Marsh, Elizabeth Smalley, Mary Logan, Carolyn Demler, Alice and Eva Bedman, Roberta, Aleta, Lillian and Helen Spencer, Lucy Douglas and Carlton Smith, Jack Loizeaux, Frank Webster, Ernest Bedman, Bert Harold, Joseph Chilton and Joe Logan, of this city, and Fred and George MacDonald, Newton Lambert, Richard Doerer and Dudley Green, of Westfield.

Y. M. H. A. ADOPTS PETITION TO BE SENT TO PRESIDENT

The following resolution has been adopted by the Young Men's Hebrew Association, following a discussion on the merits of the Burnett Immigration Bill, copies of which will be forwarded to President Wilson:

"Whereas, the Congress has passed a bill known as the 'Immigration Bill' and that such bill will soon be presented to the President of the United States for his approval, and whereas, the bill contains a proviso that none shall be permitted to come into the United States who do not know how to read or write, and whereas, it is common knowledge that illiteracy does not make a man undesirable; that because a man is able to read and write, does not follow that he is a better man, with better character, and more honest than he who cannot write; that great numbers of people with trained minds, and able minds cannot read or write, and that one's inability to read does not affect his working power, or capacity to add to the wealth and welfare of the nation, and that the only test that should be applied for those asking admittance to this land of the brave and the home of the free should be health, honesty, and good character.

"Therefore, be it resolved, That the Young Men's Hebrew Association of Plainfield, N. J., is opposed to, and condemns the indefensible literacy provision of the 'Immigration Bill" and respectfully petition the President of the United States to veto the bill, and that a copy of this resolution be forwarded to the President of the United States.'

PERSONAL.

Mrs. Donald McKay, of Inverhuron, Ont., is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Margaret Hansen, of East Second street.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hoffman, of West Fourth street, have returned from a visit with Philadelphia relatives.

Mrs. E. E. Runyon, of West Seventh street, who recently underwent an operation at Muhlenberg Hospital, is reported as doing nicely.

Miss Florence Dunham, of West Fifth street, is spending two weeks with friends at Stroudsburg, Pa.

Mrs. Charles L. Ryder, of Grant avenue, is able to be about again after five weeks' confinement to the house through a broken ankle, received in a fall.

Clement Bechtel, of Carlton avenue, has returned from a sojourn with friends in Brooklyn.

Mr. and Mrs. John V. Beekman, of West Eighth street, are spending some time at Carolina Pinehurst, North Carolina.

Miss Mabel Conover, of the borough, who is confined to her home by illness, is said to be improving.

INSTRUCTED TO GET LICENSE.

Isaac Smalley, a Dunellen truckman who carries on a portion of his business in this city, was arraigned before Judge DeMeza in the city court this morning charged by Clifford Smith, a business competitor, with not having the necessary license. He was instructed by the court to take out the cerdentials before doing further business in Plainfield.

"PILGRIM'S PROGRESS."

The third sermon, illustrated by lantern slides, will be given in the Netherwood Reformed church tomorrow evening at 7:45. This sermon will tell of the adventures of the Pilgrim from the "Cross to the House Beautiful."

CAMP ENDEAVOR, INC., TO MEET IN CRANFORD TUESDAY

Rahway, Jan. 23.—The annual meeting of Camp Endeavor, Inc., will be held on Tuesday evening of next week in the Presbyterian church, of Cranford. The meeting will be called at 8:15 promptly. Reports will be presented by the chairmen of the various committees in charge of the details of the work of the fresh air camp for the season of 1914. It is also expected that several slides will be shown during a brief illustrated talk, in which various features of the camp will be pictured.

Preceding the business session, the Christian Endeavor Society of the Cranford church has arranged to serve a supper to the delegates, beginning at 7:30. Each contributing society will be entitled to two votes at the meeting for the election of three trustees to the board of directors of Camp Endeavor, and it is urged that such societies will have these representatives present, as well as any others who would like to attend.

BUILDING TRADES ELECT OFFICERS FOR THE YEAR

Officers for ensuing year were elected by the Building Trades' Council at the meeting in the headquarters on West Front street last night as follows: President, H. H. Cory; vice-president, Fred Ehrhard; secretary, John Cordova; financial secretary, Russel Hann; treasurer, Harry Dorflinger; trustees, William H. Harding, E. A. Reed and George Fosbre.

Routine business occupied the attention of the body following the balloting. It was announced that the local musicians would meet in the Trades' Council rooms tomorrow afternoon for the purpose of forming a local union.

FLYING PRINCESS WITH RUSSIAN ARMY

First Woman Aviator to See Service In War.

The Princess Shakhovskaya, who has won fame as an aviator, has gone to the front. She has joined General Rennenkampff's army operating in East Prussia. So far as known, the princess is the only woman aviator in actual service in the war.

Princess Shakhovskaya is the first woman aviator to receive a commission for war service from the Russian government. The princess' application for a commission was rejected at first because of the fear that should she be captured by the Germans they might shoot her as a spy.

PRINCESS SHAKHOVSKAYA.

The princess learned to fly in Germany. She has visited New York and has quite a number of American friends. At the opening of the war between Italy and Tripoli the princess offered her services to Italy as an aerial scout, but was not accepted.

Several titled Englishwomen, notably Lady Viola Percy, the Countess of Dudley and the Duchess of Westminster, are enthusiastic aviators, and perhaps some of these may follow the lead of Princess Shakhovskaya and offer their services to the allies. Indeed, a proposal has been made to organize a corps of women aviators in England to serve with the armies of England and France, and the idea has been received with enthusiasm by many Englishwomen who reject the old theory of feminine weakness and declare that their sex is fully as fit to face peril as are men.

UNIQUE OBSERVATION TOWER.

Haystacks Used as Means of Acquiring Military Information.

Many are the devices used for the securing of information during the dreadful conflict that is devastating sections of Europe. The constant firing and the fearful execution caused by shrapnel makes the taking of observations an exceedingly dangerous matter. In the illustration a haystack is shown as a tower of observation. The German artillery officer at the bottom of the ladder climbs to the top of the haystack and screens himself there while he carefully watches the artillery fire of the enemy. He then descends the ladder and communicates the information gained to headquarters by means of a field telephone.

INDIAN WILL RULE 102,000 RED MEN

Gabe E. Parker to Superintend Five Oklahoma Tribes.

QUARTER BLOOD CHOCTAW.

Former Register of United States Treasury Returns to State Where He Is Greatly Liked—Washington Administration Policy to Have Genuine Test Under His Direction.

Through the devious trail of politics Gabe E. Parker, a quarter blood Choctaw Indian, has just achieved the ambition of his life. Without solicitation or even knowledge on his part he was taken from the principalship of an Indian boys' school in Oklahoma and made register of the United States treasury. Mr. Parker gave up his chosen work—that of helping his own people to become competent, self reliant, contributing men and women—only after a struggle. Now he is about to return to Oklahoma as superintendent of the five civilized tribes, with broader opportunity than ever before to accomplish the task he had originally set for himself.

Charge of 102,000 Indians.

The job Mr. Parker goes to Oklahoma to fill is a big one. It involves the welfare of 102,000 Indians of the Choctaw, Chickasaw, Creek, Seminole and Cherokee tribes, who desire to become citizens in fact as well as in name. Under the constitution of Oklahoma they are citizens of the state. They are wards of the nation so long as the government retains a control in trust of the 15,000,000 acres of their land, including the richest oil fields of the world and 450,000 acres of coal and asphalt lands. Mr. Parker's job is to carry out the policy of the present administration and to discharge into full and complete citizenship as many of these 102,000 Indians as are ready for the change, or may become so under his direction.

This policy is a new one and, in a sense, a revolutionary one in view of the policy of the government pursued up to this time. Mr. Parker promises to approach it cautiously. He has no plans at this time. He prefers to say nothing now. He has been away from Oklahoma for a year or more and has partially lost touch with local affairs. He does not now know what changes in the former policy will be necessary to carry out the present one, but he is going to Oklahoma to "do his level best." Furthermore, he is carrying back home with him a warm admiration for President Woodrow Wilson and his advisers, who have seen fit to let the Indians of Oklahoma tackle their own problems. It is not because he (Parker) has been selected to lead them, but because the Indians themselves have been recognized both as to capabilities and possibilities that Mr. Parker is so pleased.

His Enthusiasm an Asset.

If enthusiasm for the work at hand is an asset Mr. Parker is one of the best equipped men for his new job that could be found anywhere. He exudes it and with difficulty tries to suppress it, but it is there. His mind harks back to his days in Henry Kendall college, where he was valedictorian in 1899, and to Armstrong academy, of which he was superintendent in 1913, when he came to Washington as register of the treasury. He is proud of the fact that he became head of the Choctaw boys' school, after having been a pupil in it, and he is especially pleased that when he left he was succeeded by one of his old pupils, Peru Farver.

Mr. Parker believes in his people. He believes in the government of the nation and state and in their intentions toward them. He designed the seal of the great state of Oklahoma, which symbolizes the "sisterhood of states" and intermingles the former seals of Oklahoma territory and of the Five Civilized Tribes of the Indian territory. He is known as "Great Seal" Parker for this achievement. He served on many important committees in the constitutional convention of Oklahoma with special reference to the Indians, the schools and taxation and declined to enter politics when his work was through.

As between the two phases of the Indian question, the personal and the property phases, Mr. Parker desires to emphasize the personal as pre-eminently important. As a schoolteacher he was deeply interested in solving problems which would bring his charges to a full and complete realization of the responsibilities of citizenship, and he endeavored to give them such a practical application of their book learning as would accomplish that purpose.

Mr. Parker is a man whose earnestness of purpose sticks out of every word and deed. The policy of this administration toward his people is his policy because he believes in it. Whether right or wrong, it is certain to have a genuine test under his administration in Oklahoma.

Pomeroy's First Smoke In Years.

Jesse Pomeroy, the murderer, serving a life term since his youth in Massachusetts, has just smoked a pipe for the first time in thirty-eight years. On Thanksgiving day in 1876 a fellow prisoner gave tobacco to Pomeroy, and it made him ill. He never smoked again until now.

Monday on the Subway Aisle, New Building.

Four Days of Courtesy

For some years it has been our custom, apparently pleasing to the public, to introduce the February and August Sales of Furniture with "Days of Courtesy," offering the privilege of advance selection at the new prices.

For this present February Sale, beginning February 1, there will be four of these days—Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday of next week, January 27 to 30.

A quarter of a million dollars worth of new furniture specially purchased at a discount from our regular manufacturers will be in the sale, together with our entire regular stock of home furniture, with which the people are more or less familiar.

Reductions in price, shown on the tag affixed to each piece of furniture, will range from 10 to 50 per cent averaging 25 per cent less than the standard Wanamaker prices.

The February Sale of Furniture, like the August Sale, was originated by the John Wanamaker Store. Today it has become an American institution. It is as fixed and as true as the calendar.

BOUND BROOK HAS NEW 'PHONE OFFICE

Modernly Equipped Exchange Put in Operation This Afternoon.

Late this afternoon every telephone in Bound Brook will be disconnected from the present exchange in Main street next to the First National Bank, and in less time than it takes to tell it, will be reconnected with the company's new central office at 15 Maiden lane.

The "cut-over," as the transfer from one office to another is called among telephone men, will be done almost instantly, so quickly in fact that a call made a second before the new connection is established will be held up but a moment before the desired number is obtained through the new office.

The preliminary work of disconnecting and reconnecting Bound Brook's 511 telephones has been so carefully done that the actual transfer will be effected quickly and simply. The wires connecting with the old switchboard have been so fixed that at a given signal cords will be pulled and the old switchboard will become "dead." At the very moment that this is done another corps of workmen waiting for the same signal in the new building, will pull similar cords, which will release staying devices, thus throwing the new exchange into service.

Commenting on the system today, A. B. Wilson, local manager of the New York Telephone Company, at Plainfield, said: "By the new system it will no longer be necessary for subscribers to ring 'Central.' With the lifting of the receiver hook the operator is automatically signalled. A miniature lamp in the central office is lighted and remains burning until the call has been answered. When all the old instruments have been replaced, it will no longer be necessary to count the number of rings on party lines, for whenever the bell rings the call will be for you."

Coincident with this change, Mr. Wilson announces that the following practices will have to be observed: To call Central remove the receiver from the hoop and when the operator answers give the number desired in the usual way. If necessary to recall the operator move the receiver hook up and down very slowly. Do not hang the receiver on the hook until you have entirely finished with the conservation, as by so-doing you signal the operator to disconnect. Do not leave the receiver off the hook when the telephone is not in use.

CIRCULAR LETTER WRITTEN BY COUNTY SUPERINTENDENT

In the Education Bulletin issued for the month of January by the New Jersey Department of Public Instruction there appears an article by County Superintendent H. C. Krebs, of North Plainfield. The well known educator writes as follows to his teachers:

"When I visit a school, I like to see work of pupils arranged on the walls; the teacher conducting her classes briskly, presenting the subject matter clearly and in an interesting manner; pupils at the seats busy doing something worth while; pupils when reciting standing properly and speaking plainly; all desks in order, including that of the teacher; the register kept up to date; the blackboard containing evidences of the work pursued; the daily program neatly displayed; the State pamphlets in evidence; a pleasant spirit pervading the school. Any school meeting this description will be considered a good school."

UNIVERSAL PEACE.

It seemed almost a mockery, at Christmas time, to celebrate the birthday of one of whom the angels sang, "Peace on earth, good will to men," when we thought of the millions of men across the sea who are spending their days and nights trying to find a chance to shoot each other. And yet, may we not believe that this war, terrible as it is, is only a back eddy in the great movement toward universal peace?

I can not forget that God performs his wondrous works not in the twinkling of an eye, but through a process of development extending through long periods of time; that a thousand years are but as a day in his sight. It is within the power of the Creator to raise in a moment out of a tiny seed a lofty tree with its top a hundred feet in air; but He does not work that way; he takes a hundred years to do it.

This world, that in our eyes, is so beautiful, is a development running through millions of years, from the time when the earth was void and without form. This civilization of which we are so proud is the result of a long, slow development, from the time many centuries ago when our ancestors clothed themselves in the skins of wild beasts and fought each other with stone axes in the forests of Europe. Even the religion which we profess is seen to be a beneficient development when we compare it with that of the Dark Ages, when men and women were tortured and slain in the name of Christ himself, the Prince of Peace.

So the movement for universal peace is a development of many generations from the time when the people in one valley were the bitter enemies of the people just across the mountain in the next valley, to the present day when the great nations of the earth, warring with each other, are anxious to apologize to the world for their unwise action.

Like all great human movements, the movement toward peace is not a steady, even, unvarying progress; it is rather a process of advances and recessions, of gains in one part of the world balanced by losses in another part, much like the waves of the rising tide on the seashore. As you stand on the beach, an onrushing wave comes up to within a few yards of your feet. For a time, no succeeding wave reaches that height. Then another big wave over-rushes the mark of the other and comes up to your feet. Again, for a time, no wave reaches you, and again another wave, higher than all the rest, rushes up the beach behind you. And so the tide rises by advances and recessions until at last the whole shore is filled with the flood.

So, may we not believe that this dreadful war is but one of those recessions in the rising flood of peace which in due time will be followed by waves that will rise higher and higher until all the world is filled with its beneficence? At least, we that live in America may thank God that in our land, the national heart throbs only with peace and good wiil toward all nations in all lands; that we have no jealousies, no ambitions outside of our own territory, no desires for aggrandizement at the expense of others. Our national policy in Mexico and in the Phillipines, and in Cuba, twice taken from its oppressors and twice restored to its owners, expresses the national spirit of peacefulness and unselfishness, and we may be pardoned for our feeling of pride that our nation has registered the highest mark that the rising tide of peace has yet made on the shore of time.

Let us pray the God of Peace that all nations may soon join us again in making the movement world wide.

NEW CHURCH WINDOWS WILL SUGGEST SERMON THEME

The entire service tomorrow morning at the First Baptist church, will be arranged with reference to the new window just placed in position. Music and sermon will deal with thoughts suggested by the figure of the Christ as vividly brought out in the window. As His figure is the predominant feature in the picture so the sermon will be a glorification of the word made flesh. The window itself will be referred to only sufficiently to interpret its meaning and emphasize the thought of the text. Those who have seen this reproduction in glass and shall see it tomorrow can form their own estimate of its beauty and appropriateness. An extra musical number will be introduced in the services.

Dr. Strong is also planning several other sermons and services of unique character and unusual interest. Two Sunday evening sermons for men will shortly be delivered, the one entitled "The Religions of the Razor," the other "Sack-Coat Saints." To all the services of this church the public always is most welcome.

PROGRESSIVE EUCHRE.

The Men's Association, of the Church of the Heavenly Rest, is planning to hold a progressive euchre in the parish house on Thursday evening, January 28. Attractive features have been provided and at the close of the evening refreshments will be served by the committee in charge, which is under the chairmanship of Ernest Dorflinger. A pleasant evening is assured all who attend.

Great Semi-Annual Shoe Sale

January 18 we begin the clearance of Women's Fine Shoes to make room for Spring Goods.

Three Reasons Why You Should Be Interested:—

First—the shoes offered in this sale are this season's models from many of the best factories in existence.

Second—the prices are irresistable in that you can save, in many cases, as much as two dollars on a single pair.

Third—because the department is in charge of salespersons who exhaust every means to see that you are comfortably fitted and perfectly satisfied.

The January Undermuslin Sale Continues

In our announcement at the beginning of this sale, we made more descriptive detail of models, materials and trimmings, but even then the space hardly did justice to some of the exceptional opportunities offered here.

A visit to the department reveals the real bargain values and we advise that you do not leave it until too late.

number will be Miss Katherine Cameron and her company of select players presenting her latest comedy dramatic success. The bill will be completed by Don Barveal, comedy ventriloquist; Ward and Delmar, comedians, and Mardo and Hunter, comedy variety. The moving picture part of Monday and Tuesday's program will include the feature film, "The Wishing Ring," written by Owen Davis and acted by an all star company. The eighth installment of "Zudora" is scheduled for Wednesday and the second episode of "Runaway June" will be shown Thursday. The latter serial was presented the past Thursday for the first time and bids fair to be the most successful photo play seen in the city.

DECISION RESERVED IN LOCAL CONCERN'S APPEAL

Elizabeth, Jan. 23—Decision was reserved by Judge Connolly in the Court of Common Pleas, yesterday, in the case of John M. Ledley, of Westfield, and the Home Building & Supply Company, of Plainfield, which has been appealed from a justice's court.

The Plainfield concern lost an $85 judgment to Ledley for mason work done by him and they appealed.

Jane, the young daughter of Rev. and Mrs. C. C. Cain, of Park place, the borough, is recovering from a severe illness.

TWO YEARS' WAR, DECLARES EDISON

Days of Thirty Years' Contest Passed, Says Wizard.

SUBMARINES ARE EFFECTIVE

Their Exploits Teach Lessons In Building of Battleships—Boom In Business Here to Be Tremendous After the War—Worry? Think of the Kaiser!

"The year 1914 dealt a staggering blow to civilization, the arts and the sciences," said Thomas A. Edison at his laboratory in West Orange. "But civilization will recover from the blow very soon after the war ends."

"And that will be?" asked a correspondent of the New York World.

"Not for two years, I fear," said the great inventor. "This war has taught the world that the killing of men in war is a scientific proposition now. With all the implements of destruction and plans for offensive and defensive operations so carefully mapped out and with the great number of men that can be drawn into the fray by both sides, the conflict will be long drawn out.

"There have been wars that have lasted thirty years, but those days are past. Killing men is a different proposition today, but I believe the present struggle will not end for at least two years, although I pray it will end sooner than any of us expects."

Mr. Edison added that the submarine has been the greatest offensive instrument in the world conflict and said:

"While the submarine has not obviated the necessity of the Dreadnought, it surely has lessened its value. But you can bet the ships England is constructing now are so built that they will be protected against submarine torpedoes. The effect of a primary explosion can be greatly minimized by the interior construction of a Dreadnought, and this, in all likelihood, is being done by the allies now."

The hearty old gentleman, from whose pockets the destruction of his plant by fire took $3,000,000 a short time ago, seemed entirely happy.

"Did your loss persuade you to make any New Year's resolutions?" he was asked.

Worry? Think of the Kaiser!

"Resolutions?" he repeated. "Nonsense! Years ago I formed my rules of life and I have adhered to them. The chief of them all is 'Work.' No, the loss of the money does not worry me. Nothing was burned that cannot be replaced. I was up against a harder proposition when we built the first electric lighting plant in New York. It was something new—electric lighting—then. A fortune had been invested and the whole world was awaiting the outcome. Everything depended upon the success of that plant, but as a result of it the world has become electrically illuminated at night, as it were.

"When any one talks about worry he might apply my new standard of worry. Just think of the kaiser, now on the defensive, with nearly 900 miles of battlefront, all told, on the east and west. Why, the average man's worries sink into insignificance compared to this. Another standard of disaster is Belgium—little, gritty Belgium!

"It has surprised me to see how Americans have become weakkneed over this war. They seem to be stricken with a sort of commercial paralysis. They want to get out and do something; now is the opportune time. Why, you can put a building up cheaper today than you could before the war, and yet many of our supposed good business men will wait until the war is over as a sign of prosperity and pay more for the building. The wise man will prepare now for the boom in trade that we will soon experience and which will be tremendous after the war."

TO RIDE IN ALL ELEMENTS.

Inventor's Vehicle Will Fly, Run on Land, Float or Swim.

William A. Sharpe, a Denver mechanic, after laboring thirteen years, is completing a passenger carrying machine which is designed to traverse the air, to run on land as do automobiles, to travel the surface of water or to be used as a submarine vessel.

Sharpe says his aeromotorcar is designed to carry four passengers, but may be constructed to carry 250 persons in the air, on land or in water, with all the accommodations of a Pullman car or ocean liner. When placed on the market the cost will not exceed that of a standard automobile, he says.

The aeromotor is designed to attain a speed of from thirty to 300 miles an hour and a carrying capacity of 2,000 pounds for each 1,000 pounds weight of the car. The entire vehicle is built of pressed steel and aluminium. The inventor says it is constructed on well recognized principles.

Arrows Carry Belgian Mail.

The Germans confiscated bows and arrows found in northern Belgium, where archery still flourishes. French humorists were amused at this action, but it appears that the Belgians were using the arrows to shoot letters into Holland to avoid the German censorship.

The Horse Show

Here he is shown in his glory and pride,
Glossy the mane of him, satin his hide;
Beautiful women in gorgeous array
Worship the horse as the king of the day

Masters to pet him and grooms at his beck,
Stall of the finest and ribbons to deck;
What does he do that such favors should flood?
Goes through some paces that prove he has "blood."

Over in Europe his brothers lie dead,
Mangled by shrapnel and torn by the lead;
Valiant in battle, the trooper's best friend,
Faithful are they to the slaughtering end

Where are the honors and ribbons they get?
Where are the maidens admiring to pet?
Women who weep for their soldiers in vain
Waste not their tears on the four footed slain.

WAR'S END FORETOLD BY JAPANESE SEER.

With Bamboo Sticks and Cubes He Fixes Next May as Limit.

An adept in "the art of divination," as practiced in Japan for something like a thousand years and in China for many centuries, Mr. Kodama gave in New York a demonstration of his art. The occasion was a dinner given by the east and west news bureau, an organization of prominent Japanese and Americans interested in furthering amicable relations between the occident and orient, to a party of friends, among them men connected with various publishing interests who are interested in these relationships or who have been in Japan.

The principal feature of the demonstration of the art of divination was in answer to a written question by one of the guests, "When will the great European war end?"

Mr. Kodama is a man of strikingly religious aspect, and his paraphernalia is extremely simple, consisting simply of a few bamboo sticks in a cylinder and half a dozen ebony cubes upon a table. After some five minutes or so of manipulation of the sticks and cubes and whispering as of one in silent prayer, he responded to the question in Japanese.

Dr. Iyenaga, one of the hosts of the evening, made the interpretation of the reply, which came in the form of a poetic oracular utterance. This interpreted, Dr. Iyenaga said, was to the effect that negotiations for peace would begin by neutral nations the latter part of April or the 1st of May and that they would come to a successful conclusion.

Dr. Iyenaga, while explaining that he was as skeptical generally about these matters as any one of his hearers, felt it worth while to say that Mr. Kodama had correctly prophesied the date of Huerta's expulsion from Mexica, a certain destructive earthquake in Japan, a ruinous fire in Tokyo and had made prophecies of a nature to warrant at least an interested curiosity. About forty guests were present.

TEST WAR AEROPLANES.

One of Interesting Exhibits at Panama-Pacific Exposition Grounds.

Of the hundreds of working industrial exhibits ranging from a completed cotton mill down to a sewing machine the aeroplane factory plant will undoubtedly be one of the most interesting of the practical displays on the grounds of the Panama-Pacific International exposition.

Silas Christopherson has made trial flights in the new United States navy flying boat from the exposition field. This machine is similar to those made by Christopherson for Japan, except that the United States navy ship is considerably larger.

Lincoln Beachey has added a vertical flight to the list of aerial gymnastics for which he is noted. He has made several "straight up in the air" ascensions parallel with the 435 foot Tower of Jewels. Beachey recently wrote the figure "1,000" in the clouds above the exposition in celebration of his one thousandth "upside down" flight. The deck of a warship is being built within the harbor to give Beachey and other aviators who compete in the aviation tournament an opportunity to test their skill in dropping bombs.

LAWYER LOST IN DESERT.

Denver Man Subsists Five Days on Contents of Can of Milk.

Famishing, crawling on his hands and knees like an animal and close to madness, Samuel H. Baker, a prominent Denver attorney, real estate and mining broker, arrived at Thompson, Utah, after having been lost for five days in the Utah desert.

He had been without food or water and his only sustenance came from a small can of milk which he had put in his pocket when he started out.

Baker and M. J. Gill of Denver had gone to Salt Valley, twenty-two miles southeast of Thompson, to inspect some radium properties. Baker, provided only with a light lunch, hired a horse and cart and set out alone across the desert. At night he reached a sheep camp and turned the horse out to graze. The animal returned to Thompson.

The following morning Baker, failing to find his horse, started out on foot in search of the animal. He reached his uranium claims, but, continuing his search for the strayed animal, became lost.

In the Elks' Senior League bowling match on the Newark alleys, last night, the Newark team dropped two games out of three to the Rutherford quintet. The match was well contested. In the first game the visitors, with 899, had an advantage of forty-seven pins. Newark came back with 959 and had the second game by fifty-three pins. In the final and deciding contest the Rutherfords came through for 941 and they captured the game by thirty-nine pins. Widmayer did some fine pinning for the visitors, having counts of 255 and 210 and an average of 218-1 for the series. Oakes had 210, Clark 203 and 201, and A. Walters 207. Connie Leick and Alec Hinton both accounted for 224 for the Newarks, Weber had 205 and Howard Williams rolled 202.

VALUABLE PRIZES OFFERED TO COLUMBUS LEAGUERS

Prizes for the Knights of Columbus Bowling League were decided upon at a meeting held in Bayonne, Thursday night. Loving cups will be awarded as prizes for first, second and third team honors, high team score and high team average. Gold medals will be given to the pinners copping the individual high score and the high average. The second best average will pull down a silver medal, and the third a bronze medal. Bronze fobs will be donated to the high average man on each team.

To the pinner coming closest to the following averages—160, 165, 170, 175 and 180—prizes will also be awarded. This scheme is entirely new in this section and should go big with the K. of C. bowlers. A pinner must roll one pin better than the averages mentioned above to be eligible for a prize. No one bowler is allowed to win more than one medal. It was also decided to hold the annual banquet at Achtel-Stetters, Newark, April 7, when Carol G. Bender, president of the league, and a member of Bayley Council, will award the prizes.

Y. M. C. A. TEAM WILL PLAY IN NEW SUITS

The Y. M. C. A. basketball team will meet the St. John's five, of New Brunswick, tonight, in the association and the locals will be seen in their new uniforms for the first time. Last week this team defeated Plainfield at New Brunswick by eleven points and a good game is expected tonight. The Plainfield jerseys are white with a six-inch blue "P" on the front and a number on the back. The stockings are white with two half-inch blue stripes.

Captain Al Brynairski has given out the numbers, which provide for a new set of signals, in the following order: Taylor 1, Ricketts 2, Moulton 3, Gavett 4, Dunning 5, Glover 6, Brynjarski 7, Burner 8, and Newkirk 9.

NO ICE, NO GAME.

The absence of ice will keep the Queen City hockey team idle this week. As soon as the conditions are favorable the team will get into action.

HOPE GAME.

The Hope Chapel basketball team will play the Progressive Five, of Elizabeth, on the Fourth street court tonight at 8 o'clock. There will be a preliminary game also.

Scattered Sport Gleanings

WESTFIELD WAS TREATED BADLY—ALSO SPANKED.

A schoolboy correspondent's version of the Westfield-Plainfield High School game here last Tuesday was published yesterday in the Westfield Standard as follows:

"Bad luck, together with poor refereeing, caused Westfield's defeat. Everything in the game seemed to break in Plainfield's favor, even the backboards being against Westfield."

Yougottahandit to the Mt. Ararat Horace Greeley for digging up excuses. Although Plainfield played rings around the visitors and made them look like a quintet of Fresh Air Camp stars he comes back in a game fashion and charges the reverse up to the "ref" and the backboards. It's all right to take a little spleen out at the expense of the official but the poor, defenseless backboards should be omitted.

THEIR "REP" WAS TOO BIG TO JUNGLE.

An Asbury Park sport writer yesterday heralded the coming of the Plainfield Y. M. C. A. quintet in the following glowing terms: "The basketball game tonight between the Crescents and the Plainfield Y. M. C. A. quintets should be one of the best of the year. The Plainfield team is rated as the best Y. M. C. A. team in the State."

Wonder what the "she-shore" scribe will have to say about the Queen Cityites after the result last night. Yea Bo, we're going to get an earful.

"June" Dunning says: "Snow on the ground means a North Plainfield victory this afternoon."

"June" hasn't found out what that snow will signify if the rain happens to turn it into the stuff that makes rivers.

While we're overhauling the public press we might as well let you know what the Trenton "Times" thinks about the Plainfield Y. M. C. A. quintet.

"The most important game of the season for the Trenton Y. W. C. A. will be played against the Plainfield girls February 6. The Trenton and Planifield teams are regarded as two of the foremost girls' clubs in the State."

We have nothing to say on the subject.

NORTH PLAINFIELD GRADES SWEPT WESTFIELD BOARDS

The North Plainfield grades' basketball team defeated the Westfield A. C. aggregation at that place, last night, in a fast game, only two points separating the scores at the end of the battle. The final count was 23 to 21. A field goal also separated the scores at the end of the initial period of play and each team made 9 points in the last half.

The play was fast through the entire forty minutes and kept the crowds on their feet at all times. O'Connor, Townley and S. Dunning were the main scorers for the locals, while Dickson, Davies and Sisserson played well for Westfield.

MOORE BREEDING FARM.

Morristown, Jan. 23.—Paul Moore, of this town and New York, and his father, Judge D. H. Moore, of New York, it was reported yesterday, have leased the Morristown Driving Park and lands comprising about forty acres, and it is said will conduct a breeding and training farm. Workmen are busy in the park making repairs and improvements. It is likely a ring will also be built. The park has an interesting history. It was laid out before the Civil War and reached the height of its popularity in the sixties and seventies. The famous race between the great Dexter and Ethan Allen was run over the course on July 4, 1867. The bell which started this pair is still doing service at the track. Of late years the track has been used by the Morris County Road Drivers' Association.

LEAL AGGREGATION BESTS CARTERET

Locals Get Large End of Game Played This Morning in Orange.

The Leal School basketball team went to Orange, this morning and brought back the bacon from the Carteret Academy five, the final score being 21 to 16. The local team obtained a big lead in the first half, getting 16 points to their opponents' 6, and managed to hold the home players down in the second half sufficiently to win, although the latter made a strong bid for the game.

Chauncey Stout's bowling team of the Elks' house tournament, won two games last night, and went up to first place with the H. Woolston tribe, each having annexed four games without losing a single one. In the matches the Townley and Causbrook teams both fell prey for Stout and his pinners, while the Townley aggregation won its only game from Causbrook's five.

The first game between the Stout-Causbrook teams, was the best of the night, the scores being 786 to 750, a difference of 36 pins. Burd was high score man of the night, scoring a 210, while Firstbrook was second with a mark of 205.

"JUNE" SAYS NEW SUITS WERE A JINX

Plainfield Manager Charged the Walloping up to Merchandise.

The new basketball suits of the Y. M. C. A. basketball team had a bad effect on the players, last night, and the local aggregation suffered defeat at the hands of the strong Crescent A. A. five, of Asbury Park, at that place. The final count was 65 to 33, the locals never being in the game after the first ten minutes of play. Although the score was one of the biggest that has been registered against the locals this year, they put up a good article of ball and had their opponents on the run until the game became nothing but a mass of fouls which were overlooked by the officials.

Plainfield started off with Ricketts and Taylor in forwards, Glover and Brynairski at guards, and Dunning centre. For the first several minutes of play both teams played on the offensive, and then Jack Ricketts broke through with a pretty field goal from mid-floor. The first basket made by the Crescents brought down the large audience. Three field goals made by the local players put them in the lead and then the fouling began. It was a rough and tumble match from then on and the home players had the best of everything. The first half ended with the score standing 33 to 19.

Gavett and Moulton played the second half, but the big lead made by the Crescents in the first half could not be overcome. Captain Knapp was the star of the game, all of his eleven baskets being of a sensational nature. Barrett was high individual scorer, getting thirteen of the two-point variety.

OVERCONFIDENT FIVE IS GIVEN SHORT END

P. H. S. Girls Lost to Westfield by Score of 14 to 5.

The girls' basketball team of the Plainfield High School, traveled to Westfield, yesterday afternoon, in a too confident frame of mind and came back defeated by the score of 14 to 5. Only one field goal was allowed the local five, and this came in the first part of the game, when Miss Crane dropped the ball in the basket.

After this the best the local quintet could do was to cage three foul goals. The passing of the Plainfield team was also far below what it should have been. The Westfield team assumed the aggressive at the start of the game. Miss Sexton, at forward, played a fine game for her team, dropping the ball in for four field goals and two fouls.

THE PLAINFIELD THEATRE

The widely heralded photo spectacle, "Cabiria," from a scenario by Gabriele D'Annunzio, Italy's foremost poet and dramatist, which opens at the Plainfield Theatre, Wednesday and Thursday, January 27-28, is one of the most interesting novelties of the times. This picture was made by the Itala Film Company, of Turin, and the American tour is under the person direction of Louis F. Werba and Mark A. Luescher, who heretofore have directed and produced high class musical comedies exclusively. "Cabiria" is said to have been staged in five countries at an outlay of $250,000 with a cast of five thousand, and it will demonstrate a new and important function of the camera. An expenditure such as this and the payment of royalty such as D'Annunzio demands would never have been possible if it were to have been seen only by the people of Italy. But in "Cabiria" the producers created a motion tableaux for the world and the picture machine makes it possible to show the collosal spectacle everywhere.

MAGEE IS GREAT NATURAL BATTER

Sherwood Is Also Timely In His Stick Work.

HIS HITS DROVE IN RUNS.

Versatile Player Was Dissatisfied by Failure to Make Him Manager of the Phillies, and He Threatened to Jump to the Federal League—Is Pugnacious Player and Has Had Many Fights.

Sherwood Magee, recently traded to the Boston Braves by the Philadelphia National league team, is one of the picturesque players in major league baseball. He has always been a star, having finished up among the leading hitters almost every year since he joined the Phillies, and last season was one of the best he has ever enjoyed. Magee wanted to quit the team last year, and Manager Dooin executed a master stroke last spring when he appointed Magee captain. During the season Magee played in every position on the team except pitcher and catcher, being one of the year's sensations as an infielder, while he finished the season with a batting average of .321 for 151 games.

His loss is sure to be felt by the Phillies, for his hitting, fielding, base running and all around ability made him a tower of strength to the club, but as Manager Moran has Becker, who finished above Magee in hitting; Cravath, one of the star batsmen of the league, and Paskert, a veteran, for his outfield he has not seriously crippled his team by the trade.

Magee's dissatisfaction and refusal to play with the Phillies this year were on account of what he claimed was unfair treatment by the club. Magee was one of the candidates for the position of manager after Dooin retired, and when Moran was appointed it was disappointing, although Magee and Moran have always been good friends. Magee had made up his mind so strongly about quitting the Phillies that he visited Baltimore and talked with the Federals. The latter offered him a contract for two years, and the salary was reported to be $7,000, but Magee refused to sign unless given a contract for three years, and he had only returned to his home when he received word to go to New York to meet President Gaffney of Boston and Baker of Philadelphia.

Magee was born in Clarendon, Pa., on Aug. 6, 1884. He first played professional ball with the Allentown, Pa., club, an independent team. He later went to Carlisle, where he was "discovered" by Jim Randall, then a scout for the Phillies, and went to Philadelphia in 1904. His batting and fielding records for the eleven years he has been with the Phillies are:

Year	Games.	B. A.	F. A.
1904	95	.277	.921
1905	155	.289	.963
1906	154	.282	.982
1907	139	.328	.978
1908	142	.283	.970
1909	143	.270	.970
1910	154	.331	.974
1911	122	.288	.981
1912	132	.306	.963
1913	138	.306	.968
1914	151	.321	.963

Magee has made a wonderful record ever since he joined the Phillies. He always has been noted as a slugger, a great judge of fly balls, a good base runner and full of the so called "inside stuff." In 1910 he led the National league in scoring, making 110 runs, and last year he was second in that department. In 1910 he led National league in batting, with .331 per cent, and last year was third, with .321. He led the National league the last season in batting in runs, driving 101 over the plate. He also led the league in extra base drives.

The big outfielder's slugging propensities have not been altogether confined to the diamond, for he has "taken a punch" at more than one "fan" who became too friendly with his "nagging" from the bleachers. He was almost ruled out of baseball in 1911 when he knocked Umpire Finneran unconscious with a blow on the jaw because, Magee claimed, the latter made an insulting remark to him when Magee kicked at being declared out on strikes during a game with St. Louis. Last season he "mixed it up" with Pitcher Oy Marshall, who refused to obey Magee's orders as captain to practice on the field instead of playing pool in the clubhouse.

Illinois Signs Coach For Five Years.

Coach Bob Zuppke of the University of Illinois, western conference championship eleven, has been signed by Illinois for a period of five years. Zuppke's contract had another year to run, but Illinois authorities handed him a new one when it was reported that other conference schools were looking him over.

Jeffries to Help Willard.

Jack Curley, promoter of the Johnson-Willard fight, declares that Jim Jeffries will help Willard train. Jeffries is reported to have disposed of his interest in a cafe in Los Angeles, Cal., to his brother Jack. Passage of the anti-prizefight law in California is said to have moved Jeff to take this action.

Wray Favors Four Miles.

Coach Wray of the Harvard crew has come out with the statement that he favors the four mile course for collegians.

PROGRESS AND PROSPERITY IN PLAINFIFLD

MATERIAL PRICES CONTINUE FIRM

In Many Instances There Has Been Marked Advancement.

ENCOURAGING SIGNS

Development Companies Are Now Able to Get Money to Finance Suburban Propositions—Advance in Price of Brick.

New York, Jan. 23.—Indicating a general improvement in the building situation the prices of materials held steady to firm this week. Linseed oil actually advanced two cents a gallon. It is now quoted at 60 cents. Common brick was not shaded quite so much. Lime held firm at nominal quotation of $1.25 wholesale, cement remained steady on the Building Material Exchange, despite reports of further cutting, and steel was firmer at the 1.21 and 1.26 levels. Lumber apparently is feeling the meagre cuts at manufacturing centres due to light falls of snow which has made sledding difficult, because quotations are being made nearer to official list than at any time since the last of July.

The fact that development companies are able to get money to finance suburban propositions is another encouraging sign. In almost every East Jersey city building material interests have been in receipt of moderate inquiries for deliveries running through the second quarter. Dealers are inclined to make attractive prices to these purchasers because of the moral effect development activity always has upon other prospective builders. But dealers' quotations running into the summer months are not so liberal as they are for earlier construction work and, indeed, prospects of long continued low prices are far from good.

Manufacturers have had to curtail production. At present they are taking stock and overhauling their plants for the spring demand. Stocks are low, as a rule. This is particularly true of lumber, steel shapes, lime, plaster, plaster boards, wire lath, wire reinforcement and shingles. They are still showing a willingness to make buying attractive to dealers, mainly because dealers have heretofore not felt a heavy demand from consumers. But now that the spring requirements of prospective builders begin to look good, and dealers are beginning to show more interest in taking up the jobs offered, quotations are a little firmer. The early builder will be the one to reap the advantage in the building material market because the general trend of the market is upward.

Common brick moved up this week from $5 and $5.25 to $5.75 and $6.00, wholesale, dock, New York. It was immediately followed by a stiffening in quotations by Raritan interests. Newark yard prices also advanced twenty-five cents a thousand. The advance was due to the return of cold weather and the small number of brick now in dock. A gradually improving demand also had a bearing in the change. When the week opened there were only two barge loads in the open list. When it closed there were six. This made a total of 21,000,000 Hudson brick available in the metropolitan market. The Greater New York Brick Company, selling agent for the majority of the Hudson river brick plants, announced that it was quoting only on covered barges at $6. Before the end of next week, it was predicted, prices of good covered brick will be selling at $6.25.

Coal also has felt the mild weather. Operators have been curtailing output because the demand is weak. Managers of multitenented buildings have been laying in reserve supplies where possible to avoid tightness in deliveries when cold weather again sets in. Prices have not changed.

Activity on the Building Material Exchange was largely centered in purchases by East Jersey dealers this week. There was little interest shown by city distributors save in one case where a job of cement was purchased at a little below seventy-five cents, mill. The market, however, is steady to firm.

OCCUPIES NEW HOME.

Contractor George Nolte, who has been living on Grandview avenue, has moved into his new residence, just completed, on Netherwood avenue, between East Front street and Green brook. It is conceded to be one of the handsomest houses in that vicinity. Its cost was about $7,000, and numerous original ideas embodied in the designing gave unusual value for the money. The interior is the acme of completeness and Mr. Nolte has been warmly congratulated on his forethought.

BERRY COMPANY TO BUILD BY DEGREES

Proposed Sixteen Houses in East End Will Not Be Put up at Once.

The decision of the Berry Construction Company to erect sixteen houses on the property near East Front street and Leland avenue, which it recently purchased from George Cole, points to an early building boom in the far East End of the city. Other real estate men have been looking over the ground in that vicinity and no one need be surprised to find a series of operations underway as soon as agreeable weather conditions prevail.

However, the Berry Company plan to put up in all sixteen houses at one and the same time. The idea is to build them by twos and threes, starting each lot after the predecessor has been either sold or rented. Work on the first ones will begin about the middle of next month. The cost of the houses will approximate from $3,000 to $4,000 each.

Another point to be brought out in connection with the contemplated Berry houses, is that they will insure the First ward a much better year in the building line than it had in 1914. The total number of dwellings erected within its boundaries in the twelve months ending January, was thirty, consequently a promise of sixteen by one concern means big things for 1915.

REALTY TRANSFERS

The following realty transfers from this end of the county have recently been recorded at the office of the register at Elizabeth:

Walter F. Manning et ux. to Elizabeth Wagner, southeasterly side Stelle avenue, 1,207 feet southwesterly of Plainfield avenue, Plainfield $1

William D. Johnson et ux. to Walter S. Edge, southwesterly side Hazel avenue, 273 feet southeasterly of First street, Westfield $1

Alfred D. Hahn et ux. to Westfield Egg Farm, Springfield avenue, corner Branch Mills Sunday-school, Westfield $1

The following realty transfers from the surrounding towns have recently been recorded at the Middlesex county seat at New Brunswick:

William J. Nelson and wife have transferred to Clarence M. Haight, a 115-acre farm, adjoining land of John Manning, in Piscataway township.

Margaret M. Kolb has transferred to Clarence M. Haight, house and lot in Lincoln.

Phelan Brothers Construction Co. has transferred to Mary E. Shea ten lots in Edgerton Park, Piscataway township.

Metuchen Realty and Improvement Co. has transferred to Anna Theis two lots in Metuchen Estates, Raritan township.

Frank E. Burdick has transferred to Elberne H. Burdick a lot on northeast side of Washington avenue, Dunellen, for $600.

Carmine Valicenti and wife have transferred to Theresa Gerber house and lot in South Plainfield for $3,500.

John P. Faber has transferred to George W. Churchill, lot on the southeast side of Fourth street, Dunellen.

Jacob W. Welsh and wife have transferred to Frank Mundy, a lot on Highland avenue, Metuchen, for $600.

Lewis T. Churchill has transferred to George W. Churchill, house and lot on Washington and Front streets, Dunellen.

The Perth Amboy Trust Co. has transferred to John Hanson, three lots on the northeast corner of Hanson and Eggert avenues, Fairmount Park, Metuchen.

The Schwartz Land and Improvement Co. has transferred to Rosalie Schmidt, two lots in Plainfield terrace, Piscataway township, for $975.

HOUSE PLANS OUT.

Building operations in the East End of town, to be commenced soon, will include a house on George street for Claus Gustafson, of the borough. The plans are now in the hands of the contractors. They call for a two and a half story dwelling, with all modern improvements, and at a total cost of about $3,500. A similar house was recently completed for Mr. Gustafson on Woodland avenue.

BUILDING A BUNGALOW.

William Jeffrey is having a fine new bungalow built for himself on Plainfield avenue, Berkeley Heights. It will be about 24x32 ft. exclusive of an extension, and a story and a half in heighth. It is being built by days' work under Mr. Jeffrey's supervision and he will occupy it as soon as it is completed.

PERMITS GRANTED SHOW FALLING OFF

This Week's Expenditure Represents $2,500 as Against $6,625 Last Week.

Two garages and two alteration jobs are covered by the four construction permits issued during the current week by Inspector T. O. Doane. The permits call for the expenditure of $2,500, as against three permits and $6,625 for the preceding week. The permits of this week bring the total expenditures of the month up to $10,128. Several repair and alteration contracts for which no permits are needed have been started during the course of the past week, and a number of the building mechanics have been put to work.

Work on the excavation of the cellar for the Evergreen Avenue School, which was expected during this week, but did not materialize, is to be started the first of next week, weather conditions permitting. With this work in sight for the immediate future, the possibility of the North Plainfield Board of Education advertising for bids for the contract for the work of the Harrison Avenue School at its meeting to be held Monday evening looms up as a strong hope for local craftsmen. The permits as issued this week are as noted below:

FIRST WARD.

George Crandall is to erect a 12x16 foot frame garage in the rear of 115 Jackson avenue, at a cost of $50. The owner, who is the architect of the structure, will do the work.

SECOND WARD.

Mrs. J. R. Peterkins, of 657 Belvidere avenue, will have erected a 16x18 foot garage at the above address at a cost of $100. Ralph Bullman is the contractor.

Ernest White has been granted a permit for the erection of a 10x32 foot frame extension, one-story high, to the building at 328 East Fourth street, the addition to be used as a store. The estimated cost has been placed at $300. The owner of the building will care for the masonry work, while the contract for the carpentry work was awarded to Herman Reupert, of the borough.

A permit covering extensive alterations to his property at 143 Crescent avenue, has been granted to J. Van-Wyck DuBois. The improvements will include a two-story extension to measure 18x21, and will be of frame construction. William H. Kirch is the architect and carpenter contractor, while the mason work will be done by Joseph Brandt.

WESTFIELD DECIDES TO ANNEX TWENTY-EIGHT ACRES

The Westfield Town Council at its last regular meeting held this week, decided to secure possession of the twenty-eight acres of ground in Fanwood township and being a part of the sewer farm. At present the town pays about $50 in taxes to Fanwood on the land. Attorney Oliver and Engineer Vars were instructed by the Council to draft a bill to be sent to the Legislature, with the request that the bill be passed, thereby annexing the land to Westfield. Councilman DeCamp, who introduced the resolution, said that the land was of no value to Fanwood and should belong to Westfield as it was a part of the sewer system. The sewer farm comprises 108 acres in all.

TRADES INTERESTED IN NEW BUILDING MATERIAL

Local building trades are interested in a recent innovation introduced by a Plainfield firm to insure durability in construction work. The new feature is a plaster board which has already been used with marked results, on both interior and exterior, on a number of recently constructed houses in this city. It is made of dovetail lath imbedded in toughened Asphalt Mastic, which is surfaced with cardboard. The board is made with creosoted laths and natural wood laths, dovetail. The creosoted laths eliminate any possible chance of warping from dampness. The laths keep the surface stiff and the dovetail grip cement distributes the strain evenly. The Asphalt Mastic is moisture-proof and fire-resisting and a staunch, satisfactory background for cement. Nothing equals the new boards.

One of the best features comes in the fact that it is sound deadening and is also temperature proof. Local builders are watching with interest the outcome of the experiments now under way and the use is becoming more general every day.

WALTER J. NELSON SELLS HIS FARM

Clarence J. Haight, of Piscataway, Acquires 115 Acres of Land.

Following the sale of the old Hollywood farm at South Plainfield, last week, for development purposes, comes the announcement that the 115-acre farm of Mr. and Mrs. Walter J. Nelson, of New Market, has been sold to Clarence J. Haight, of Piscataway township, for the same purpose. The former farm contained in the vicinity of 135 acres, making a total of fully 250 acres of farm land sold in this vicinity within the course of a week for development purposes in Piscataway township.

Whether the fact that New York land speculators had been looking over a number of farms in the New Market section, including the Hilltop Farm, had anything to do with Mr. Haight's buying in this land at this particular time or not is not known, although it has been suggested a number of times within the course of the past few weeks that land which might be utilized for speculative building operations should be bought in by local people in preference to letting New Yorkers secure the land and, in turn, selling it as building lots to undesirable home site seekers.

Probably at no time in the past has the residents of the New Market section of Piscataway township taken such an active interest in the question of the real estate and building activities in that locality, not alone because of the presence of New York land dealers, but because of the fact that South Plainfield is at present looking forward to the organization of the borough form of government within the near future, thus taking considerable taxably property from the township.

MIDDLESEX BOROUGH IN ON MID-WINTER ACTIVITY

Middlesex borough, that hustling little community to the west of Plainfield, has gotten its share of the mid-winter real estate and building activity. Several deals have been announced and many more are in abeyance. The borough will soon have a new chapel added to its leading structures, ground for this having been broken on Smalley avenue the past week. The foundation is now underway and the contractors will have the chapel ready for occupancy early in the spring.

Thomas P. Kolb, who formerly conducted a confectionery business in Plainfield, but who now resides at Elmira, N. Y., has sold his two-family house on Lincoln boulevard to Clarence Haight, the Dunellen real estate man. Mrs. Moynes has purchased three lots on Union avenue, Beechwood Heights, in anticipation of having three bungalows erected as soon as the weather permits, and O. A. LaPointe has completed a six-room cottage on New Market road for Dr. Hart.

A. E. Ludovici is having a dwelling in the course of construction on Mountain avenue.

JUST NOTES

It is highly probable that the North Plainfield Board of Education will, at its meeting to be held Monday night, authorize the advertising for bids on the contracts for the work on the proposed Harrison Avenue School.

The Federal property on Watchung avenue is still vacant, and no contracts, as far as has been heard of as yet, have been let for the work on the new postoffice building. Will another election stare us in the face before the contracts are awarded?

Repairs and alterations appear to be the predominating features of the local construction world at the present time, but with contractors still hopeful of an early opening of the spring season.

The realty field appears to be picking up somewhat in both Union and Middlesex counties, with unimproved property fast coming to be at a premium. Two tracts, including 250 acres of farm land in Piscataway township would appear to indicate that times are becoming better, and that this section of the State is due to enjoy an unprecedented boom in the construction line.

A number of local men were endeavoring to have the Fulton Rubber Company, manufacturers of rubber stamps, of Elizabeth, to locate here, but evidently have failed. A little work on the part of the civic organizations along this line would be a mighty good thing for the city.

The Third ward, west of Monroe avenue and as far as Clinton avenue, is due for a building boom this season, since streets have been cut through the tract for years known as Vail's Grove.

How soon the Bosch Magneto Company will start operations on further shops for their local factory is not known, although present indications point to the erection of additional structures before the coming season is over.

ANOTHER VOTE ON SCHOOL ADDITION

South Plainfield Asks Piscataway Citizens to Sanction $12,500 Appropriation.

The Piscataway township Board of Education is again hearing from the deep-rooted agitation in the village of South Plainfield for an addition to the school building of that place, although the proposition was voted down but a short time ago. The question was brought before the Board with renewed vigor at its meeting held during the course of the past week.

The necessary land needed for the erection of the proposed addition to the present building was purchased a few months ago in anticipation of further facilities in the near future, but for some reason the addition was voted down. Citizens of South Plainfield, however, realize more than ever before the need of added facilities at the village, as the population has increased considerably during the past twelve months, due chiefly to the fact of the enlarged plant of the Spicer Manufacturing Company. Another enlargement of that plant is anticipated by the villagers during the coming season, and many residents feel that several additional rooms to those already needed will be in demand by the opening of another school year. The fact that numerous dwellings have just been completed, while others are now in the course of construction, add force to the arguments presented by the residents of the eastern end of the township for either an addition to the present schoolhouse, or an entire new building to provide for the future needs of that section.

The question as to whether the Board could rightfully take the matter up at this time has been raised. John Geary, who is well versed in the conditions as they exist at the present time, who revived the question, threatened to take the matter up with the State School Commissioners should the local Board fail to take definite steps to relieve the congested conditions. A resolution was finally adopted providing for the erection and furnishing of the addition at a cost of $12,500, and the issuance of bonds for the same. The date of the election when the citizens will vote on the matter has been designated as Wednesday, February 10.

CHAPTER XVI.

The Hanging of Cultus George.

MIDNIGHT had gone a quarter of an hour in the Annie Mine. The main room was comfortably crowded, while roaring stoves, combined with lack of ventilation, kept the big room insanitarily warm. The click of chips and the boisterous play at the craps table furnished a monotonous background of sound to the equally monotonous rumble of men's voices where they sat and stood about and talked in groups and twos and threes. Through the open door that led to the dance room came the rollicking strains of a Virginia reel played by a piano and a fiddle.

Cultus George, a big, strapping Circle City Indian, leaned distantly and dourly against the log wall. He was a civilized Indian, if living like a white man connotes civilization, and he was sorely offended, though the offense was of long standing.

For years he had done a white man's work, had done it alongside of white men and often had done it better than they did. He wore the same pants they wore, the same hearty woolens and heavy shirts. He sported as good a watch as they, parted his short hair on the side and ate the same food—bacon, beans and flour—and yet he was denied their greatest diversion and reward—namely, whisky.

Cultus George was a money earner. He had staked claims and bought and sold claims. He had been grubstaked, and he had accorded grubstakes. Just now he was a dog musher and freighter, charging 28 cents a pound for the winter haul from Sixty Mile to Mucluc, and for bacon 33 cents, as was the custom. His poke was fat with dust. He had the price of many drinks. Yet no barkeeper would serve him. Whisky, the hottest, swiftest, completest gratifier of civilization, was not for him. And he resented this invidious distinction, as he had resented it for years, deeply. And he was especially thirsty and resentful this night, while the white men he had so sedulously emulated he hated more bitterly than ever before.

The Virginia reel in the dance room wound to a wild close. "All couples promenade to the bar!" was the caller's last cry as the music stopped. And the couples were so promenading through the wide doorway into the main room—the men in furs and moccasins, the women in soft, fluffy dresses, silk stockings and dancing slippers—when the double storm doors were thrust open, and Smoke Bellew staggered wearily in.

Eyes centered on him, and silence began to fall. He tried to speak, pulled off his mittens, which fell dangling from their cords, and clawed at the frozen moisture of his breath which had formed in fifty miles of running.

Only the man at the craps table, without turning his head, continued to roll the dice and to cry: "Oh, you Joe! Come on, you Joe!" The gamekeeper's gaze, fixed on Smoke, caught the player's attention, and he, too, with suspended dice, turned and looked.

"What's up, Smoke?" Matson, the owner of the Annie Mine, demanded.

With a last effort Smoke clawed his mouth free. "I got some dogs out there—dead beat," he said huskily. "Somebody go and take care of them, and I'll tell you what's the matter."

In a dozen brief sentences he outlined the situation. The craps player, his money still lying on the table and his slippery Joe Cotton still uncaptured, had come over to Smoke and was now the first to speak.

"We gotta do something. That's straight. But what? You've had time to think. What's your plan? Spit it out!"

"Sure," Smoke assented. "We've got to hustle light sleds on the jump. Say 100 pounds of grub on each sled. The driver's outfit and dog grub will fetch it up fifty more. But they can make time. Say we start five of these sleds pronto—best running teams, best mushers and trail eaters. On the soft trail the sleds can take the lead turn about. They've got to start at once. At the best, by the time they can get there all those Indians won't have had a scrap to eat for three days.

"And then as soon as we've got those sleds off we'll have to follow up with heavy sleds. Figure it out yourself. Two pounds a day is the very least we can decently keep those Indians traveling on. That's 400 pounds a day, and, with the old people and the children, five days is the quickest time we can bring them into Mucluc. Now, what are you going to do?"

"Take up a collection to buy all the grub," said the craps player. "Fetch a washbasin, somebody. It won't take a minute. An' here's a starter."

He pulled a heavy gold sack from his pocket, untied the mouth and poured a stream of coarse dust and nuggets into the basin. A man beside him caught his hand up with a jerk and an oath, elevating the mouth of the sack so as to stop the run of the dust. To a casual eye six or eight ounces had already run into the basin.

"Don't be a hawg!" cried the second man. "You ain't the only one with a poke. Gimme a chance at it."

Men crowded and jostled for the opportunity to contribute, and when they were satisfied Smoke hefted the heavy basin with both hands and grinned.

"It will keep the whole tribe in grub for the rest of the winter," he said. "Now for the dogs. Five light teams that have some run in them."

A dozen teams were volunteered, and the camp, as a committee of the whole, bickered and debated, accepted and rejected.

As fast as a team was selected its owner, with half a dozen aids, departed to harness up and get ready.

One team was rejected because it had come in tired that afternoon. One owner contributed his team, but apologetically exposed a bandaged ankle that prevented him from driving it. This team Smoke took, overriding the objection of the crowd that he was played out.

Long Bill Haskell pointed out that, while Fat Olsen's team was a cracker jack, Fat Olsen himself was an elephant. Fat Olsen's 240 pounds of heartiness was indignant. Tears of anger came into his eyes, and his Teutonic explosions could not be stopped until he was given a place in the heavy division, the craps player jumping at the chance to take out Olsen's light team.

Five teams were accepted and were being harnessed and loaded, but only four drivers had satisfied the committee of the whole.

"There's Cultus George," some one cried. "He's a trail eater, and he's fresh and rested."

All eyes turned upon the Indian, but his face was expressionless, and he said nothing.

"You'll take a team?" Smoke said to him.

Still the big Indian made no answer. As with an electric thrill it ran through all of them that something untoward was impending. A restless shifting of the group took place, forming a circle in which Smoke and Cultus George faced each other. And Smoke realized that by common consent he had been made the representative of his fellows in what was taking place.

Also he was angered. It was beyond him that any human creature, a witness to the scramble of volunteers, should hang back. For another thing, in what followed Smoke did not have Cultus George's point of view—did not dream that the Indian held back for any reason save the selfish, mercenary one.

"Of course you will take a team," Smoke said.

"How much?" Cultus George asked.

A snarl, spontaneous and general, grated in the throats and twisted the mouths of the miners.

"Wait a bit, boys," Smoke cried. "Maybe he doesn't understand. Look here, George. Don't you see, nobody is charging anything. They're giving everything to save 200 Indians from starving to death." He paused to let it sink home.

"How much?" said Cultus George.

"Wait, you fellows! Now, listen, George. We don't want you to make any mistake. These starving people are your kind of people. They're another tribe, but they're Indians just the same. Now, you've seen what the white men are doing—coughing up their dust, giving their dogs and sleds, falling over one another to hit the trail. Only the best men can go with the first sleds. Look at Fat Olsen, there. He was ready to fight because they wouldn't let him go. You ought to be mighty proud because all men think you a No. 1 musher. It isn't a case of how much, but how quick."

"How much?" said Cultus George.

"Kill him!" "Bust his head!" "Tar and feathers!" were several of the cries in the wild medley that went up. The spirit of philanthropy and good fellowship changed to brute savagery on the instant.

In the storm center Cultus George stood imperturbable, while Smoke thrust back the fiercest and shouted:

"Wait! Who's running this?" The clamor died away. "Fetch a rope," he added quietly.

Cultus George shrugged his shoulders. He knew this white man breed. He had toiled on trail with it and eaten its flour and bacon and beans too long not to know it. It was a law abiding breed. He knew that thoroughly. It always punished the man who broke the law. But he had broken no law. He knew its law. He had lived up to it. He had neither murdered, stolen nor lied.

There was nothing in the white man's law against charging a price and driving a bargain. They all charged a price and drove bargains. He was doing nothing more than that, and it was the thing they had taught him. Besides, if he wasn't good enough to drink with them, then he was not good enough to be charitable with them nor to join them in any of their foolish diversions.

Neither Smoke nor any man there glimpsed what lay in Cultus George's brain, behind his attitude and prompting his attitude. Though they did not know it, they were as beclouded as he in the matter of mutual understanding. To them he was a selfish brute; to him they were selfish brutes.

When the rope was brought Long Bill Haskell, Fat Olsen and the craps player, with much awkwardness and angry haste, got the slipnoose around the Indian's neck and rove the rope over a rafter. At the other end a dozen men tailed on, ready to hoist away.

Nor had Cultus George resisted. He knew it for what it was—bluff. The whites were strong on bluff. Was not draw poker their favorite game. Did they not buy and sell and make all bargains with bluff? Yes; he had seen a white man do business with a look on his face of four aces and in his hand a busted straight.

"It's your last chance, George," said Smoke.

"Wait," Smoke commanded. "Tie his hands. We don't want him climbing."

More bluff, Cultus George decided, and passively permitted his hands to be tied behind his back.

"Now it's your last chance, George," said Smoke. "Will you take out the team?"

"How much?" said Cultus George.

Astounded at himself that he should be able to do such a thing and at the same time angered by the colossal selfishness of the Indian, Smoke gave the signal. Nor was Cultus George any less astounded when he felt the noose tighten with a jerk and swing him off the floor. His stolidity broke on the instant. On his face, in quick succession, appeared surprise, dismay and pain.

Smoke watched anxiously. Having never been hanged himself, he felt a tyro at the business. The body struggled convulsively, the tied hands strove to burst their bonds, and from the throat came unpleasant noises of strangulation. Smoke held up his hands.

"Slack away!" he ordered.

Grumbling at the shortness of the punishment, the men on the rope lowered Cultus George to the floor. His eyes were bulging, and he was tottery on his feet, swaying from side to side and still making a fight with his hands. Smoke divined what was the matter, thrust violent fingers between the rope and the neck and brought the noose slack with a jerk. With a great heave of the chest Cultus George got his first breath.

"Will you take that team out?" Smoke demanded.

Cultus George did not answer. He was too busy breathing.

"Oh, we white men are hogs," Smoke filled in the interval, resentful himself at the part he was compelled to play. "We'd sell our souls for gold, and all that. But once in awhile we forget about it and turn loose and do something without a thought of how much there is in it. And when we do that, Cultus George, watch out. What we want to know is, are you going to take out that team?"

Cultus George debated with himself. He was no coward. Perhaps this was the extent of their bluff, and if he gave in now he was a fool. And while he debated Smoke suffered from secret worry lest this stubborn aborigine would persist in being hanged.

"How much?" said Cultus George.

Smoke started to raise his hand for the signal.

"Me go," Cultus George said very quickly before the rope could tighten.

* * * * * * *

"An' when that rescue expedition found me," Shorty told it in the Annie Mine, "that ornery Cultus George was the first in, beatin' Smoke's sled by three hours, an', don't you forget it, Smoke comes in second at that. Just the same, it was about time, when I heard Cultus George a-yellin' at his dogs from the top of the divide, for those blamed Siwashes had ate my moccasins, my mitts, the leather lacin's, my knife sheath an' some of 'em was beginnin' to look mighty hungry at me—me bein' better nourished, you see.

"An' Smoke? He was near dead. He hustled around awhile, helpin' to start a meal for them 200 sufferin' Siwashes, an' then he fell asleep, sittin' on his haunches, thinkin' he was feedin' snow into a thawin' pail. I fixed him my bed, an' dang me if I didn't have to help him into it, he was that give out.

"Sure I win the toothpicks. Didn't them dogs just naturally need the six salmon Smoke fed 'em at the noonin'?"

ANTI-SUFFRAGE

Conducted by Plainfield Branch New Jersey Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage.

QUESTIONS TO SUFFRAGISTS.

As the census report on occupations issued June 20th, 1914, shows only 8,075,772 feminine workers over ten years of age in the United States, why do Suffragists claim that "eight million women workers demand the ballot?"

The National American Woman Suffrage Association claimed a membership of "about 650,000" in June, 1914. The Congressional Union for Woman Suffrage, the National's rival, claimed 4,000 members about the same time. This makes 65,000 Suffragists in America, which is less than one-twelfth the 8,000,000 feminine workers, less than one-half the total number of women enfranchised in the nine full Suffrage States (1,998,163 according to the census), and only 2-7 per cent. of the women over 21 in America. Why have 97 women out of 100 rejected woman suffrage for 65 years, and why do less than one-twelfth the women workers believe in "votes for women?"

Since the census figures show 4,338,337 of the feminine workers are employed in agricultural pursuits and domestic service—on farms and in homes—and that of the 24,555,754 women over 21 in America, 20,518,533 are, or have been, married, and are obviously "making homes" for the 20,255,555 families who live in the 17,805,845 dwelling in the United States, how do you prove that "woman's work has gone out of the home and into store, factory and shop?"

Woman Suffrage, you claim, will bring better labor conditions. Colorado has had Woman Suffrage for 21 years. Why, then, is Colorado the only State in the Union that has called for Federal aid in suppressing anarchy and riot twice in ten years—in 1904 and 1914?

Woman Suffrage will do away with child labor, you assert. Above mentioned census report (pp. 73, 442 and 512) shows the same percentage of children from ten to thirteen at work in Colorado as in Pennsylvania. But in Colorado the highest number of such children work out as farm laborers, whereas in Pennsylvania the highest number are employed on the home farm. Nearly twice as many children work out on farms in Colorado as are employed by their own parents. In Pennsylvania the situation is so reversed that nearly three times as many children work for their own parents as for others. Does "votes for women" force more children to leave home and work for others?

Woman Suffrage will bring "economic independence," your declare. Why, then, does the census show three times as many women laborers on farms in Colorado and Wyoming, after 21 and 45 years of woman suffrage, as are similarly employed in Nebraska and Nevada, where women do not vote? Why, too, are there over eight times as many independent women farmers in the two male suffrage States as in the two States where they have votes? These are all neighboring States of equal density of population.

If votes will raise wages, as suffrage agitators promise women workers, why do men in the same industries depend on labor unions rather then on votes to get higher pay?

If Woman Suffrage will help the woman worker, explain the following testimony, after three years of suffrage in California, before the Federal Industrial Relations Commission, at Los Angeles, September 10, 1914. Mrs. Katherine P. Edson, member of the California Industrial Welfare Commission, declared:

"No doubt a large part of our social trouble, such as the children in the street, is due to men working for an inadequate wage and women being forced to go out to work. It seems to me a hopeless situation. My opinion is that there are more women working outside their homes here than there should be. Some large dry goods stores, I understand, are contemplating refusing to employ married women because of the numerous complaints from unmarried women workers."

Why does a woman call the condition of labor "hopeless" where women vote?

Various department stores in Philadelphia allow their employes all day off Saturdays during the summer. Where have women secured Saturday holidays with "a piece of paper in a ballot box?"

Woman Suffrage will rout rum, you allege. Then why has no State ever gone "dry" with "votes for women," until the last election, although eleven have done so by the moral influence of women on the votes of men only.

Where were the women voters of Colorado on November 5, 1912, when that State defeated prohibition by a majority of 40,897 votes, 11,6774 ballots being cast for the saloons? As there are 213,425 women over 21 in Colorado (p. 118, Census Abstract), it would have taken only 58 per cent. of them to make the State 'dry' by a majority of 6,012, without a single male vote to help them. Does this not prove that most of the women who will vote are against the very temperance that all women desire and have secured under male suffrage?

Wyoming got Woman Suffrage in 1869. It has remained the forty-seventh Commonwealth in the Union to this day, according to the census. If women seek "emancipation," why has the colonization of Wyoming been so sadly neglected for 45 years, and why are there only 100 women to every 168 men in that State, which is the second lowest proportiante feminine population in the United States. Why women avoid Wyoming wants explanation.

Suffragists say women should vote because they pay taxes. On this plea the foreign corporation or individual or non-resident who pays taxes should vote. The majority of the women are not tax-payers, however, and their addition to the electorate would only increase the number of voters who do not pay taxes. Do Suffragists advocate further extension of irresponsibility?

Suffragists are indorsed by all the unstable elements in our population, the Socialists, the I. W. W. and the Feminists. Do Suffragists, in turn, indorse socialism, sabotage and communism? If not, why do they accept the support of Socialists and Feminists and run standing appeals for such support by officially advertising for it in revolutionary magazines given over to the defense of convicted rioters and the glorification of masculine and feminine rebellion? (See a copy of the Masses.) Note standing advertisement of National American Woman Suffrage Association.

If women are competent to vote on every question, why not allow them to vote on their own enfranchisement?

In view of the fact that Woman Suffrage proposes another duty to women, an unnecessary duty, inconsistant with her highest natural duties and functions, and, furthermore, involves great risk and additional expense to the State, we have a right to ask what it can do to improve civic conditions, and where it has done so. If Suffragists cannot prove "votes for women" are worth while, how can they show any reason why Woman Suffrage should not be rejected?

An electorate, like a standing army, is a governmental instrument to carry out the will of the people. Its extension can only be advocated as a necessity or a service to the common good. Where and when have women proved their supreme moral influence as the mothers, wives, daughters, sisters and teachers of men as "inferior" to the ballots and bullets that men must sometimes use? What reason can Suffragists give for asking women to use the weapons of men in a vain attempt to exercise political power, when the wishes of women and the wisdom of centuries teach us to rely on the moral might that women wield in the church, the school and the home, where our citizens are made and molded—by women?

TENTH ANNUAL DINNER OF PEDDIE ASSOCIATION

The tenth annual dinner of the Peddie New York Alumni Association will be held at the Sherman Square Hotel, Broadway and Seventh-first street, New York, Friday evening, February 5, at 7 o'clock. There will be a reunion of the old teachers, including Miss Vose and Dr. Perrine, Dr. Perry, Prof. Slaught, Dr. Hundley, Prof, Nelson Greene and many others. Headmaster Swetland will also be present to represent the faculty and the double quartet of Peddie boys will sing old songs.

Many Plainfielders who attended Peddie Institute will be among the guests. The officers of the association are: President, Mrs. Marianne Rood Huff, '97; vice-presidents, Henry C. Havens, '88, and Dr. Theron J. Vosburg, '04; secretary-treasurer, T. Elliott Tolson, '02.

Animal Jingles FOR LITTLE FOLKS

BY ALICE CREW GALL

Archibald Whale

(Who Had Too Much Curiosity.)

Did your mother ever tell you of the big Atlantic ocean?
It's very interesting and you'd like it, I've a notion.

Such lots and lots of water, such heaps and heaps of sand,
And when you sit upon the shore the dashing waves are grand.

Down in the very bottom of this very watery sea
A nice young whale named Archibald lived with his familee.

And every morning, rain or shine, he'd go out for a swim.
Why, really, five miles or so was nothing much for him.

And every day his mother said, "Be careful, Arch," said she;
For Archie had one dreadful fault, 'twas curiositee.

He always asked the reason why and liked to poke about,
And just why everything was so he always WOULD find out.

The father whale would shake his head and very sadly say:
"My son, you're curiosity will be your death some day."

But Archibald would flirt his fin and gayly swim away,
And never pay the slightest heed to what his folks would say.

Then once when he was swimming and came up to get the air,
He said, "Why, there's a great big ship a-coming, I declare!

I wonder what it's going to do, and where it's going to go,
And what those men have in their hands; I'd really like to know."

So took a great big breath of air and boldly swam ahead,
Remembering not a word his parents dear had said.

The ship came at a mighty rate and Arch discovered soon
That what the men were holding was a dreadful big harpoon.

A big harpoon, I will explain, looks something like a spike.
(I draw a picture of it here to show you what it's like.)

The sailor men saw Archie, though he tried to get away,
And threw the harpoon at him, I greatly grieve to say.

The big harpoon whirled through the air and landed right ker-smack
Smb in the very middle of young Archibald's whale back.

I wish I needn't make so sad an ending to this tale,
But truth compels me to admit, that finished Archie Whale.

It's right to ask questions, but please do not fail, though you're only a little land-lubber,
To recall the sad ending of Archibald Whale, who was caught and made into blubber.

Household Hints

PREPARING SUNDAY MEALS

Make the corn meal mush on Saturday morning; some can be used as a hasty pudding for Saturday's luncheon. The clear soup is prepared. The beef olives are got ready to bread, the celery cleaned and washed, the rice boiled for Sunday super, the aspic made, cheese grated and tea cakes made. The orange puffs and tea cakes can be made at the same time, using the one oven for both; the lettuce cleaned, washed and put in a paper bag ready for use next day.

Oxtail Soup—One oxtail cut in pieces, one-half cup cut onion, one-half cup finely cut carrot, one-half cup diced potatoes, one tablespoon salt, one-quarter teaspoon white pepper, dash paprika, one tablespoon finely cut parsley and a little thyme if you like the flavor, one tablespoon caramel. Chop oxtail at each joint, making pieces from one to two inches long; wash well in two or three waters; put on to boil with 2½ quarts cold water and boil slowly one hour; then add the onion, carrot, salt and pepper and boil 20 minutes. Remove four cups stock for Sunday's soup; strain through fine strainer or cheesecloth, then add potatoes and boil 25 minutes; add paprika, parsley and caramel; serve with the pieces of oxtail. This makes a very nutritious and cheap soup; when having it you need no meat.

Orange Puffs—One cup milk, one egg, one cup flour, one-half teaspoon melted butter, four tablespoons sugar, one teaspoon baking powder, one-quarter teaspoon salt. Sift flour, baking powder and salt into bowl, add milk, well-beaten egg, sugar and melted butter and mix well. Brush six custard cups with a little butter, divide the batter into the six cups; put in hot oven 20 to 25 minutes; remove and turn out in deep glass bowl or in individual sauce dishes and pour over it orange sauce.

Orange Sauce—Put 1½ cups water on to boil, add three tablespoons sugar, pinch of salt and one tablespoon cornstarch wet with a little cold water; boil three minutes; remove from the fire and add a little grated rind and the juice of one orange (about one-third cup), and one teaspoon lemon juice. Beat until smooth. These are best warm, both sauce and puffs.

Beef Olives—One pound round steak cut thin, one tablespoon onion juice, one teaspoon salt, one-eighth teaspoon white pepper, two tablespoons chopped parsley, one-half cup bread crumbs, one egg. Brush meat with onion juice, dust with salt and pepper, sprinkle with parsley. Cut slice about two inches wide and four inches long. Roll and pin with skewer; they will be about two inches long and 1½ inches thick; then dust with a little flour, dip in the egg, which has been beaten with one tablespoon milk, roll in bread crumbs and fry in deep fat. Put in center of platter, put the mashed potatoes around and place in oven until the potatoes are brown. A cream sauce served with the beef olives adds much to them or you can have a can of peas for garnish; sprinkle with chopped parsley.

THE TABLE

Soup for Two—This recipe can be enlarged accordingly. One medium-sized onion sliced very fine into a frying pan with a tablespoon of melted butter; let get hot, put on onion and fry quite brown, stirring often for five minutes, then divide equally in soup bowls. Pour in pan boiling water enough for each and season to taste. This has been given to sick people who couldn't eat a hearty soup, with good results. More onion can be used if liked.

Meat Pudding—Take five cups of flour, half teaspoon salt, one large cup finely chopped suet; mix like pie paste. Have a clean cloth and spread in a bowl. Roll out rather more than half of paste about an inch thick and spread on cloth. Now take about 1½ pounds of any good beef, cut in small pieces, flour and season to taste with pepper or salt; put on paste, pour on a half cup of cold water, roll the remaining paste and cover, pinching the edge so as to keep in all the gravy, tie up securely and cook in boiling water 2½ hours. When done dish up; take from cloth and open a little "lid" to put half cup more water in for gravy. This is very nice next day fried like mush and is very satisfying for a working man.

Adventures in Matrimony

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

"Why all this excitement?" asked Nell, opening the hall door for Dick Morton to enter. "When I saw you coming up the steps three at a time, I thought perhaps some nice old codger had died and left you some money."

Dick laughed, caught her in his arms and executed a few tango steps as an outlet to his joy before he said:

"No one left me any money, but I have an idea in my head."

"Oh, no wonder you are excited," she mocked.

He pinched her ear and said: "Nell, get your things on. I have something I want to show you. It won't take long."

"Why, it's nearly dinner time. Can't you nail your idea until after dinner? I was about to ask you to dine with us," she replied.

He pulled out his watch. "Your clock is fast. We have three-quarters of an hour and that's time enough for what I want to show you. Go get your things on, and I'll explain to your mother. Is she in the kitchen?"

"Yes, go right out there; she won't care. You are privileged, you know," and she ran upstairs.

"Right back of my lot a young couple have built the cleverest little bungalow you ever saw," he began as soon as they were on the street. "It's small. There's a beautiful great living room with a stone fireplace, a kitchenette, a couple of bedrooms and a bathroom."

"You don't mean to say that's all the house there is?" she asked in amazement.

"Yes. Just wait till you see it! It's like a doll's house, and is lovely in color and lines. The kitchen could be used as a dining room, when we were alone. I'd have a table or wide shelf hinged against the wall so it could be let down when out of use," he went on enthusiastically.

"Just what is your idea, Dick? You are going on at such speed that I am out of it," she interrupted.

"Just this, that we build such a bungalow on our lot. It's all paid for, you know, and marry right away," he answered.

"Why, Richard, we have no money to build with. How can we marry, poor as we are?" and she gazed reproachfully at him.

"We could borrow the money at 6 per cent on our lot and have the thing all paid for in two or three years.

"There's the bungalow I told you of. Isn't it a beauty?" he asked.

"That is lovely! I like the soft gray cement and dull red roof, and the porch and pergola are perfect," she said, beginning to enthuse.

"We will go through it. It's not locked. They are just putting in the woodwork," he continued. "Now, is this not room enough for us two? The housework in this little place would be a snap. What do you think of my plan, Nell?"

"Do you think we dare risk it, with no reserve in the bank?" she questioned.

"I carry life insurance and would take out an accident and sickness policy. We would have no rent, just our living expenses and payments and interest on the house. Nell, we don't want to wait all through our youth. If you are willing to begin small like that, cut out a trip and an elaborate trousseau, we can be married as soon as we can get the house up. What do you say, little girl?" he pleaded.

After a moment of silence, she said: "Come home to dinner, and lay the plan before father and mother. If they approve, I am willing."

"Will you help me persuade them?" he asked.

"Yes," she promised.

He Is Offering Wonderful Bargains

EASY TO DARKEN YOUR GRAY HAIR

You Can Bring Back Color and Lustre With Sage Tea and Sulphur.

When you darken your hair with Sage Tea and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it's done so naturally, so evenly. Preparing this mixture though, at home is mussy and troublesome. For 50 cents you can buy at any drug store the ready-to-use tonic called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy." You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning all gray hair disappears and, after another application or two your hair becomes beautifully darkened, glossy and luxuriant. You will also discover dandruff is gone and hair has stopped falling.

Gray, faded hair, though no disgrace, is a sign of old age, and as we all desire a youthful and attractive appearance, get busy at once with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur and look years younger.—Adv.

RECIPE TO CLEAR A PIMPLY SKIN

Pimples Are Impurities Seeking an Outlet Through Skin Pores.

Pimples, sores and boils usually result from toxins, poisons and impurities which are generated in the bowels and then absorbed into the blood through the very ducts which should absorb only nourishment to sustain the body.

It is the function of the kidneys to filter impurities from the blood and cast them out in the form of urine, but in many instances the bowels create more toxins and impurities than the kidneys can eliminate, then the blood uses the skin pores as the next best means of getting rid of these impurities which often break out all over the skin in the form of pimples.

The surest way to clear the skin of these eruptions, says a noted authority, is to get from any pharmacy about four ounces of Jad Salts and take a tablespoonful in a glass of hot water each morning before breakfast for one week. This will prevent the formation of toxins in the bowels. It also stimulates the kidneys to normal activity, thus coaxing them to filter the blood of impurities and clearing the skin of pimples.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia. Here you have a pleasant, effervescent drink which usually makes pimples disappear; cleanses the blood and is excellent for the kidneys as well.—Adv.

A SLAVE TO CUSTOM

It is the most natural thing in the world for a man of property to name his friend or a business associate executor of his will and even trustee of his estate. This has been done for generations, in the absence of better facilities. The habit still continues after the need for it has completely disappeared.

DISCLAIMS THERE IS A SIMILARITY

Rev. Dr. C. E. Herring Says That Mormonism is Not Akin to Judaism.

MAKES A COMPARISON

Preacher Declares That One Has But to Read the Books of the Mormons to Discover Their Faith and Its Difference From Others.

Rev. Dr. Charles E. Herring in his discourse at the First Presbyterian church, last night, answered the statement made a week ago in a public lecture in this city that "Mormonism is Akin to Judaism," in which he declared that he failed to understand just where is to be found this similarity. Dr. Herring said in part:

"In a report given of an address last Sunday night, in one of the halls of the city, Mormonism received high praise and was spoken of as akin to Judaism. I fail to understand just where is to be found this wonderful similarity. In the Brooklyn Eagle a few years ago, it was said that we should find no fault with Mormonism for Mormons were Christians and pretty good sort of Christians. These statements are very remarkable. One has but to read the books of the Mormon people and the sermons of the various apostles of the church to discover just what this faith is.

"The first article of the Mormon creed is: 'We believe in God the eternal Father and in Jesus Christ, and in the Holy Ghost.' The God a Mormon believes is not the God of the Jews whose name is so sacred, that they will not pronounce it, but use the word Adonoi instead. The Mormon believes that Adam is their God, their Father, and the only God with whom they have to do. God is but an exalted man, who is continually becoming more perfect and this deity is a polygamist whose wisdom inspires him to multiply his species. Brigham Young declared that God was the father of Jesus Christ as I am the father of my son. Apostle Kimball declared that our Father and our God is a lively, sociable, cheerful man; in fact He is one of the liveliest men that ever lived. Mormonism has no exalted idea of woman. Man is woman's god. If the husband does not please to call his wife from the dead, she has no resurrection.

"The power of the Mormon priesthood over the mind and conscience of the people is revealed in the words of President Woodruff: 'If the prophet of God should tell me that a certain theory or principle which I might have learned was not true, I do not care what my ideas might have been, I should consider it my duty at the suggestion of my file leader to abandon that theory or principle.'

"In September, 1900, President Woodruff declared that he had received a revelation from heaven regarding plural marriages. It is often thought that the doctrine of plural marriage was repudiated in his manifesto, but that is not true. There was merely a suspension of the practice for the time being. The words of President Woodruff are: 'My advice to the Latter Day Saints is to refrain from contracting any marriage forbidden by the law of the land.'

"This was only temporary and for a purpose. Celestial or Plural marriage is a radical and unchangeable part of their teaching. It is eternal. Mormonism has a political ambition. One of its bishops, Bishop Lunt, said: 'We look forward with perfect confidence to the day when we will hold the reins of the United States government. This is our present temperal aim. After that we expect to control the continent.'

"Jewish people and Christian people need to have correct views of their own faith and also of other forms of faith that are said to be like their's and then they will see that these other religions are simply wolves in sheep's clothing."

DR. MOORE TO LECTURE.

Dr. Frank Moore, head of the New Jersey Reformatory, at Rahway, will give an illustrated lecture, under the auspices of the Men's Club of the Crescent Avenue church, tomorrow night at 8 o'clock, the subject being "What New Jersey is Doing for the Young Men Who Break Her Laws." The women of the congregation are cordially invited to be the guests of the club. Refreshments will be served.

Notice.

All members of Plainfield Lodge, B. P. O. E., No. 885, are requested to meet in the lodge room at 7:30 sharp tonight to attend the funeral of our late brother, John Dent, the service taking place at his home, 412 East Fifth street, at 8 o'clock.

JOHN DENT DIES, AGED 65 YEARS

Popular Steward of Elks' Clubhouse Succumbs to Long Illness.

John W. Dent, aged 65 years, for the past 9 years steward of the clubhouse of Plainfield Lodge, No. 885, B. P. O. E., died Saturday night, at Muhlenberg Hospital, where he had been for a week under treatment for stomach trouble, with which he had been afflicted for some time. Soon after his removal to the hospital he failed rapidly.

Mr. Dent was a native of Catawissa, Pa. For many years he was employed by the New Jersey Central, at one time being located at Bound Brook. Later he successfully conducted a hotel at New Market, of which Rudolph Kampf is now the proprietor. After disposing of that business Mr. Dent came to Plainfield and became steward of the Elks club house. He was extremely popular with all the members and he enjoyed a wide acquaintance of friends throughout Elkdom. He possessed a genial disposition and had a faculty for making friends. In his death the Elks have suffered a severe loss.

There survives a wife, three daughters, Mrs. Irene Brodhead and Miss Laura Dent, of this city; Mrs. Edith Jenkins, of Bloomfield; one son, Samuel Dent, of Philadelphia, and two brothers, Albert Dent, of Auburn, N. Y., and Frank Dent, of Catawissa, Pa.

The funeral will be held at the late home on East Fifth street at 8 o'clock tonight. Rev. Frank Fletcher will officiate. Members of Plainfield Lodge, No. 885, B. P. O. E., and the Gesang and Turn Verein, of which Mr. Dent was also a member, will attend the service. The burial will be at Catawissa.

ICE CARNIVAL FOR MOUNTAIN WHITES

Pine Mountain Association Planning a Novel Outdoor Affair.

It will be good skating soon if there is anything in the wishes of the forty or fifty young women of this city and borough who make up the Pine Mountain Association. This group, of which Miss Margaret McCutchen is the moving spirit, is pledged to lend its support to a school in Kentucky for "Mountain Whites." Last year they secured the funds by acting an original sketch, "The Scarborough Spoon," which dramatized the eagerness of the mountaineers for education.

This year they have made elaborate preparations for an out of door benefit in the form of an ice carnival, perhaps the first ever attempted in this locality. Everything is ready now except the ice. When the next cold snap puts a skating surface on Hyde's Pond "the ball will go up" and the Pine Mountain Association will bill its attractions.

The committee in charge are Miss Helen Hyde, chairman; Miss Eva Browne, Miss Helen Joy, Miss Elizabeth McGee, Miss Mary Runkle, Miss Margaret Buttfield, Mrs. Allan Cowperthwaite, Mrs. Francis de L. Hyde, Miss Margaret Townsend, Miss Lillian King, Miss Dorothy Burke.

COUNCIL MAY SETTLE CLERKSHIP MATTER TONIGHT

The Common Council will hold an adjourned meeting tonight when it is possible that the city clerkship matter may be settled. As it now stands it is up to Mr. MacMurray to either withdraw his resignation or allow it to be accepted by the Council. At the last meeting the Council adopted a resolution requesting the clerk to withdraw his resignation and since then nothing has been heard from Mr. MacMurray on the subject. The councilmen are anxious to adjust differences so that there may be no further trouble.

The Council will probably consider the liquor licenses tonight, although it is not expected that any action will be taken until the regular February meeting. There is a strong feeling that the Council intends to grant an additional wholesale license this year but which application is likely to be successful is not known at present.

ANNUAL MEETING TONIGHT.

The annual meeting of the officers and teachers of Trinity Reformed church Bible School, will be held at 8 o'clock tonight in the church, when there will be the reading of the annual reports of the secretary and treasurer and other business of importance to be discussed.

CONSECRATION OF BISHOP MATTHEWS

Seven Bishops Officiate at Ceremony in St. Mary's Church at Burlington.

IMPRESSIVE SERVICES

Large Gathering of Church Dignataries, City, County and State Officials—Suffragan Bishop to be Chosen at Newark Tomorrow.

The Very Reverend Paul Clement Matthews, dean of the Cathedral of Our Merciful Saviour, Fairbault, Minn., was consecrated as bishop of the Diocese of New Jersey, in St Mary's church, Burlington, at 11 o'clock this morning in the presence of a large and distinguished assemblage of church dignitaries, city, county and State officials. The services were conducted by seven bishops and were unusually impressive. Those present from this city include Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, of Grace church; Rev. C. H. Mallery, of the Church of the Heavenly Rest; Rev. Henry Mesier, of St. Stephen's church, and Rev. C. H. Kues, of the Holy Cross church, in addition to other members of these parishes.

This was one of the two most important events in the history of the Diocese of New Jersey, the other being the election of a suffragan bishop as assistant to Bishop Edwin S. Lines.

Bishop-elect Matthews, who is the successor of the late Bishop John Scarborough, and fifth bishop of the New Jersey Diocese, was consecrated on the feast of the conversion of St Paul. The venerable church, which dates back to 1703, and of which Rev. Charles Smith Lewis is at pres

PNEUMONIA FATAL TO CHARLES L. BROWNELL

Veteran Employe of Pond Tool Works Passed Away Yesterday.

Charles L. Brownell, aged 52 years, a well-known resident of this city, died at his home, 506 West Front street, yesterday, following a short illness with typhoid-pneumonia. He was first taken last Wednesday night, when he returned home from work and failed rapidly despite prompt medical attention. Mr. Brownell was born near Warren, Mass. Before coming here he was employed by the Pond Machine Tool Works, then located at Worcester, Mass., and when the company removed its plant to this city in 1888, Mr. Brownell continued with the company, holding a responsible position in the machine shop.

Mr. Brownell was an active member of All Souls' Unitarian church, this city, and a faithful attendent at the services. He never took any actice part in city affairs and never held office, being greatly devoted to his home and family. There survives a wife and one son, Harold Brownell, and Mrs. Frances E. Bemis, mother of Mrs. Brownell, all of whom lived together.

The funeral will be held tomorrow night at 7:45 o'clock at the late home. Rev. John Baltzly, minister of the Unitarian church, will officiate. The burial will be at Warren, Mass.

BROTHERS CHARGED WITH MURDER IN COUNTY COURT

Elizabeth, Jan. 25—Alleged to have caused the death of Lorenz Degass at Roselle several months ago, William and Arthur Burnett, brothers, of Roselle, were arraigned in the Union county court, this morning, and entered a plea of not guilty to charges of manslaughter.

They were held in $1,500 bail for trial. Degass and the Burnett brothers are said to have engaged in a fight at the latter's home and Degass died three days later.

$10 FOR BELGIAN RELIEF.

Acknowledgement with thanks is hereby made of a contribution of ten dollars sent to Mrs. Wallace for the Plainfield Belgian Relief Fund, with the accompanying note: "Kindly add the enclosed to the fund for the best condensed milk for the Belgians. (Signed) M. S."

WOMEN'S COMMITTEE MET.

Members of the women's committee in charge of the preparations for the indoor carnival of the Knights of Columbus to be held during the week of February 6, met yesterday afternoon, and formulated plans for several new features.

DEDICATION PROGRAM HAS MANY SPEAKERS

Several Noted Educators to Talk at the Planifield High School Tonight.

Formal dedication exercises of the Plainfield High School will be held in the institution tonight, an appropriate program having been arranged for the occasion. President William B. Tyler, of the Board of Education, will preside at the exercises and the High School orchestra, under the direction of Miss J. C. Evans, will render a program of instrumental selections.

Before and after the exercises in the auditorium opportunity will be given the visitors to inspect the building, students of the upper classes being on the reception committee. Although the new addition has been in use by the student body since last September this is the initial opportunity the public has had to view the numerous advantages the new structure has to offer.

If the steady demand for tickets may be taken as a criterion, the exercises will be largely attended. The building will be opened promptly at 7:30. Calvin N. Kendall, Commissioner of Education in New Jersey, will be the principal speaker. The invocation will be delivered by Rev. Dr. Philip B. Strong, and speeches will be made by Mr. Tyler, Superintendent Maxson, Mayor Calkins, William D. Murray and Mr. Kendall.

ANNUAL BANQUET OF ZEEK BAKING COMPANY

Thirty-five Employes Enjoy the Hospitality of Popular Concern.

The second annual banquet of the Zeek Baking Company was held Saturday night at the company's plant on South avenue, when the thirty-five employes were entertained in a delightful way by the concern. The bakery was attractively decorated with American flags, bunting and flowers, while the long table at which were seated the heads of the company and their employes, was also decorated appropriately.

James MacKenzie was the excellent toastmaster, and after he made a few well chosen remarks, he introduced other speakers of the evening, which included Ernest Zeek, who told of the growth of the company's business during the past year and of the prospects for even greater things this year. He also emphasized the commendable co-operation and harmony existing between employes and the company.

Louis Zeek extended all the guests a hearty welcome and also spoke of the earnest and faithful work of the employes in the interest of the company. Mr. MacKenzie then, on behalf of the employes, presented the company with a handsome clock to be placed in the bakery, and in return each employe present received a pearl handled pocketknife from the company.

Other features during the evening included the singing of popular songs by the glee club and instrumental numbers by a five-piece stringed orchestra made up of employes. The music was greatly enjoyed. There was a prize contest during which seven prizes were awarded. William Forshay, the oldest employe of the company, entertained and interested all present with a reminiscent talk in which he recalled many things during the early days of the baking business. It was late when the festivities came to an end and all agreed that the affair was the best yet and the heads of the company were heartily thanked for the excellent dinner and other good things provided for the entertainment of the employes.

DATE FOR RITZO HEARING.

Elizabeth, Jan. 25—Carman Ritzo, a Plainfield Italian, who has been indicted on several different counts by the Union County Grand Jury, will be given a hearing January 28, according to an announcement made this morning. He was arrested by Sergeant Higgins on a serious charge and several other allegations have since developed.

CASE POSTPONED.

Meyer Mechanik, driver of the taxicab that struck Stephen Wycoski, Friday night, was arraigned before Judge DeMeza in the city court this morning, to determine the responsibility for the accident, but an adjournment to tomorrow morning was granted by the court.

RASORES TO MEET.

The Rasores will meet tomorrow morning with Mrs. Milliken, of Central avenue.

$10,000 FIRE IN ADELBERG STORE

Blaze Starting in the Cellar Causes Big Water Loss in Clothing Department.

THREE ALARMS SENT IN

All City Departments Called to the Scene—Firemen Do Good Work Under Handicaps—Children Rescued—Ten Per Cent. Insurance.

One of the most disastrous fires that has occurred here in several years completely gutted the clothing store of Hyman Adelberg, on East Front street, shortly after 11 o'clock Saturday night, doing damage estimated by Fire Chief Doane to reach $10,000, but which the owner says will reach a far greater amount. The entire fire fighting force of the city, including apparatus from all four houses, was summoned, and the firemen did excellent work under the greatest of difficulties. The original alarm of fire was sent in by telephone. This was followed closely by a call from box No. 12 and the third call from the latter box brought the city's entire corps.

When Chief Doane and the force from headquarters arrived at the scene the entire brick building appeared to be a raging furnace. Clouds of dense black smoke were issuing from all parts, the big four-storied structure being enveloped in the blanket of smoke. Six lines of hose were turned into the heart of the flames, which seemed to be located in the cellar.

The extreme cold and choking smoke greatly handicapped the firemen in their work and for three-

EXECUTIVE MEETING FOR STATE MOTHERS

Guests of Mrs. William M. Sandford and Mrs. Stephen H. Voorhees.

An executive meeting of the board of managers of the New Jersey Mothers' Congress was held at the home of Mrs. William M. Sandford, of East Seventh street, Saturday, Mrs. Sandford and Mrs. Stephen H. Voorhees acting as hostesses for the members. Nine members were present and some encouraging reports concerning the various departments of work were made by those in charge.

The representatives came from several different sections of the State, the reports being indicative of the wide scope which is affected by the Congress work. Among the various phases of child welfare discussed were hygiene, literature, labor and parent-teacher organization.

Those present were: Mrs. William Downs, of East Orange; Mrs. J. H. Welling, of Trenton; Mrs. Robert H. Dodd, of Montclair; Mrs. Drury Cooper, of New Brunswick; Mrs. Theodore Borman, of Upper Montclair; Mrs. J. P. Hollies, of Trenton; Mrs. Miller, of Princeton; Miss Ethel Nickerson, of Sea Isle, and Mrs. Sandford and Mrs. Voorhees. In the absence of the president, Mrs. Wellington Bechtel, of Haddonfield, Mrs. Downs, of East Orange, presided.

Following the meeting Mrs. Voorhees and Mrs. Sandford served a luncheon.

REMAINS OF LOCAL SOLDIER ARRIVED HERE THIS MORNING

The remains of Stonewall J. Coles, late member of Company C, Twenty-fifth U. S. Infantry, who died at Schofield Barracks, Hawaii, December 21 last, reached Plainfield this morning.

The funeral had been announced to take place yesterday, but owing to the unavoidable delay in the removal of the remains from the National cemetery at San Francisco, Cal., the funeral services will be held tomorrow at 3 o'clock, at Mt. Olive Baptist church. Burial will be made in Hillside cemetery.

BREMMER ARRAIGNED.

Edward Bremmer, owner of the team of horses that ran away on Park avenue, last week, doing considerable damage to an automobile owned by the Thompson Auto Company, was arraigned before Judge DeMeza in the city court this morning, to answer to a charge of violating a city ordinance in not tying his horses. Mr. Thompson is making efforts to collect $135, the amount of damage he claims was done to the auto. Hearing in the case was postponed until tomorrow morning.

BADLY HURT WHEN STRUCK BY TAXICAB

George Gaskell Remains in a State of Coma at Muhlenberg Hospital.

As the result of being hit by an automobile at Park avenue and West Sixth street, Saturday night, George Gaskell, home unknown, lies in an unconscious condition at Muhlenberg Hospital with critical injuries. While driving his machine in a southerly direction after 6 o'clock, John Currin, an employe of Harry Huff, the local taxi-cab operator, struck an object near the right hand curb and hurled it a number of feet. His view was completely hidden by a low hanging fog and mist and he at once stopped his car to see what he had struck.

Investigation revealed the body of a man lying at the side of the road and Currin immediately gave the alarm. The victim, who later proved to be Gaskell, was removed to the hospital where it was found that he had sustained concussion of the brain and a badly cut and bruised head.

According to Currin he tooted his horn as he approached the juncture of the two streets and Gaskell stepped directly in front of the machine without the slightest warning. Chief Kiely is investigating the case and Currin has been arrested under a technical charge. He was held in $200 baid for hearing tomorrow morning.

Efforts to locate relatives of the victim have proved futile. It is rumored that he has a wife and four children and a numbr of persons claim acquaintance with him, but no one seems to be able to tell where he lived and where his relatives are. He was formerly employed in the lunch room at the Dunellen car-barns but is a tailor by trade.

GEORGE H. DALLEY DIES IN 74TH YEAR

Venerable Citizen Passes Away at His Home in the Borough.

George H. Dalley, aged 74 years, a well known resident of North Plainfield, died at his home on Mountain avenue, Saturday night, following a lingering illness. He had lived in the borough during the past eight years and had a wide acquaintance. Mr. Dalley was born at Whitehouse, Hunterdon county, where he spent most of his life. For many years he was a miller carrying on an extensive business.

He was a member and official of the Methodist church of Whitehouse and for forty years was superintendent of the Sunday-school. After removing to the borough he identified himself with Grace M. E. church, where he was a member of the official board and interested in all the activities of the church. He was a devout Christian and highly regarded by all who knew him. His death is deeply regretted by many relatives and friends.

Mr. Dalley is survived by his wife, one daughter, Miss Edith Dalley, who was graduated from the North Plainfield High School last June; two sisters, Mrs. Kate Hagaman, of Somerville, and Mrs. Van Nevius, of Clover Hill, and two brothers, Julius Dalley and William Dalley, of Whitehouse. The funeral will be held at the Methodist church, Whitehouse, Wednesday morning at 10:30 o'clock, and the burial will be at that place.

COST HIM $20 FOR TROUBLE HE GAVE POLICE AT A FIRE

For making a general nuisance of himself at the Adelberg fire on East Front street, Saturday night, Edward Manning, of the West End, was fined $20, with the option of spending forty days in the county jail by Judge DeMeza in the city court, this morning. Manning, together with Albert Hansen, were standing inside the fire lines, according to the police, and when Roundsman Saffron attempted to put them out they both put up a fight.

Manning was taken into custody, but Hansen made a bee-line for Park avenue and turned toward Second street, with Saffron following closely at his heels. Near the railroad bridge the copper overtook his quarry and a scuffle followed. After some wrestling in the mud and water the trouble maker was finally subdued and lodged in a cell. He will be arraigned tomorrow morning for hearing.

GERMANS ADMIT LOSS OF WARSHIP

Berlin Hears That a British Cruiser Went Down in Naval Engagement.

FOUR HOURS' BATTLE

Great Britain Wild With Joy Over Reported Victory in North Sea—Bluecher With 700 Germans Said to Have Been Lost.

Paris, Jan. 25.—The French War Office gave out the following statement today:

"In Belgium we advanced slightly to the east of St. Georges yesterday. On the rest of the front there was an artillery duel from the Lys to the Oise. Ther was an intermittent cannonade on the Aisne front. There is nothing to report except at Berry Au Bac, where a counter attack by the enemy was repulsed yesterday morning. The trenches in dispute remaining in our possession. In Champagne we demolished numerous earthworks and German shelters. In the Argonne to the forest of La Grurie a very sharp rifle fire was stopped by the effective fire of our batteries. On the Meuse destruction of the bridges at St. Mihiel by our artillery has been achieved. In Lorraine at Ember Ment we surprised a Bavarian detachment and took some prisoners. In the Vosges and in Alsace a thick fog prevails."

Berlin, Jan. 25.—German war statement today is as follows:

"In the western theatre January 23 passed generally without special incidents. Two French attacks were repulsed in the forest of Argonne without difficulty. We made progress in Vosges mountains on the summit of Harimanns Weilerkoft, northeast of Steinbach, taking 500 French mountain chassuers prisoners. No changes took place in East Prussia. In Northern Poland our attacks on the branch of the River Sucha at Borzimow were successful. The enemy's attacks were repulsed with heavy losses to the Russians. Russian attacks in the region to the northwest of Pooczno, Southern Poland, failed."

London, Jan. 25.—The South African rebels advanced yesterday against Upington, Beechuanaland and were repulsed, says a despatch from Pretoria to a news agency. Out of a force of more than a thousand they lost 12 dead, 23 wounded and 96 prisoners. The Union force lost three killed.

A despatch from Berlin says that an official announcement made there today with regard to the naval battle in the North Sea yesterday, says that during the advance of the German cruisers the vessels became engaged with a British detachment. The German statement says that the British discontinued the engagement after three hours at a point seventy miles northwest of Heligoland and retreated. It concludes, according to the information available, one British battle cruiser and one of our armored cruisers, the Bluecher, were sunk. All the other German ships returned to port.

The Admiralty's statement telling of the British victory says:

"Early yesterday morning the British patrolling squadron of battle cruisers and light cruisers under Vice Admiral Beatty with a destroyer flotilla under Commodore Tyrwhitt sighted four German battle cruisers, several light cruisers and a number of destroyers steering westward and apparently making for the English coast.

"The enemy made for home at high speed. They were at once pursued and about 9:30 a. m. the action was joined between the battle cruisers Lion, Tiger, Princess Royal, New Zealand and Indomitable on the one hand and the Derflinger, Seydlitz, Moltke and Bluecher on the other. A well contested running fight ensued.

"Shortly after 1 o'clock the Bluecher, which previously had fallen out of line, capsized and sank.

"Vice Admiral Beatty reports that two of the Germans battle cruisers were seriously damaged. They were, however, able to continue their flight and reached an area where the dangers from German submarines and mines prevented further pursuit.

"No British ships were lost. Our casualties in personnel are at present reported to be slight, the Lion, which led the line, having only eleven wounded and none killed.

"One hundred and twenty-three survivors were rescued from the Bluecher's crew of 885. It is possible that others were saved by some of our destroyers.

"No report of any destroyer or light cruiser fighting has yet been received by the Admiralty, though some has apparently taken place.

"The Admiralty has expressed its

LEAVES ON BUSINESS TRIP.

Edward Maurer, Jr., of Madison avenue, left last evening on the 9 o'clock train from the Grand Central station, New York, for Buffalo, N. Y. on a business trip for the importing and exporting house of Edward Maurer & Company. Mr. Maurer will be gone a week or ten days. From Buffalo, Mr. Maurer's trip will extend as far West as Detroit, Mich.

Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Victorson, of First street, entertained William Ashur and Meyer Mihalowitz, of New York, over the week-end.

MRS. SNYDER'S CONDITION.

Mrs. William H. Snyder, of Penfield place, who has been suffering with rheumatism and the grip superinduced, it is believed, by a fall sustained a month or so ago while in the act of boarding a trolley car, does not show the improvement that her family and many friends would like to note.

DANCE WELL ATTENDED.

Forty couple attended the regular Saturday evening dance conducted by Charles Cregar, of Plainfield, in the local theatre. A number of the old-fashioned dances were indulged in. The feature of the evening was the Virginia reel led by Sigurd Sbastin Nicolaysen.

Marshal and Mrs. Ernest Kepler entertained Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Porst, of Westfield, yesterday.

Mrs. William Sweeney and family, of Center street, have returned from Phoenixville, Pa., where they spent six weeks with relatives.

George Vliet, of Jersey City, who formerly lived here, dropped into town Saturday afternoon.

Mrs. C. D. Gooch, of Fourth street, spent Saturday in New York.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Dilts, of Second street, have been entertaining Miss M. A. Wiggins, of Kearny.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Meyers, of Washington avenue, spent yesterday in New York.

William Connolly, of Glen Gardner, a former resident of this place, was a visitor in the borough yesterday.

Miss Sarah Hill, of Madison avenue, has returned from Jersey City, where she spent a week visiting her brother, Augustus Hill.

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Hamley, of Washington avenue, spent the week-end at Bartley, the guests of Mr. Hamley's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Hamley.

Mrs. M. Brady, sister of Albert J Meyers, of Washington avenue, has returned from New York, where she spent three days.

RETURNS FROM INDIANA.

Paul Whitford, son of Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Whitford has returned from Angola, Indiana, where he has been for the past eighteen months or so. While at Angola, Mr. Whitford attended the Tri-State College for Civil Engineers, and later acted as inspecting engineer of a sewerage system that was being installed in the town.

An adjourned meeting of the Mayor and Common Council will be held in the Borough Hall this evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Finley Lewis, of North avenue, entertained Mr. and Mrs. Augustus Hill and daughters, of Jersey City, over the week-end.

William Victorson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Victorson, of First street, visited his sister, Mrs. Julius Hackel, of New York, yesterday.

MISS WICKHAM SURPPRISED.

Miss Virginia Wickham, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Wickham, of Front street, was tendered a surprise party at her home on Friday evening. The party was arranged by Miss Viola Bowlby and Miss Lila Stites. The surprise was a complete one. Special features of the evening's program, which consisted of games, music, singing and dancing, were piano selections by Adam Dealaman and Miss Helen Davenport; violin solos by Messrs. Ritterbusch and Gangloff, and singing by Maxwell Forbes, of New York, and Clark Ramsey. Refreshments were served at a late hour. Those present were the Misses Viola Bowlby, Lila Stites, Mae Hughes, Helen Davenport, Winifred Schenck, Sadie Kuntz, Hazel Watson, Luella Stryker, Belle Stites and Jessie Stites, and the Messrs. Harry Fuchs, Adam Dealaman, Maxwell Forbes, William Gangloff, Richmond Ritterbusch, Allen Frederick, Leslie Bowlby, Kenneth Dealaman, DeWitt Swackhamer and Russell Longfellow Brakley.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward J. Dusel, of Walnut street, entertained Mrs. Juan Babcock, wife of Councilman Babcock, of Plainfield, and family, yesterday. Mr. Babcock is sojourning in Cuba for his health.

Edward J. Quinn, of New York, who formerly lived on Prospect avenue, was a week-end visitor in the borough. Mr. Quinn is seriously considering opening a pool-room and bowling alley on North avenue.

PARENT-TEACHER MEETING.

The monthly meeting of the Parent-Teacher Association will be held in the Lincoln School at 2:30 tomorrow afternoon. The meeting promises to be a very interesting one inasmuch as the various members will relate their experiences in making money for the work of the association.

CASPER FUCHS SURPRISED.

Casper Fuchs, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Fuchs, of Greenbrook road, was given a surprise party in honor of his twenty-first birthday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Dilts, on Second street, Saturday evening. The surprise was arranged by Mr. Fuchs' mother, Mr. and Mrs. Dilts and C. L. Wahl, Jr. The evening was passed with games, music and dancing. At a late hour a sumptuous supper was served. In the center of the table, laden with bounties, was a huge birthday cake with twenty-one candles. As Mr. Fuchs was about to cut the cake he made a short speech in which he thanked every one present for honoring him. Among those present were Miss Lucy Tynan, Miss Ethel Schenck, Miss M. A. Wiggins, Miss Nellie Wahl, Miss Florence Courtney, Mrs. John Fuchs, George Baldwin, of Scotch Plains; Carl Fuchs, Peter Benson, George Clark, C. L. Wahl, Jr., E. Stites, Casper Herres, Raymond Tynan, Francis Herres, Gibson Fairbairn, Francis Fuchs and Russell Stites.

CANDIDATES FOR POSTMASTER.

G. Sumner Smith, of Grove street, a prominent Democrat, is having a petition circulated among the citizens for the signatures of those who would like to see him secure the postmastership upon the expiration of Postmaster Garretson's term the first of the year. The names of the others who have thus far publicly announced that they are candidates for the office are: Democratic Committeeman Willard N. Apgar, former Mayor William Wyckoff, Assessor J. H. L. Peters and Real Estate Agent Charles E. Tinsman. In addition, Dame Rumor has it that Treasurer Michael T. Moynihan, of the Dunellen Coal and Supply Company, and former Mayor Harry Swackhamer, are working quietly for the appointment. It is also said that Editor George W. Day, of the Weekly Call, would not be adverse to accepting the appointment if it should happen to come his way.

FOR BENEFIT OF BOY SCOUTS.

The cake sale held in the hardware store of Smalley Brothers on Saturday, for the benefit of Troop 2, of the local organization of Boy Scouts, was a great success. Everything was donated and the money, $29.50 in all, which was taken in was clear profit. The sale was in charge of Mrs. E. J. Dusel, Mrs. E. B. Latham and Mrs. Rene P. F. von Minden. The sales tables were arranged in the front of the store and the display of chocolate, lemon-layer, cocoanut and various other makes of cake baked by the good housewives of the borough, which greeted all whom entered the store was sufficient to excite the envy of an epicurean. In addition to the numerous cake there were a few Parkerhouse rolls, biscuits and crullers and also a mince pie and a loaf of bread. The pie and loaf of bread attracted considerable attention on account of their unusual size. The pie, which was made by Mrs. E. L. Field, weighed five pounds. The loaf of bread, which was braided to add to its attractiveness, weighed five and a half pounds. It was made by Mrs. Oscar Victorson, of First street.

FRESH TOMATOES IN JANUARY.

Mr. and Mrs. Alvah Gray, of Washington avenue, have been enjoying tomatoes picked off their vines. The vines of which the tomatoes were picked were not out of doors, but down in the cellar of the home at the time. There were taken out of the garden by Mrs. Gray just before the arrival of the first heavy frost. On them at the time were green tomatoes about the size of walnuts. The vines with soil clinging to their roots were taken by Mrs. Gray into the cellar and covered over with blankets. The tomatoes gradually grew to almost normal size and then ripened. When they were picked they were a deep red of a solid texture. The only difference between them and tomatoes picked off the vines in the summer were that they were not quite so juicy.

CONDITION OF MR. APGAR.

A report received from Muhlenberg Hospital, today, said that J. Newton Apgar was doing very well.

RECORDER CAMPBELL BETTER.

Recorder David S. Campbell has been showing rapid and steady improvement for the past couple of days. He confidently expects to be able to return to his duties in the office of the Dunellen Lumber and Stone Company in a day or so.

The monthly meeting of the board of stewards of the Methodist Episcopal church will be held this evening at the home of Firman H. Gies, on Front street.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Apgar, of Elizabeth, spent yesterday in the borough the guest of Mr. Apgar's mother, Mrs. Martha Apgar, of Front street. They were accompanied home by their daughter, Grace, who spent the past week with her grandmother.

The Epworth League of the Methodist Episcopal church are planning to give a play called "Country Folks" some time during March.

Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Fuller, of Third street, entertained relatives from out of town over the week-end.

Miss Ethel Jones, of Westfield, spent the week-end at the home of Mrs. Elizabeth Field, on Lincoln avenue.

G. Sumner Smith, of Grove street, is spending a couple of days in Washington on business.

Contractor H. B. Eckert is contemplating breaking ground for another house on Third street.

FIND STOLEN WHEEL.

The wheel belonging to Miss Jessie Skolik which was stolen on Wednesday night, has been found. Miss Skolik had been calling on a servant girl in the residence of Enoch Hardingham and the two decided to take a walk down town. The wheel was left standing in the rear of the house. When they came back it was gone. The party that took the wheel either took it as a joke or became scared when they realized the nature of their act because the wheel was found the night after it was appropriated in almost the identical spot from which it was taken.

Watchung.

Rev. Daniel A. McNeill, of Princeton, conducted the services at the Mary E. Wilson Memorial Union church, yesterday.

A lecture and stereopticon pictures on "New York the Great Gate for Immigration," will be given this evening in Wilson chapel by Martin A. Korff. A silver offering will be taken.

Joseph W. Gavett, of Valley road, will be the leader at the prayer meeting in Wilson chapel Friday evening.

The Pleasant Word Workers will hold its regular monthly meeting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Winans, in North Plainfield, tomorrow evening.

Miss Gladys Sullivan has returned to her home, after a short stay in New York and Brooklyn.

Joseph Poggio, of Rose Hill Farms, who is in Muhlenberg Hospital, where he has been operated upon for mastoiditis, is improving.

The Misses Helen and Daisy M. Schmidt have returned to their home, after spending the week-end with their sister, Miss Elsie F. Schmidt, at the Trenton Normal School.

Mr. and Mrs. Leonce A. Texier and daughter, of Plainfield, spent Sunday with relatives here.

Bound Brook.

Mrs. Helen Walters and daughters Mamie and Helen, have gone to New York city for the winter.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred V. L. Voorhees of South Bound Brook, have issued invitations for the celebration of their golden wedding anniversary of February 1.

The Bound Brook Motorcycle Club will run its annual mid-winter dance on Friday night, January 29. The committee is William H. Haelig Frank L. Stangle and Abraham Karno.

William Getz has removed from Martinsville to the Benjamin Clark house on East Second street.

'Plains & Fanwood.

During the past week, following the meeting of the Fanwood Township Sunday-school Association on Monday evening, the idea of conducting a religious canvass in the borough and township has developed, and the executive committee of the Fanwood Township Sunday-school Association will probably hold a meeting within the next week in order to discuss the project. The Rev. J. Madison Hare, pastor of the Baptist church, has found a large number of blanks in a store-room of the parsonage, which calls to mind the idea that was started by the Rev. Franklin K. Mathiews shortly before he left the local church, and could be utilized in the campaign if the present plan materializes, which seems likely. Plenty of workers could be found from the churches who are well known by the different residents, that would do the canvassing.

The members of the Tuesday Afternoon Literary Club will meet for a regular afternoon's discussion tomorrow.

The "Guard" of the Jr. O. U. A. M is planning for a "Lunch Box Social" to be held in Excelsior Hall on the evening of February 17.

Plans are being made for a musical evening to be held in the Baptist church on Tuesday evening, February 16. Included in the entertainment will be numbers featuring excellent talent from New York and arrangements are being made for high class music.

Despite the bad weather the cake and pie sale conducted by the Altar Guild, of the Episcopal church, at the home of Mrs. Frederick Sherwood, on Saturday afternoon, netted a considerable sum for the benefit of the church. During the afternoon the members of the young girls class of the church served tea.

Mr. and Mrs. George Estelle have returned to their home in Brooklyn, after visiting Mrs. Estele's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Ford, of Montague avenue.

The Rev. Oscar S. Michaels and H. P. Robinson are in Trenton today as representatives of the local Episcopal church at the consecration of Bishop Matthews, which takes place in that city today.

The women of the Baptist church will conduct an apron and necktie social in that edifice this evening, to which all are welcome.

The services at the St. John's (colored) Baptist church, in the "Big Woods" section, are in charge of the Rev. G. W. Hamlet, every Sunday.

The members of the Sunshine Club are planning to hold another dance in the Fanwood firehouse in the near future. The previous ones have all been successful and at least one a month will be held during the remainder of the winter.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Ritter, of New Brunswick, spent the week-end with Mr. Ritter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ritter, of South avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. William Terry have returned to their home in the township, after spending the past two months in New York.

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Martin spent yesterday with relatives at Murray Hill.

George Spearn has returned from spending several days at Deal Beach.

Mrs. Louis J. Garda, of North avenue, is visiting near Cortlandt, N. Y.

Mid-year examinations are scheduled to start next week in the local schools.

SERVICES FOR SISTER HELD IN MT. ST. MARY'S CHAPEL

The funeral service for Sister Mary Florence, one of the Sisters of Mercy stationed at St. Mary's College, was held this morning in the college chapel. A large number of relatives and friends, many of whom came from Philadelphia, where she formerly lived, attended the services, which were unusually impressive.

The Rev. Father Baldwin, chaplain of the college, was in charge of the ceremonies and he was assisted by Father Dunphy, of Dunellen, as deacon, and Father Hart, of St. Joseph's church, as sub-deacon. The priests, seated in the sanctuary included Father Coghlan, of Our Lady of Mercy Parish, Philadelphia; Father O'Reilly, of the Jesuit Order in Philadelphia, and Father B. M. Bohan, of St. Mary's church.

Father Hart delivered the eulogistic remarks on the death of Sister Mary Florence, speaking in a touching manner of her life and high ideals exemplified during her connection with the Sisters of Mercy.

The bearers included Thomas Phelan, R. A. Boice, Cormack McDonough, Peter McDonough, David T. Kenney and John McCullough. Burial was made in St. Mary's cemetery.

Y. M. C. A. BOYS HELD PARTY SATURDAY NIGHT

The members of the Indian League, of the Y. M. C. A., held an informal social in the boys' rooms Saturday night, which was attended by fifty-three boys. The boys all gathered around an open fire-place and listened attentively to a camp story told by Secretary Edward Glaentzer. Refreshments were served during the evening.

After the party all the boys adjourned to the gym and cheered the association team on to a victory over the New Brunswick team. They gave all of the Y. M. C. A. yells. The association is planning to hold more of these socials in the future, which have already proved very popular.

PLANNING TO COMMEMORATE TWENTY-THIRD ANNIVERSARY

Tentative arrangements for the twenty third anniversary of the founding of the Grace M. E. church have been made and the occasion will be celebrated with a fitting program during the week of February 14-21 inclusive. Rev. Herbert Randolph, now of Montclair, will open the week of service by delivering a sermon in the church Sunday night, February 14. He was one of the clergymen who officiated at the inaugural services in the borough church and several others who were present at that time are also expected to assist during the anniversary week in the program planned.

The program proposed is of a historical nature and will include daily features in which local clergymen will have an active part.

RECREATION NOTES

The Symphony Orchestra, directed by S. Frederick Smith, meet this evening at the Franklin School.

The Needlecraft and Dressmaking Club will meet this evening at the Stillman School. New members will be most welcome.

The Italian Club will meet this evening at the Lincoln School. There will be a business meeting so all members are urged to be present.

The Choral Society will meet tomorrow evening at the Franklin School.

The Men's Gymnasium and Swimming Class will meet tomorrow evening at the High School.

The Stillman School will be opened tomorrow evening for the colored people. There is a gymnasium class for the girls. The Men's Club will hold a debate.

INAUGURATION NIGHT.

Members of Plainfield Council, No. 711, Royal Arcanum, will celebrate Inaugural Night in the local headquarters Thursday night.

WAR NEWS

satisfaction to Vice Admiral Beatty."

Amsterdam, Jan. 25.—The Handelsblad states that the bombs dropped by British airmen on Essen destroyed an automobile workshop. Four hundred cars, partly or entirely constructed, were destroyed by fire, as was a quantity of benzine and 300 war automobiles.

The Tageblatt declares that the statistics of the German losses compiled and published by France, Russia and England are absurd. Whereas Russia claims 114 German officers and 134,700 men have been made prisoners in the eastern theatre, it is officially declared, says the Tageblatt, that the German losses in East Prussia, Poland and Galicia have been scarcely 15 per cent. of this number.

Petrograd, Jan. 25.—The entire aeroplane fleet of the Turks, which was being sent to Trebizond for use against the Russians in the Caucasus, was destroyed when the Russian Black Sea fleet sank the steamer Georgius off Sinour. The steamer carried 16 aircraft.

Washington, Jan. 25.—Vigorous protest has been made by Count Von Bernstorff, the German ambassador, against the sale of hydro aeroplanes by the Curtiss Company to the Allies. The protest, it was announced at the German Embassy, would be filed with the State Department later in the day. American made flying machines have been taking a notable part in the fighting in the war zone, it is said.

Emphatic denial was made by Secretary Daniels today that the British cruisers Essex and Suffolk had sought to hold up the battleship Texas off New York recently. The charge was made by John DeVoy, editor of a New York Irish-American newspaper.

TO INSTALL OFFICERS.

The officers-elect of the Gesang and Turn Verein will be installed Wednesday night, following which the members will have a "spread" and general good time. Arrangements are complete for the masquerade ball to be held on Lincoln's Birthday night and another interesting event planned is "Knockers' Night," to be held Washington's Birthday evening.

MASONIC LADIES' NIGHT.

Anchor Lodge, No. 149, F. and A. M., has issued invitations for its annual "ladies' night" entertainment and dance. It will be held in the Plainfield High School Auditorium on Friday, February 5, and the usual excellent program will be provided by the committee.

WILL ATTEND FUNERAL.

The members of the Gesang and Turn Verein will meet at Saengerbund Hall at 7 o'clock tonight, from which place they will proceed to the late home of John W. Dent, on East Fifth street, to attend the funeral of the latter.

ZUDORA

Eighth Episode Shown at Proctor's January 27, 1915.
"THE MYSTERY OF THE CHANG CASE."

In this chapter of Zudora, the affairs of that sorely beset heiress take a sudden startling turn. Grown suspicious of her uncle, Hassam Ali, and impatient of the delays that no has thrown in the way of her marriage to John Storm, of a sudden Zudora determines to cut the Gordian knot by eloping with the man of her choice. Their plans are complete and the girl is in her room waiting for the time when Storm will call for her to take her away from the mysterious Hassam Ali, when an event occurs which changes everything.

Hassam Ali has made the acquaintance of a certain Mr. Chang, a Chinese hypnotist and mystic of unusual powers. Seeing him place a boy in a condition in which the lad is alternately abnormally bright or stupid, at the will of the celestial, Zudora's uncle determines to use him as a tool in putting his niece out of the way and in gaining possession of the fabulously rich Zudora mine. Associated with Chang is Madame du Val, a strikingly handsome woman of shady reputation, and at Hassam Ali's invitation the precious pair come to his house, arriving just at the time when the elopement plans are complete.

Hassam Ali, and Chang go to a room adjoining Zudora's and there the strange hypnotic power of the latter is exerted. Soon Zudora sinks under it, yielding obedient to the will of the hypnotist, just as Storm arrives at the house in an automobile, ready to speed away with the girl he loves. Storm sees her at the window, where she has agreed to wait for him, but to his consternation she gives him no sign of recognition. Instead, she holds up a Japanese doll, as if in derision. As he waits in puzzled astonishment, Zudora disappears from her place at the window and the next moment Chang comes down the steps with Madame du Val, soon afterward being followed by Hassam Ali and Zudora. Before Storm can interfere the party are whisked away in their automobile.

Storm follows them and sees them enter a great house, the home of Chang and Madame du Val. Realizing that his fiancee is in serious danger, he goes to seek the aid of the police, while within the house Zudora is being placed in a curiously designed alcove which has a false wall, that can be slid in front of it at will. While she remains there Hassam Ali dons garments similar to those worn by Chang, disguising himself to resemble the celestial in other respects also. He has just rejoined Chang and Madame du Val, when Storm and a squad of detectives force their way into the house. Chang leaps into the alcove and pulls the lever that closes the wall.

When the police enter they find only the disguised Hassam Ali and Madame du Val chatting and laughing together. They make a thorough search of the house, but without finding anything suspicious and are just about to depart, when suddenly a girl's voice rings out, which Storm recognizes as that of his sweetheart. Mystified, but assured now that they have made no mistake, Storm rushes at the disguised Hassam Ali, who calls for assistance. In the meantime the real Chang hidden behind the false wall of the alcove, is overpowering Zudora. After a desperate struggle he succeeds in pinioning her arms behind her, but a fresh search of the house discloses nothing to the puzzled detectives and with Storm, they are compelled to leave without locating Zudora's prison.

A hurried consultation between Hassam Ali and Chang, after the departure of Storm and the police leads to a decision to send Zudora away in the custody of Madame du Val. Meanwhile Storm, assured that his sweetheart is somewhere in the house, returns with the detectives, and a hand to hand struggle follows. Zudora, her hands bound behind her, thrusts them under a magnifying glass, which stands on a table in the alcove, and the sun's rays being concentrated upon her bonds soon burn them off. Hearing the struggle in the room outside, she pounds madly upon the wall and Storm, hearing the sounds, with the aid of the detectives, batters down the wall and rescues her.

Hassam Ali, however, arch criminal of all, escapes, leaving Chang and Madame du Val to the tender mercies of the police. As for Storm, he is too well content to have saved Zudora, to give heed to aught else.

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

The very best to be had in the motion picture field will be featured at Proctor's through the present week. Something new every day and the "something" the people want is one of the slogans of the popular playhouse. This afternoon and tonight, and also tomorrow afternoon and night, the big photo-play will be Owen Davie's masterpiece, "The Wishing Ring," with Marguerite Clark and a company of selected players. Wednesday's feature will be the eighth installment of "Zuodra," the absorbing and thrilling serial that is growing in favor each succeeding week. The second episode of "Runaway June," which was pronounced a "comer," when presented for the first time last week, will be displayed Thursday afternoon and night, and the fouth episode, "The Exploits of Elaine," is scheduled for Friday. In addition to these features, the very latest Keystone comedies, Pathe Weeklies, and other high class films are shown each day. To the photo-play portion of the program, add five acts of superior vaudeville acts, and you will understand why Proctor's bill always pleases the people.

MID-YEAR EXAMS.

The mid-year examinations of the North Plainfield High School will begin tomorrow afternoon when the "exams" of the first period will be held. They will cover the remainder of the week. A large number of the pupils have been either wholly or partially exempt from the tests because of high montaly averages obtained during the past months, which kept them above eighty-five per cent. in their studies.

Miss Berince Attner, who was instructor of Latin in the borough High School last year, was the week-end guest of Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Smalley, of Greenbrook road. Miss Attner is now connected with the East Orange School.

PRESBYTERIAN MEN WILL GATHER HERE

First of Three Conferences at Crescent Avenue Church Tonight.

Men of the Presbyterian churches in Elizabeth have arranged to come to Plainfield this evening to attend the first of the three conferences arranged by the Presbytery of Elizabeth, through its committee on evangelism, of which the Rev. C. G. Reynolds, D. D., of Elizabeth, is chairman. The trip will be made by auto, and it is expected that twelve machines will be in line.

The Elizabeth delegation is only one of many that will attend this important meeting here. Other auto parties will come from different sections of the presbytery. An Elizabeth pastor, the Rev. Louis B. Crane, will be in charge of the meeting; which is to be held in the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, and which will be for the men of the churches. Mr. Crane will be assisted by Eugene O. Winans, of Elizabeth, who will lead the singing.

One of the speakers will be the Rev. Paul Stratton, of the Dayspring Presbyterian church, in Yonkers, N. Y., a man of strong personality and of eloquence. Mr. Stratton is chairman of the committtee on evangelism in the Presbytery of Westchester. The other addresses will be given by Rev. Dr. John R. Davies, for many years one of the foremost preachers in New York city, and now the pastor of the Bethlehem Presbyterian church, Philadelphia.

The other meetings of the series will be held on Tuesday evening—one in the Westminster church, Elizabeth, and the other at Basking Ridge. For the Elizabeth meeting Dr. Reynolds and E. D. Smith will be in charge, the speakers being Rev. Dr. G. G. Mahy and J. L. Twaddell, head usher in the Billy Sunday meetings in Philadelphia. The Basking Ridge meeting will be in charge of Rev. Dr. Charles E. Herring and F. H. Andrews, of Plainfield. The speaker will be John F. Carson, of New York.

Four Days of Courtesy

There are certain institutions which have established their greatness in the public mind, and which therefore require no elaborate description to do them justice.

One such institution is the Wanamaker February Sale of Furniture, originated by this store many years ago.

Each February the homemakers of America find in this Sale standard furniture, at less than all-the-year standard prices.

Each February homemakers have patronized this Sale in larger and larger numbers.

Each February manufacturers of good furniture have co-operated with the Store to make the Sale better and better; with the result that today the John Wanamaker Store has first refusal of practically all the large lots and over-lots of good furniture, which for various trade reasons the market offers at a discount.

The sale will open Monday, February 1, with nearly a million dollars' worth of guaranteed furniture for all rooms, at an average of one-quarter below our regular prices.

Wednesday of this week, and the three days following, are set apart as four days of courtesy on which the public may inspect this furniture, placing advance orders if desired, the transactions to date from February 1.

NEEDED IN PLAINFIELD.

Of interest to Plainfielders who believe that the city should take over the collection of garbage and ashes, is a statement in a recent issue of the Municipal Journal, describing the experience of the city of Passaic with a municipal plant for this work. Passaic now has 68,000 population, so it is reasonable to assume that figures which are presented as to the cost of this work there, where garbage and ashes are taken from the curb, would more than pay for collection from the rear of the houses in Plainfield, as our population is less than half of that city.

Passaic took over the collection as municipal work in 1910, it having been done prior to that time by a private concern under contract, which is better than the plan now used in this city. The work is under the supervision of the street department. During the first year of city collection, under the Mayor and Council, the total cost was $22,000; the population then being 58,000. In 1911 the commission form of government was adopted. Under it the cost of collecting ashes and garbage was reduced to $13,500 for 1911-1912, a decrease in one year of $8,500, although the population was increased by 2,000. During the year of 1912-1913 the cost was $14,500, and for the year of 1914-1915 an appropriation of $16,000 was allowed the Department of Streets and Public Improvements for the collection of ashes and garbage. This is a decrease of $6,000 from 1910-1911, while the population increased 10,000.

Under the old method of contracting for the removal of ashes and garbage, the city was unevenly divided into three sections, regardless of population and other conditions which should receive consideration. Each section was collection twice a week. This made collections in the more thickly populated sections hard on both men and horses, inconvenienced the inhabitants an endangered health. Under the present method the city has been rearranged into sections according to the population of each. In the business section and the thickly settled sections of the city collections are made every day.

In placing the refuse on the streets for collections the ashes are not separated from the garbage. This question was given careful consideration, but it was difficult to get the people, especially in the poorer sections, to separate them, so this was abandoned. When the mixed ashes and garbage is delivered to the dumps the waste paper, rags, old rubber shoes, bottles, etc., are picked out. The privilege of picking is given to a concern that deals in junk, etc. After all the waste is picked out the refuse is spread and each day is covered with sand, dirt or clay so as to prevent the spreading of disease germs and unpleasant odors.

Arthur Reid, superintendent of streets in Passaic, is responsible for the facts here presented, and he says that under the present system there are practically no complaints of drivers being impudent to residents, mistreating horses, breaking receptacles, etc., as was the case when the work was done under contract. He also says that comparing the two systems the citizens of Passaic agree that collection by city forces gives much more satisfaction than when done by contract. With such an enlightening example, showing how easy it is to do well, what is not well done in this city now, what more can be said in favor of making the change in Plainfield? If we could have collection from basements or the rear of the house at a municipal cost of $16,000 it would work an economy for every householder.

The proposition made to reduce the salary of the Governor of New Jersey from $10,000 to $9,500, as made in the bill which generally reduces the pay of State officials, is about as picayune and ridiculous an effort to play to the galleries as has been attempted in years. The Governor of New Jersey is worth every dollar that is paid to him and more, and the taking away of $500 is inexcusable.

BISHOP CONSECRATED

ent rector, has seen several similar ceremonies. It was in this church that Bishop Scarborough was consecrated February 2, 1875. More than 400 invitations were issued for the consecration service.

Right Rev. Dr. Boyd Vincent, of the Diocese of Southern Ohio, who fifteen years ago ordained Dr. Matthews into the deaconate and a year later officiated at his ordination as priest, presided. He was assisted by Bishops William A. Leonard, of the Diocese of Ohio, and Arthur L. Williams, of the Diocese of Nebraska. The presentors were Right Rev. Drs. Joseph M. Francis, of the Diocese of Indianapolis, and Philip Mercer Rhinelander, of the Diocese of Pennsylvania.

The consecration sermon was preached by Right Rev. Dr. John N. McCormick, of the Diocese of Western Michigan. Right Rev. Dr. Frederick J. Kinsman, of the Diocese of Delaware, sang the litany. The attending presbyters were fellow-priests of Dr. Matthews in the Diocese of Minnesota, where he was dean of the Cathedral of Our Merciful Saviour. They are: Rev. Dr. Irving P. Johnson, president of the standing committee of the Minnesota Diocese, and Rev. F. F. Kramer, of Fairbault.

Bishop-elect Matthews was chosen to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Bishop Scarborough, at a special convention held in Trenton last October. He was born in Glendale, O., December 25, 1866, graduated from Princeton University, 1887, and from General Theological Seminary, 1890.

For five years he was connected with the Associate Mission of St. John and St. Paul, Omaha, was rector of St. Luke's church, Cincinnati, 1896-1904; dean of St. Paul's Cathedral, Cincinnati, 1904-1913, relinquishing that charge to accept a similar office in the Cathedral at Faribault.

Bishop Matthews plans to icse no time in setting about his episcopal labors. Already he has announced a list of visitations and appointments covering practically every day from Tuesday night to April 1. His first official act will be to preside over the convocation of New Brunswick, which meets tomorrow at Elizabeth.

Clerical and lay delegates representing the parishes comprising the diocese of Newark will assemble in convention at Trinity church, Newark, tomorrow morning and proceed with the election of a suffragan-bishop. The convention will be inaugurated with the celebration of the holy communion at which Bishop Lines will officiate at 9:15 o'clock. Immediately following the business session will be taken up.

Interest in the approaching meeting centres not only in the probable choice of the delegates but whether they will select a man from within or without the diocese. Notwithstanding the fact that five of the six suffragan bishops now serving in this country were elevated in the diocese where they had previously served in parochial life, sentiment in the local diocese seems now to be in favor of taking an outside man.

FIRE IN ADELBERG STORE

quarters of an hour after the fire-fighters arrived it was impossible to work one's way into the Adelberg store or cellar.

The glass grating on the sidewalk was chopped away and this afforded the men an opportunity to pour tons of water into the cellar, drowning out the flames. The able handling of the situation by Chief Doane and his men kept the blaze confined to the cellar and first floor, but the smoke worked itself up through the ceilings and into a clothing store next door to the Adelberg building.

Shortly after the firemen started work an explosion of smoke occurred, closely followed by a second one. These "back drafts" drove the firemen to the street gasping for breath. While the fire was it its heighth, Mr. Adelberg, who had left the store but an hour before, returned, and his first thought was to rescue his books. Contrary to his usual custom the merchant had left all of his business accounts lying open on a desk in the store and he made frantic efforts to pass the fire line and get into the office, little realizing that he would have been overcome by smoke long before he could reach the books.

After the fumes had partially cleared away, Roundsman Andrew Saffron went into the place and brought the books out. In going into the building for a man who was making a nuisance of himself and hindering the work of the firemen Patrolman John Hendershot fell through a glass grating and lacerated his hand. His escape from more serious injury was miraculous inasmuch as the spot where he fell was directly over the heart of the flames and but for the fact that he was caught by three of the firemen he would have been badly injured.

Soon after the second alarm was sounded Chief of Police Kiely and a squad of bluecoats were on the scene and the large crowd that swarmed to the scene was kept out of the danger zone by means of firelines stretched from one side of the street to the other.

In an interview with a Plainfield Daily Press reporter this morning, Fire Chief Doane said that he was not fully satisfied as to the cause of the fire, but intended to make a thorough investigation before letting the matter rest. When it was suggested that the blaze might possibly have had an incendiary origin the Chief was profound in his denials of this theory.

In a statement Chief Doane said: "Mr. Adelberg had an air-tight vault, twelve by sixteen feet, in the cellar, which he used for the storage of furs and gowns. The interior of this compartment was lined with tarpaper and a fresh supply of camphor or formaldehyde had recently been put into it to keep moths out. The fumes from either one of these substances are highly explosive and when confined are likely to cause trouble when the volume becomes sufficient. The three explosions of smoke which the firemen encountered were probably caused by the blowing off of these fumes and the fire probably had its origin from that source."

Soon after the firemen started to work a woman rushed down the stairs leading from the second floor in a frantic state of mind. She was only scantily clad and between gasps made it known that her two small children were sleeping in the smoke-filled rooms.

Chief Doane dispatched a squad of men, including Dan Kiederling, Jim McDonough and Guy Thomas, to the rooms and they brought the children to the ground in safety.

Mr. Adelberg says he carried only a ten per cent. insurance on the place and his personal loss will no doubt be a very heavy one.

Temporary quarters for the clothing business have been established in the second floor of the same building, no damage having been done to that floor by fire or water.
